MARSHALL DEFENDS WAR POLICY

Reds Give Ground All Along Warfront

ROKs Probe Enemy Lines Near Kaesong

U. N. Patrols Again Enter Chunchon

TOKYO, Wednesday, May 9 (AP)—Red forces fell back today all along the Korean warfront.

Hard-fighting South Korean troops pushed them back in the west and east. The Reds withdrew ahead of far-ranging Allied patrols in the center.

Censorship would not permit pinpointing positions of the limited Allied attacks.

Northwest of Seoul, South Koreans cross the Han River from Kimpo peninsula and probed Red lines south of Kaesong. That city is 35 miles northwest of Seoul and within two miles of the 38th parallel.

Another South Korean column drove north from Seoul.

A dispatch from Korean headquarters of the U. S. Eighth Army by AP Correspondent Robert Eunson reported the actions. But mileages were deleted.

The purpose of the push north of Kimpo peninsula was to guard against any Red move to slip down that way and encircle Seoul from the rear.

The Reds fought back against the South Koreans along the Seoul-Munsan road, using mortars, anti-tank guns and automatic weapons.

There were several brisk actions in the sector (five words deleted) northwest of the capital along the road to Munsan, Eunson reported.

"West of the Road, Allied units pushed north and were fighting a battle with North Korean Reds (three words deleted) south of Munsan," he said.

Beyond Uijongbu, 11 miles north of Seoul, Allied engineers cleared a mine field under fire of a Red company hiding in nearby hills.

On the central front, Allied patrols entered Chunchon for the second straight day Tuesday without finding any Reds. Cunchon, a former Red stronghold, is 45 miles northeast of Seoul and eight miles south of the 38th parallel.

"East of this important road junction town, however, an Allied patrol was ambushed and forced to withdraw," Eunson reported.

Around Kapyong, between Chunchon and Seoul, Allied and Red units fought three brief skirmishes.

Stiff fighting was reported in the vicinity of Inje, a town 75 miles northeast of Seoul and four miles north of the 38th parallel.

The enemy lines seemed to be giving on the extreme eastern tip, Eunson said, but holding fairly firm directly east of Inje.

Nearly half the ground lost when the Communists launched their ill-fated April 22 offensive has been regained along the 100-mile wide battlefront.

Crumpled wreckage of 47 cars of a derailed 143-car freight train blocks the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad at New Brunswick, N. J. The long freight jumped the tracks yesterday and piled up in a splintered, tangled mess of wheels, wood and steel. Police said no one was injured.

Moran Is Found Guilty Of Lying To Crime Probe

O'Dwyer's Friend To Be Sentenced Friday

NEW YORK, May 8. (AP)—Democratic Politician James J. Moran, an old friend of ex-Mayor William O'Dwyer, was convicted today of lying to the Kefauver Senate Crime Committee about his relations with a Brooklyn racketeer.

A jury of seven women and five men found him guilty of perjury after deliberating about an hour and a half.

"I have nothing to say," Moran told newsmen angrily after the verdict.

Appeal Is Likely

His attorney said the decision probably will be appealed.

Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey set Friday for sentencing. The maximum penalty is five years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Moran was given his freedom until Friday under the same $25,000 bond he posted originally.

His four-day trial was the first to grow out of the dramatic hearings here last March of the Kefauver committee.

Moran was convicted of lying when he swore to the committee he met Brooklyn Numbers Racketeer Louis Weber no more than half a dozen times during Moran's heyday as a pet of the O'Dwyer administration.

Quick Comedown

The government claimed Moran met Weber more than 100 times, then lied to the Senate committee to help cover up a "monstrous alliance between crime and politics."

It was a quick comedown for the 49-year-old Moran. One of O'Dwyer's last acts last summer before leaving City Hall to become ambassador to Mexico was to give his long-time aide a cushy $15,000 a year lifetime post as city water commissioner.

Moran was ousted from this post after the Kefauver hearings by O'Dwyer's successor, Mayor Vincent Impellitteri.

Panama To Choose

PANAMA, Panama, May 8 (AP)—President Arnulfo Arias announced tonight he would call a national plebiscite tomorrow to permit the people to choose, by voting, between the 1946 constitution he abolished last night and the 1941 charter which he substituted.

The announcement was made by the President in a broadcast from the presidential palace.

Arias' speech climaxed a day of tension, heightened by rumor and counter-rumor.

Mayor D'Alesandro Leads Democrats To New Shutout Victory At Baltimore Polls

BALTIMORE, May 8 (AP)—Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro led Baltimore's Democrats to another shutout victory in the city's election today. A Republican hasn't been elected to a municipal post since 1943.

D'Alesandro was returned to his second four-year term by a two-to-one margin over his closest rival, Republican Joseph L. Carter, close friend of Republican Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin.

Democrat C. Markland Kelly, outgoing president of the City Council who ran for mayor as an independent, was a poor third.

J. Neil McCardell easily won reelection as city comptroller, and Arthur D. Price defeated two others for City Council president.

The vote was heavy, with an estimated 60 per cent of the registered voters—predominately Democrats—going to the polls. The weather was ideal—sunny skies and the temperature in the low 70s.

With all of the 507 polling places reported, D'Alesandro, a former congressman, had 112,934 votes to 61,750 for Carter and 23,327 for Kelly.

Price had 89,181 to 64,279 for Danial E. Klein, Republican, and 24,227 for George Sellmayer, Democrat who ran as an independent. Sellmayer was City Council president from 1943 to 1947.

The vote for city comptroller was McCardell 106,140, Republican Harry D. James 52,404, independent Chester W. Tawney 13,177, and Milton Seif, Progressive, 2,556.

D'Alesandro kept his campaign on strictly local issues, stressing his record as a municipal administrator.

Carter and Kelly, however, injected national issues into the race. Carter had the active support of Gov. McKeldin, who argued that D'Alesandro was only priming himself to run for the U. S. Senate seat now held by Sen. Herbert R. O'Conor (D-Md) in 1952.

Spanish Troops Halt Disorders

PAMPLONA, Spain, May 8 (AP)—Civil guardsmen fired tommy guns into the air tonight to halt demonstrations of strikers in Pamlona.

Many persons was injured by blows from police nightsticks during the sporadic fighting in many parts of the city. The battling climaxed a general strike in protest against the rising cost of living.

(In Madrid, there were reliable reports that troops had been sent to Bilbao in preparation for possible disorders there.)

The strike was still continuing at about 8 o'clock tonight. All theatres, movies, cafes were closed and the transport service was halted.

There was no indication whether it would go on tomorrow in defiance of Civil Governor Luis Vaerlo Bermejo's threat that those still away from their jobs would be fired.

About 30,000 workers are involved in the general walkout. Angry crowds stoned the food ration office earlier in the day.

Civil and armed guards patrolled the streets.

Witnesses said that, contrary to the bloody incidents in Barcelona's general strike last March, the police were careful to fire into the air.

"Mac's" Dogwood "Inspection" Trip Sets Off Rumors

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur went on an inspection tour today—to look over some blossoming dogwood.

His unannunced trip to Connecticut led to a lot of speculation. Some people thought he was house-hunting. Others suggested it was a business trip.

Upon MacArthur's return, however, his aide, Maj. Courtney Whitney, said the ousted Far Eastern commander read about Connecticut's spring dogwood and decided to "inspect it."

"Very lovely," Whitney pronounced it on behalf of MacArthur.

"There's no truth to it at all," said Whitney of a report that MacArthur had leased a 20-room mansion and estate on Contentment Island, off Darien, Conn.

UMW Quits Proposed Manpower Committee

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—John L. Lewis' representative today quit the last remaining government agency in which the United Mine Workers had a seat.

John Owens, UMW secretary treasurer, sent the following telegram to Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson, quitting the proposed manpower advisory committee working with Wilson and Secretary of Labor Tobin:

"The representative of the United Mine Workers has been ignored in selection of all other committees. I cannot see any reason why I should serve on the labor management committee."

Gen. M'Arthur's Plane Flying Back To Japan

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's four-engined personal plane, which he released yesterday for its return to the military services, took off late today for the trip back to Japan.

It had been renamed "Scap" and presumably will go to Gen. Matthew R. Ridgway, MacArthur's successor as supreme commander in the Pacific. It was named "Bataan" for MacArthur's trip home.

Defense Chief Is Convinced Russians Have Atom Bomb

WASHINGTON, May 8. (AP)—Defense Secretary Marshall said today he is convinced the Russains have the atomic bomb.

But whether they have scaled the scientific mountain that stands between "having" the bomb and developing it into a practical weapon of war is another question, he indicated to the Senate's Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees.

The question was raised by Sen. Bridges (R-NH) during Marshall's interrogation on Korea policy. The Secretary's answer was a guarded one, and consequently subject to interpretation.

"They have the bomb, I am quite convinced," Marshall stated. "I couldn't even give you an estimate if I had the information as to when it might be available for use against us.

"I assume it will be a tedious and difficult development because I think in such matters we go much more rapidly than they would, and it's been a long tedious business with us x x x."

U. S. Turns Down Soviet Proposal For Jap Treaty

State Dept. Says USSR Seeks "Double Veto"

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP) — The United States accused Russia today of trying to "stall" preparations for an early Japanese peace treaty and brusquely rejected a Soviet proposal to turn the task over to a Pacific big four.

Moscow advanced the proposal yesterday, and included Communist China along with Russia, the U. S. and Britain as the four powers which should lay down the terms for a World War II settlement with Japan.

The State Department brushed the idea aside with this comment: "It is a mockery to pretend that to negotiate a Japanese peace under these conditions would actually produce peace."

Moscow Seeks "Double Veto"

What Moscow is seeking, the department charged, is a "double veto" by including Communist China among the Big Four.

The State Department made plain that the United States intends to go ahead with moves now in progress with 14 other non-Communist countries to complete the Japanese settlement, possibly this summer.

The Soviet proposal, as it was put forward in this late stage of the negotiations, dimmed the few remaining hopes of American officials that Russia might go along with the settlement and not insist on the "veto" which has blocked peace with Germany and Austria.

Some hopes had been retained even though Russia two months ago broke off, without explanation, the discussions which Ambassador John Foster Dulles had been carrying on at Lake Success with Russia's Jacob Malik.

"Periodic" Proposal

The American statement was read to newsmen by Press Officer Michael J. McDermott shortly after the arrival from Moscow of the note handed yesterday to U. S. Ambassador Alan G. Kirk.

"The Soviet proposal that the Japanese peace treaty be prepared by a council of foreign ministers composed of representatives of the Soviet Union, Communist China, the United Kingdom and the United States is a proposal which the Soviet Union makes periodically whenever it wants to stall the conclusion of a Japanese peace. It has always been rejected and will be again," the statement said.

Super Liner Will Be Launched June 23

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The new luxury liner United States, largest and fastest passenger ship ever built in this country, will be launched on June 23 at Newport News, Va., it was announcd today.

The 51,500-ton ship is scheduled to enter the United States Lines' North Atlantic service in the summer of 1952.

The vessel is 980 feet long, with a speed in excess of 30 knots, and will have accommodations for 2,000 passengers. It will carry a crew of 1,000.

Under the national defense program, the liner is designed for use as a troop carrier in time of emergency. It can be fitted to accommodate 14,000 men, or almost a full division

U. N. Orders Israel, Syria To Cease Fire

Both Sides Accept Council Directive

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., May 8 (AP) — The United Nations Security Council tonight ordered an immediate cease-fire in the fighting along the Syrian-Israeli border.

The vote was 10 to 0, with Russia abstaining.

The problem was complicated, however, by Syrian denials that Syrian troops were involved in the armed clashes. Syria's Faris El Khoury said that although his government was not directly concerned in the fighting it accepted the cease-fire.

Abba S. Eban, Israeli delegate, contended regular Syrian forces were responsible for repeated attacks against Israel. He presented what he called conclusive proof of this—reports that Syrian weapons, clothing and other objects had been found in Israeli territory where the fighting took place.

Israel Promises To Obey

Israel promised to obey the cease-fire order but Eban demanded that the demilitarized zone should not serve as a base for attacks on Israel. "We've lost our taste for unilateral cease-fires," he said.

The Israeli and Syrian representatives charged each other's country with aggression in the fighting that has grown up out of an Israeli attempt to drain Lake Huleh, a swamp area in the Jordan River basin.

Eban and Khoury sat at the council table as invited guests, along with Maj. Gen. William E. Riley, U. S. Marine Corps, who is the U.N. chief of staff for the Palestine truce agreement machinery set up in 1948.

Russia's Jacob Malik explained that he abstained in the newest Palestine peace move because the cease-fire resolution referred to other Security Council resolutions on which Russia had never taken a stand.

Four Nations Sponsor Move

The U. S., Britain, France and Turkey joined in sponsoring the cease-fire resolution. Both Israel and Syria proposed amendments calling for withdrawal of any military or military-like forces in the demilitarized zone.

The council, however, adopted the original resolution and France's Francis Lacoste said it was up to the mixed armistice commission, under Riley, to work out the problem of withdrawing forces and caring for civilians.

Iran Reds Make Seven Demands

TEHRAN, Iran, May 8 (AP) — An emboldened Tudeh (Communist) Party today made seven demands on Premier Mohammed Mossadegh that included expulsion of the 25-man U. S. military mission to Iran.

The other six demands, contained in an open letter to the Premier, were:

1. Legalization of the Tudeh Party, outlawed since the attempted assassination of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi in February, 1949.
2. Recognition of Red China.
3. Rejection of foreign arms aid.
4. Release of political prisoners.
5. An end to martial law in the southern oil fields.
6. Nationalization of the Behrein oil fields, where the American-owned Bahrein Petroleum Company is producing 10,000,000 barrels of oil a year.

Elevator Strike Strands Gotham Office Workers

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—The people who man New York's towering business skyscrapers went on strike today, stranding thousands of office workers high above Manhattan.

With elevators out of service, lunch hour throngs trudged down and back many flights of stairs. Some, however, just sat the whole thing out in their offices.

About 100 office buildings were affected at the height of the walkout. There are about 500 normally tended by the striking unions.

By mid-afternoon, service was resumed in all but about 30 buildings as wage and welfare demands were settled.

About 500 elevator operators, porters, janitors and other service employes were involved. They belong to the AFL Building Service Workers Union.

Sweeping Tariff Concessions Are Given 17 Nations

Reduced Duties Begin Taking Effect June 6

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States has granted sweeping new tariff concessions to 17 western countries in another major move to expand world commerce.

Reduced duties covering $419,271,000 in foreign shipments to the United States will start going into effect June 6 under the new international agreements.

At the same time, existing low rates will be maintained on $58,305,000 in foreign imports.

In return, foreign governments have agreed to cut tariffs or keep from hiking rates on $1,157,000,000 of American products.

This country reduced its levies on many articles ranging from metals in short supply here to certain foods. It won concessions for sale abroad of many American farm products, chemicals and machinery among other things.

Negotiated In England

The new agreements, announced today by the State Department, were negotiated during a seven-month tariff conference at Torquay, England, which ended April 21.

Thirty-four nations, accounting for 80 per cent of world commerce, attended the meeting. It marked the third time that western countries have banded together to reduce trade barriers since World War Two ended.

In announcing the reciprocal concessions, the State Department hailed them as "a very substantial advance in the field of international trade relations and the relaxation of unnecessary restrictions on world commerce."

Western Germany and Canada won the biggest concessions from the United States and in turn granted the most substantial reductions to American products.

Germany Tops Concession List

Western Germany was included for the first time in such tariff-cutting agreements.

A 474-page "analysis" made available by the State Department showed that Germany granted more than half of the concessions the United States picked up at the Torquay meeting — affecting $557,594,000 of American exports.

Canada ranked next in importance, promising lower duties on $290,049,000 of American products.

McCarthy Charges Acheson Backs Suspended Scientist

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson today of trying to get the Navy to reinstate a suspended scientist who McCarthy said was a "Communist agent."

McCarthy told the Senate "tremendous pressure" is being applied to restore Stephen Brunauer to his job in naval explosives work and the State Department is exerting the principal influence.

Even so, he said, "the Acheson group" concedes that Brunauer "is dangerous and he is involved in espionage work."

Brunauer was suspended by the Navy April 10 as a "security risk." At the same time the State Department suspended the scientist's wife, Mrs. Esther Brunauer, explaining the action was taken because of the Navy's move against her husband.

At the time of his suspension, Brunauer said in a statement "I am a completely loyal American who never violated any security regulations."

Mrs. Brunauer was named by McCarthy last year in his charges of Communist influence in the State Department.

M'Arthur Plan 'Adds To Risk' Of USSR Entry

Losses May Force China To Negotiate

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Marshall gravely warned today that Russia may enter the Korean war without notice but he declared this threat would be far greater if the nation follows the war plans proposed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

For the second day, the 70-year-old Secretary urged that this country not take the added risk of open conflict with Russia by stepping up the war against China.

He said the Soviets have massed strong ground and air forces in the Far East and their entry into the Korea struggle would "be a very serious thing."

With this warning, Marshall sharply took issue with MacArthur who testified last week he did not believe the bombing of China would draw the Russians into the conflict—or that the Russians could wage much of a war in the far east.

At the same time, Marshall voiced concern that MacArthur's remarks about thousands of casualties in a bloody Korean "stalmate" may seriously damage the morale of the United Nations' combat troops.

He told the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees—looking into the causes of the MacArthur ouster—that there is the "very real possibility" of Russia's entry into the Korean war.

Decision Us To Few Men

"Like all other matters pertaining to the Soviet government," he said, "the decision is of a few men and can be an instant decision whenever they choose to make it.

"They may make it without any reference to a specific event and again they may find themselves imperiled x x x and therefore take action to reduce that peril."

He concluded, also that U. S. policy of building up defenses in Europe may provoke a war with Russia. But he insisted the risk must be taken because this country has "no choice whatever there."

Marshall declared administration policy in Asia may seem costly and a stalmate in Korea may appear the only end. But he added the cost cannot be compared to all "to what happens if we get involved in what you might call an atomic war."

MacArthur has challenged the administration policy and called stronger measures against the Red Chinese—bombing, a blockade and the use of Chinese Nationalist troops. He expressed firm belief this could bring a quick end to the Korean conflict.

No Quick Solution

But Marshall pictured Korea as only part of a world struggle with Communism. He said:

"There can be, I think, no quick and decisive solution to this global struggle short of resorting to another world war. The cost of such a conflict is beyond calculation.

"It is, therefore, our policy to contain Communist aggression in different fashions in different areas without desorting to total war, if that be possible to avoid. x x x

"Korea is only the latest challenger in this long, hard, continuing world-wide struggle."

Marshall contended the best way to win the Korean war is to shatter the morale of Chinese Red armies with "terrific casualties" on the battlefield.

Government May Up Wage Ceiling

WASHINGTON, May 8 (INS)—The government indicated tonight that it may push its 10 per cent wage ceiling upward as President Truman's request for tighter economic controls ran into determined opposition before the House Banking Committee.

These developments came as cattle receipts in major midwestern markets fell off sharply for the second straight day and stockyard officials attributed the slump to "holdback" by cattlemen in protest against a beef price rollback set for May 20.

Chairman Cooley (D) N. C., of the House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, forecast that Congress might ban further ceiling on farm products if Price Administrator DiSalle's beef price order fails to function properly.

Federal wage officials said the formula holding pay hikes to ten per cent will be reviewed when the Labor Department announces its April 15 cost-of-living index later this month.

It was indicated that the ceiling will be changed to compensate for living increases since the curb was adopted last February.

Mayor D'Alesandro Leads Democrats To New Shutout Victory At Baltimore Polls

BALTIMORE, May 8 (AP)—Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro led Baltimore's Democrats to another shutout victory in the city's election today. A Republican hasn't been elected to a municipal post since 1943.

D'Alesandro was returned to his second four-year term by a two-to-one margin over his closest rival, Republican Joseph L. Carter, close friend of Republican Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin.

The vote was heavy, with an estimated 60 per cent of the registered voters—predominately Democrats—going to the polls. The weather was ideal—sunny skies and the temperature in the low 70s.

With all of the 507 polling places reported, D'Alesandro, a former congressman, had 112,934 votes to 61,750 for Carter and 23,327 for Kelly.

Price had 89,181 to 64,279 for Danial E. Klein, Republican, and 24,227 for George Sellmayer, Democrat who ran as an independent. Sellmayer was City Council president from 1943 to 1947.

The vote for city comptroller was McCardell 106,140, Republican Harry D. James 52,404, independent Chester W. Tawney 13,177, and Milton Seif, Progressive, 2,556.

D'Alesandro kept his campaign on strictly local issues, stressing his record as a municipal administrator.

Carter and Kelly, however, injected national issues into the race. Carter had the active support of Gov. McKeldin, who argued that D'Alesandro was only priming himself to run for the U. S. Senate seat now held by Sen. Herbert R. O'Conor (D-Md) in 1952.

Spanish Troops Halt Disorders

PAMPLONA, Spain, May 8 (AP)—Civil guardsmen fired tommy guns into the air tonight to halt demonstrations of strikers in Pamlona.

Many persons was injured by blows from police nightsticks during the sporadic fighting in many parts of the city. The battling climaxed a general strike in protest against the rising cost of living.

(In Madrid, there were reliable reports that troops had been sent to Bilbao in preparation for possible disorders there.)

The strike was still continuing at about 8 o'clock tonight. All theatres, movies, cafes were closed and the transport service was halted.

There was no indication whether it would go on tomorrow in defiance of Civil Governor Luis Vaerlo Bermejo's threat that those still away from their jobs would be fired.

About 30,000 workers are involved in the general walkout. Angry crowds stoned the food ration office earlier in the day.

Civil and armed guards patrolled the streets.

Witnesses said that, contrary to the bloody incidents in Barcelona's general strike last March, the police were careful to fire into the air.

"Mac's" Dogwood "Inspection" Trip Sets Off Rumors

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur went on an inspection tour today—to look over some blossoming dogwood.

His unannunced trip to Connecticut led to a lot of speculation. Some people thought he was house-hunting. Others suggested it was a business trip.

Upon MacArthur's return, however, his aide, Maj. Courtney Whitney, said the ousted Far Eastern commander read about Connecticut's spring dogwood and decided to "inspect it."

"Very lovely," Whitney pronounced it on behalf of MacArthur.

"There's no truth to it at all," said Whitney of a report that MacArthur had leased a 20-room mansion and estate on Contentment Island, off Darien, Conn.

UMW Quits Proposed Manpower Committee

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—John L. Lewis' representative today quit the last remaining government agency in which the United Mine Workers had a seat.

John Owens, UMW secretary treasurer, sent the following telegram to Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson, quitting the proposed manpower advisory committee working with Wilson and Secretary of Labor Tobin:

"The representative of the United Mine Workers has been ignored in selection of all other committees. I cannot see any reason why I should serve on the labor management committee."

Gen. M'Arthur's Plane Flying Back To Japan

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's four-engined personal plane, which he released yesterday for its return to the military services, took off late today for the trip back to Japan.

It had been renamed "Scap" and presumably will go to Gen. Matthew R. Ridgway, MacArthur's successor as supreme commander in the Pacific. It was named "Bataan" for MacArthur's trip home.

Defense Chief Is Convinced Russians Have Atom Bomb

WASHINGTON, May 8. (AP)—Defense Secretary Marshall said today he is convinced the Russains have the atomic bomb.

But whether they have scaled the scientific mountain that stands between "having" the bomb and developing it into a practical weapon of war is another question, he indicated to the Senate's Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees.

The question was raised by Sen. Bridges (R-NH) during Marshall's interrogation on Korea policy. The Secretary's answer was a guarded one, and consequently subject to interpretation.

"They have the bomb, I am quite convinced," Marshall stated. "I couldn't even give you an estimate if I had the information as to when it might be available for use against us.

"I assume it will be a tedious and difficult development because I think in such matters we go much more rapidly than they would, and it's been a long tedious business with us x x x."

U. S. Turns Down Soviet Proposal For Jap Treaty

State Dept. Says USSR Seeks "Double Veto"

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP) — The United States accused Russia today of trying to "stall" preparations for an early Japanese peace treaty and brusquely rejected a Soviet proposal to turn the task over to a Pacific big four.

Moscow advanced the proposal yesterday, and included Communist China along with Russia, the U. S. and Britain as the four powers which should lay down the terms for a World War II settlement with Japan.

The State Department brushed the idea aside with this comment: "It is a mockery to pretend that to negotiate a Japanese peace under these conditions would actually produce peace."

Moscow Seeks "Double Veto"

What Moscow is seeking, the department charged, is a "double veto" by including Communist China among the Big Four.

The State Department made plain that the United States intends to go ahead with moves now in progress with 14 other non-Communist countries to complete the Japanese settlement, possibly this summer.

The Soviet proposal, as it was put forward in this late stage of the negotiations, dimmed the few remaining hopes of American officials that Russia might go along with the settlement and not insist on the "veto" which has blocked peace with Germany and Austria.

Some hopes had been retained even though Russia two months ago broke off, without explanation, the discussions which Ambassador John Foster Dulles had been carrying on at Lake Success with Russia's Jacob Malik.

"Periodic" Proposal

The American statement was read to newsmen by Press Officer Michael J. McDermott shortly after the arrival from Moscow of the note handed yesterday to U. S. Ambassador Alan G. Kirk.

"The Soviet proposal that the Japanese peace treaty be prepared by a council of foreign ministers composed of representatives of the Soviet Union, Communist China, the United Kingdom and the United States is a proposal which the Soviet Union makes periodically whenever it wants to stall the conclusion of a Japanese peace. It has always been rejected and will be again," the statement said.

Super Liner Will Be Launched June 23

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The new luxury liner United States, largest and fastest passenger ship ever built in this country, will be launched on June 23 at Newport News, Va., it was announcd today.

The 51,500-ton ship is scheduled to enter the United States Lines' North Atlantic service in the summer of 1952.

The vessel is 980 feet long, with a speed in excess of 30 knots, and will have accommodations for 2,000 passengers. It will carry a crew of 1,000.

Under the national defense program, the liner is designed for use as a troop carrier in time of emergency. It can be fitted to accommodate 14,000 men, or almost a full division

U. N. Orders Israel, Syria To Cease Fire

Both Sides Accept Council Directive

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., May 8 (AP) — The United Nations Security Council tonight ordered an immediate cease-fire in the fighting along the Syrian-Israeli border.

The vote was 10 to 0, with Russia abstaining.

The problem was complicated, however, by Syrian denials that Syrian troops were involved in the armed clashes. Syria's Faris El Khoury said that although his government was not directly concerned in the fighting it accepted the cease-fire.

Abba S. Eban, Israeli delegate, contended regular Syrian forces were responsible for repeated attacks against Israel. He presented what he called conclusive proof of this—reports that Syrian weapons, clothing and other objects had been found in Israeli territory where the fighting took place.

Israel Promises To Obey

Israel promised to obey the cease-fire order but Eban demanded that the demilitarized zone should not serve as a base for attacks on Israel. "We've lost our taste for unilateral cease-fires," he said.

The Israeli and Syrian representatives charged each other's country with aggression in the fighting that has grown up out of an Israeli attempt to drain Lake Huleh, a swamp area in the Jordan River basin.

Eban and Khoury sat at the council table as invited guests, along with Maj. Gen. William E. Riley, U. S. Marine Corps, who is the U.N. chief of staff for the Palestine truce agreement machinery set up in 1948.

Russia's Jacob Malik explained that he abstained in the newest Palestine peace move because the cease-fire resolution referred to other Security Council resolutions on which Russia had never taken a stand.

Four Nations Sponsor Move

The U. S., Britain, France and Turkey joined in sponsoring the cease-fire resolution. Both Israel and Syria proposed amendments calling for withdrawal of any military or military-like forces in the demilitarized zone.

The council, however, adopted the original resolution and France's Francis Lacoste said it was up to the mixed armistice commission, under Riley, to work out the problem of withdrawing forces and caring for civilians.

Iran Reds Make Seven Demands

TEHRAN, Iran, May 8 (AP) — An emboldened Tudeh (Communist) Party today made seven demands on Premier Mohammed Mossadegh that included expulsion of the 25-man U. S. military mission to Iran.

The other six demands, contained in an open letter to the Premier, were:

1. Legalization of the Tudeh Party, outlawed since the attempted assassination of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi in February, 1949.
2. Recognition of Red China.
3. Rejection of foreign arms aid.
4. Release of political prisoners.
5. An end to martial law in the southern oil fields.
6. Nationalization of the Behrein oil fields, where the American-owned Bahrein Petroleum Company is producing 10,000,000 barrels of oil a year.

Elevator Strike Strands Gotham Office Workers

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—The people who man New York's towering business skyscrapers went on strike today, stranding thousands of office workers high above Manhattan.

With elevators out of service, lunch hour throngs trudged down and back many flights of stairs. Some, however, just sat the whole thing out in their offices.

About 100 office buildings were affected at the height of the walkout. There are about 500 normally tended by the striking unions.

By mid-afternoon, service was resumed in all but about 30 buildings as wage and welfare demands were settled.

About 500 elevator operators, porters, janitors and other service employes were involved. They belong to the AFL Building Service Workers Union.

Reduced Duties Begin Taking Effect June 6

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States has granted sweeping new tariff concessions to 17 western countries in another major move to expand world commerce.

Reduced duties covering $419,271,000 in foreign shipments to the United States will start going into effect June 6 under the new international agreements.

At the same time, existing low rates will be maintained on $58,305,000 in foreign imports.

In return, foreign governments have agreed to cut tariffs or keep from hiking rates on $1,157,000,000 of American products.

This country reduced its levies on many articles ranging from metals in short supply here to certain foods. It won concessions for sale abroad of many American farm products, chemicals and machinery among other things.

Negotiated In England

The new agreements, announced today by the State Department, were negotiated during a seven-month tariff conference at Torquay, England, which ended April 21.

Thirty-four nations, accounting for 80 per cent of world commerce, attended the meeting. It marked the third time that western countries have banded together to reduce trade barriers since World War Two ended.

In announcing the reciprocal concessions, the State Department hailed them as "a very substantial advance in the field of international trade relations and the relaxation of unnecessary restrictions on world commerce."

Western Germany and Canada won the biggest concessions from the United States and in turn granted the most substantial reductions to American products.

Germany Tops Concession List

Western Germany was included for the first time in such tariff-cutting agreements.

A 474-page "analysis" made available by the State Department showed that Germany granted more than half of the concessions the United States picked up at the Torquay meeting — affecting $557,594,000 of American exports.

Canada ranked next in importance, promising lower duties on $290,049,000 of American products.

McCarthy Charges Acheson Backs Suspended Scientist

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson today of trying to get the Navy to reinstate a suspended scientist who McCarthy said was a "Communist agent."

McCarthy told the Senate "tremendous pressure" is being applied to restore Stephen Brunauer to his job in naval explosives work and the State Department is exerting the principal influence.

Even so, he said, "the Acheson group" concedes that Brunauer "is dangerous and he is involved in espionage work."

Brunauer was suspended by the Navy April 10 as a "security risk." At the same time the State Department suspended the scientist's wife, Mrs. Esther Brunauer, explaining the action was taken because of the Navy's move against her husband.

At the time of his suspension, Brunauer said in a statement "I am a completely loyal American who never violated any security regulations."

Mrs. Brunauer was named by McCarthy last year in his charges of Communist influence in the State Department.

M'Arthur Plan 'Adds To Risk' Of USSR Entry

Losses May Force China To Negotiate

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Marshall gravely warned today that Russia may enter the Korean war without notice but he declared this threat would be far greater if the nation follows the war plans proposed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

For the second day, the 70-year-old Secretary urged that this country not take the added risk of open conflict with Russia by stepping up the war against China.

He said the Soviets have massed strong ground and air forces in the Far East and their entry into the Korea struggle would "be a very serious thing."

With this warning, Marshall sharply took issue with MacArthur who testified last week he did not believe the bombing of China would draw the Russians into the conflict—or that the Russians could wage much of a war in the far east.

At the same time, Marshall voiced concern that MacArthur's remarks about thousands of casualties in a bloody Korean "stalmate" may seriously damage the morale of the United Nations' combat troops.

He told the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees—looking into the causes of the MacArthur ouster—that there is the "very real possibility" of Russia's entry into the Korean war.

Decision Us To Few Men

"Like all other matters pertaining to the Soviet government," he said, "the decision is of a few men and can be an instant decision whenever they choose to make it.

"They may make it without any reference to a specific event and again they may find themselves imperiled x x x and therefore take action to reduce that peril."

He concluded, also that U. S. policy of building up defenses in Europe may provoke a war with Russia. But he insisted the risk must be taken because this country has "no choice whatever there."

Marshall declared administration policy in Asia may seem costly and a stalmate in Korea may appear the only end. But he added the cost cannot be compared to all "to what happens if we get involved in what you might call an atomic war."

MacArthur has challenged the administration policy and called stronger measures against the Red Chinese—bombing, a blockade and the use of Chinese Nationalist troops. He expressed firm belief this could bring a quick end to the Korean conflict.

No Quick Solution

But Marshall pictured Korea as only part of a world struggle with Communism. He said:

"There can be, I think, no quick and decisive solution to this global struggle short of resorting to another world war. The cost of such a conflict is beyond calculation.

"It is, therefore, our policy to contain Communist aggression in different fashions in different areas without desorting to total war, if that be possible to avoid. x x x

"Korea is only the latest challenger in this long, hard, continuing world-wide struggle."

Marshall contended the best way to win the Korean war is to shatter the morale of Chinese Red armies with "terrific casualties" on the battlefield.

Government May Up Wage Ceiling

WASHINGTON, May 8 (INS)—The government indicated tonight that it may push its 10 per cent wage ceiling upward as President Truman's request for tighter economic controls ran into determined opposition before the House Banking Committee.

These developments came as cattle receipts in major midwestern markets fell off sharply for the second straight day and stockyard officials attributed the slump to "holdback" by cattlemen in protest against a beef price rollback set for May 20.

Chairman Cooley (D) N. C., of the House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, forecast that Congress might ban further ceiling on farm products if Price Administrator DiSalle's beef price order fails to function properly.

Federal wage officials said the formula holding pay hikes to ten per cent will be reviewed when the Labor Department announces its April 15 cost-of-living index later this month.

It was indicated that the ceiling will be changed to compensate for living increases since the curb was adopted last February.

Rep. John Kee, Of West Va., Dies Of Heart Seizure

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Rep. John Kee (D-WVa), 76, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died of a heart seizure today.

Kee collapsed while presiding over a closed-door session of his committee this forenoon. He died a few minutes later.

The West Virginia legislator, a veteran of 18 years in Congress, had been suffering from a heart condition for several years and only recently returned to Capitol Hill from a siege in the Bethesda, Md., naval hospital.

Kee is the third House member to die during the 82nd Congress. The others were Reps. John Sullivan (D-Mo) and Frank Buchanan (D-Pa). His death leaves two vacancies in the House.

Kee became chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee in March, 1949, following the death of Rep. Sol. Bloom (D-NY). Like Kee, Bloom also collapsed at a committee meeting. He died several days later.

Under the seniority system, Rep. Richards (D-SC) is expected to succeed to the chairmanship. As ranking Democratic member of the committee, he has been acting chairman during most of this session of Congress while Kee was unable to attend.

Richards told the House that Kee was stricken just after the Foreign Affairs Committee had approved the so-called "Soviet friendship" resolution—an expression of friendship and goodwill by the American people toward the people of Soviet Russia. A similar resolution has already passed the Senate.

"He turned to me and said, 'Dick, will you take the chair a few minutes?'" Richards said. "He died with his boots on."

LAWMAKER DIES—Rep. John Kee (above), West Virginia Democrat and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died of a heart seizure yesterday at Washington. He was 76.

M'Arthur Plan

Without mentioning MacArthur by name, Marshall said the deposed General had in effect called U. N. casualties in Korea "without justified purposes."

The Secretary pleaded for a procedure in the Asia policy hearing by the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees "that does not destroy us in the field by serious reaction in the way of morale."

Marshall said yesterday he did not think the MacArthur program would bring victory. And he argued today: "The feeling has been that an extension of the present war, under the terms proposed by Gen. MacArthur, would not only hazard the development of a very much enlarged and probably a world war, but would not lead to a quick decision.

Cites Berlin Blockage

As did MacArthur, Marshall testified behind closed doors and a censored version of his remarks was made public.

MacArthur, whose disagreement with U. S. Asia policy led to his dismissal, contended the present course in Korea can lead only to a "bloody stalmate" costing thousands of American lives.

Marshall replied to this argument by saying the Berlin blockade which lasted for 15 months appeared to be a stalemate and some people were willing to risk war at that time by smashing through the blockade.

"There were times," he said, "when the fight for Berlin also looked like a stalemate, but we kept our heads and persevered and in the end won a notable victory." Marshall was secretary of state during this period.

He also recalled there were those who were impatient over U. S. policy in Greece and called it a "hopeless adventure"—a waste of military and economic aid.

"It is true that our rescue of Greece (from the Communists) was costly in comparison to the stakes involved," he added. "But it paid off x x x."

He said he believed Yugoslavia would not have broken with the Kremlin had the Communists been able to dominate Greece.

Chair Ends Life Of Willie McGee

LAUREL, Miss., May 8 (AP)—Willie McGee was executed today.

But supporters still claimed the 37-year-old negro was innocent of the rape of a white woman for which he died after five and a half years of battling.

One long charge of electricity ended his life at 12:05 a. m. (CST) this morning. He was pronounced dead officially five minutes later.

His attorneys fought to the last minute to save the short, bushy-haired negro from Mississippi's portable electric chair. But 11th hour appeals last night to Gov. Fielding L. Wright, the U. S. District Court, the U. S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, the U. S. Supreme Court and President Truman failed.

In San Francisco, Harry Bridges, longshore leader, said McGee's execution "was a lynching of an American solely because of the color of his skin."

McGee's attorneys contended in court that no white man has ever been executed in Mississippi for rape. They said he was innocent, and convicted on perjured testimony without having an opportunity to have his entire story told to a jury.

Bettors Who Lose May Sue Bookies Under Florida Law

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 8 (AP)—An act designed to discourage illegal bookmaking by permitting an unlucky bettor to sue to recover his losses became a Florida law today.

The new law, one of a series of measures proposed by an interim Senate crime committee, provides that anyone losing at illicit gambling may sue the winner, within 90 days, to recover the losses.

The suits would be doubly costly to the bookies, casino operators and other winners. In addition to having to repay the loser they would have to pay the state an equal amount.

NSLI Dividend Rate 50 Cents Per $1,000

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP) — Veterans and servicemen under age 40 with National Service Life Insurance term policies reportedly are being paid a dividend of 50 cents per month per $1,000 of insurance.

Officials familiar with the payment plan said this date is being used to compute amounts for about half the 8,200,000 policies drawing the current refund. It is five cents less than that for all type policies in the first special NSLI dividend. Maximum payment for this group is $180.

Enlisted Reservists Won't Be Called

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The Army said today it will not order any enlisted member of a reserve unit into active service if his enlistment has less than a year to run.

This provision applies immediately to enlisted reservists whether or not they have received orders to report for duty.

Enlisted members of organized reserve units sign up for three years. The Army recently announced a similar provisions for reserves who are called up as individuals.

Truman Celebrates His 67th Birthday

WASHINGTON, May 8. (INS)—President Truman marked his 67th birthday today with a normal round of work at his White House desk.

A small family celebration, however, was to be held at Blair House tonight with daughter Margaret down from New York to help the Chief executive cut a cake bearing only 21 candles.

Friends and aides remembered the day, which is also the sixth anniversary of VE day, with a large bouquet of roses, a gavel made of the original wood in the White House and other gifts including an ancient Hebrew candelabra from Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

Fears Of War Overshadow Anniversary Of V-E Day

[By The Associated Press]

The European phase of World War II ended six years ago yesterday. Concern over the possibility of a World War III overshadowed observance of the anniversary in the Western world. In the Communist sphere, the Soviet army drew its usual praise.

Four men who met in a little red school house at Reims, the supreme headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, signed the document by which a beaten Germany surrendered unconditionally.

They were Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, German army chief of staff; U. S. Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's chief of staff; French Gen. Francois Sevez, and Soviet Maj. Gen. Ivan Susloparov.

Now Jodl is dead, hanged at Nuernberg for war crimes.

Smith is facing a new foe—aggressive Communism—as director of the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Sevez is dead, the victim of a hunting accident.

Susloparov is—who outside the Kremlin knows?

Only after the surrender did Eisenhower receive Jodl. That was to demand coldly an assurance that Jodl understood the terms.

Eisenhower spent the anniversary yesterday in a chilling rain inspecting Belgian military air fields in his new job as commander in chief of Atlantic alliance defense forces.

And, six years after the surrender, West German President Theodore Heuss appealed to all nations to repatriate their German prisoners of war "as a matter of simple humanity."

Washington County Teachers Ask Increase

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 8 (AP)—A delegation of Washington County teachers today asked the county commissioners for higher pay.

Superintendent of Schools William M. Brish, speaking for the delegation, told the commissioners it has been hard to get teachers to sign contracts for next year since Gov. McKeldin vetoed the $300 annual increase, passed by the General Assembly.

Brish reported that six Washington County teachers sumbitted their resignations last week and he expects at least two more this week.

The six who quit, he said, said they were going to other counties where the pay scales are higher. Brish reported that they did not want to leave but were forced to by higher living costs.

Two Towns Wrecked By El Salvador Quake

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvadore, May 8 (AP) — Two towns in southeastern El Salvador were scenes of desolation and death today following a series of earthquakes which killed about 1,000 persons and injured 4,000.

(A dispatch from neighboring Guatemala said the Salvadorian government intended to put the torch to the ruins to prevent spread of typhoid and other diseases already prevalent.)

Imbo Volcano, five miles south of Jucuapa, erupted steam and hot spray today following a series of earthquake shocks.

Jucuapa and Chinameca, with a combined population of about 29,000 were virtually destroyed. They were described as scenes of desolation and death.

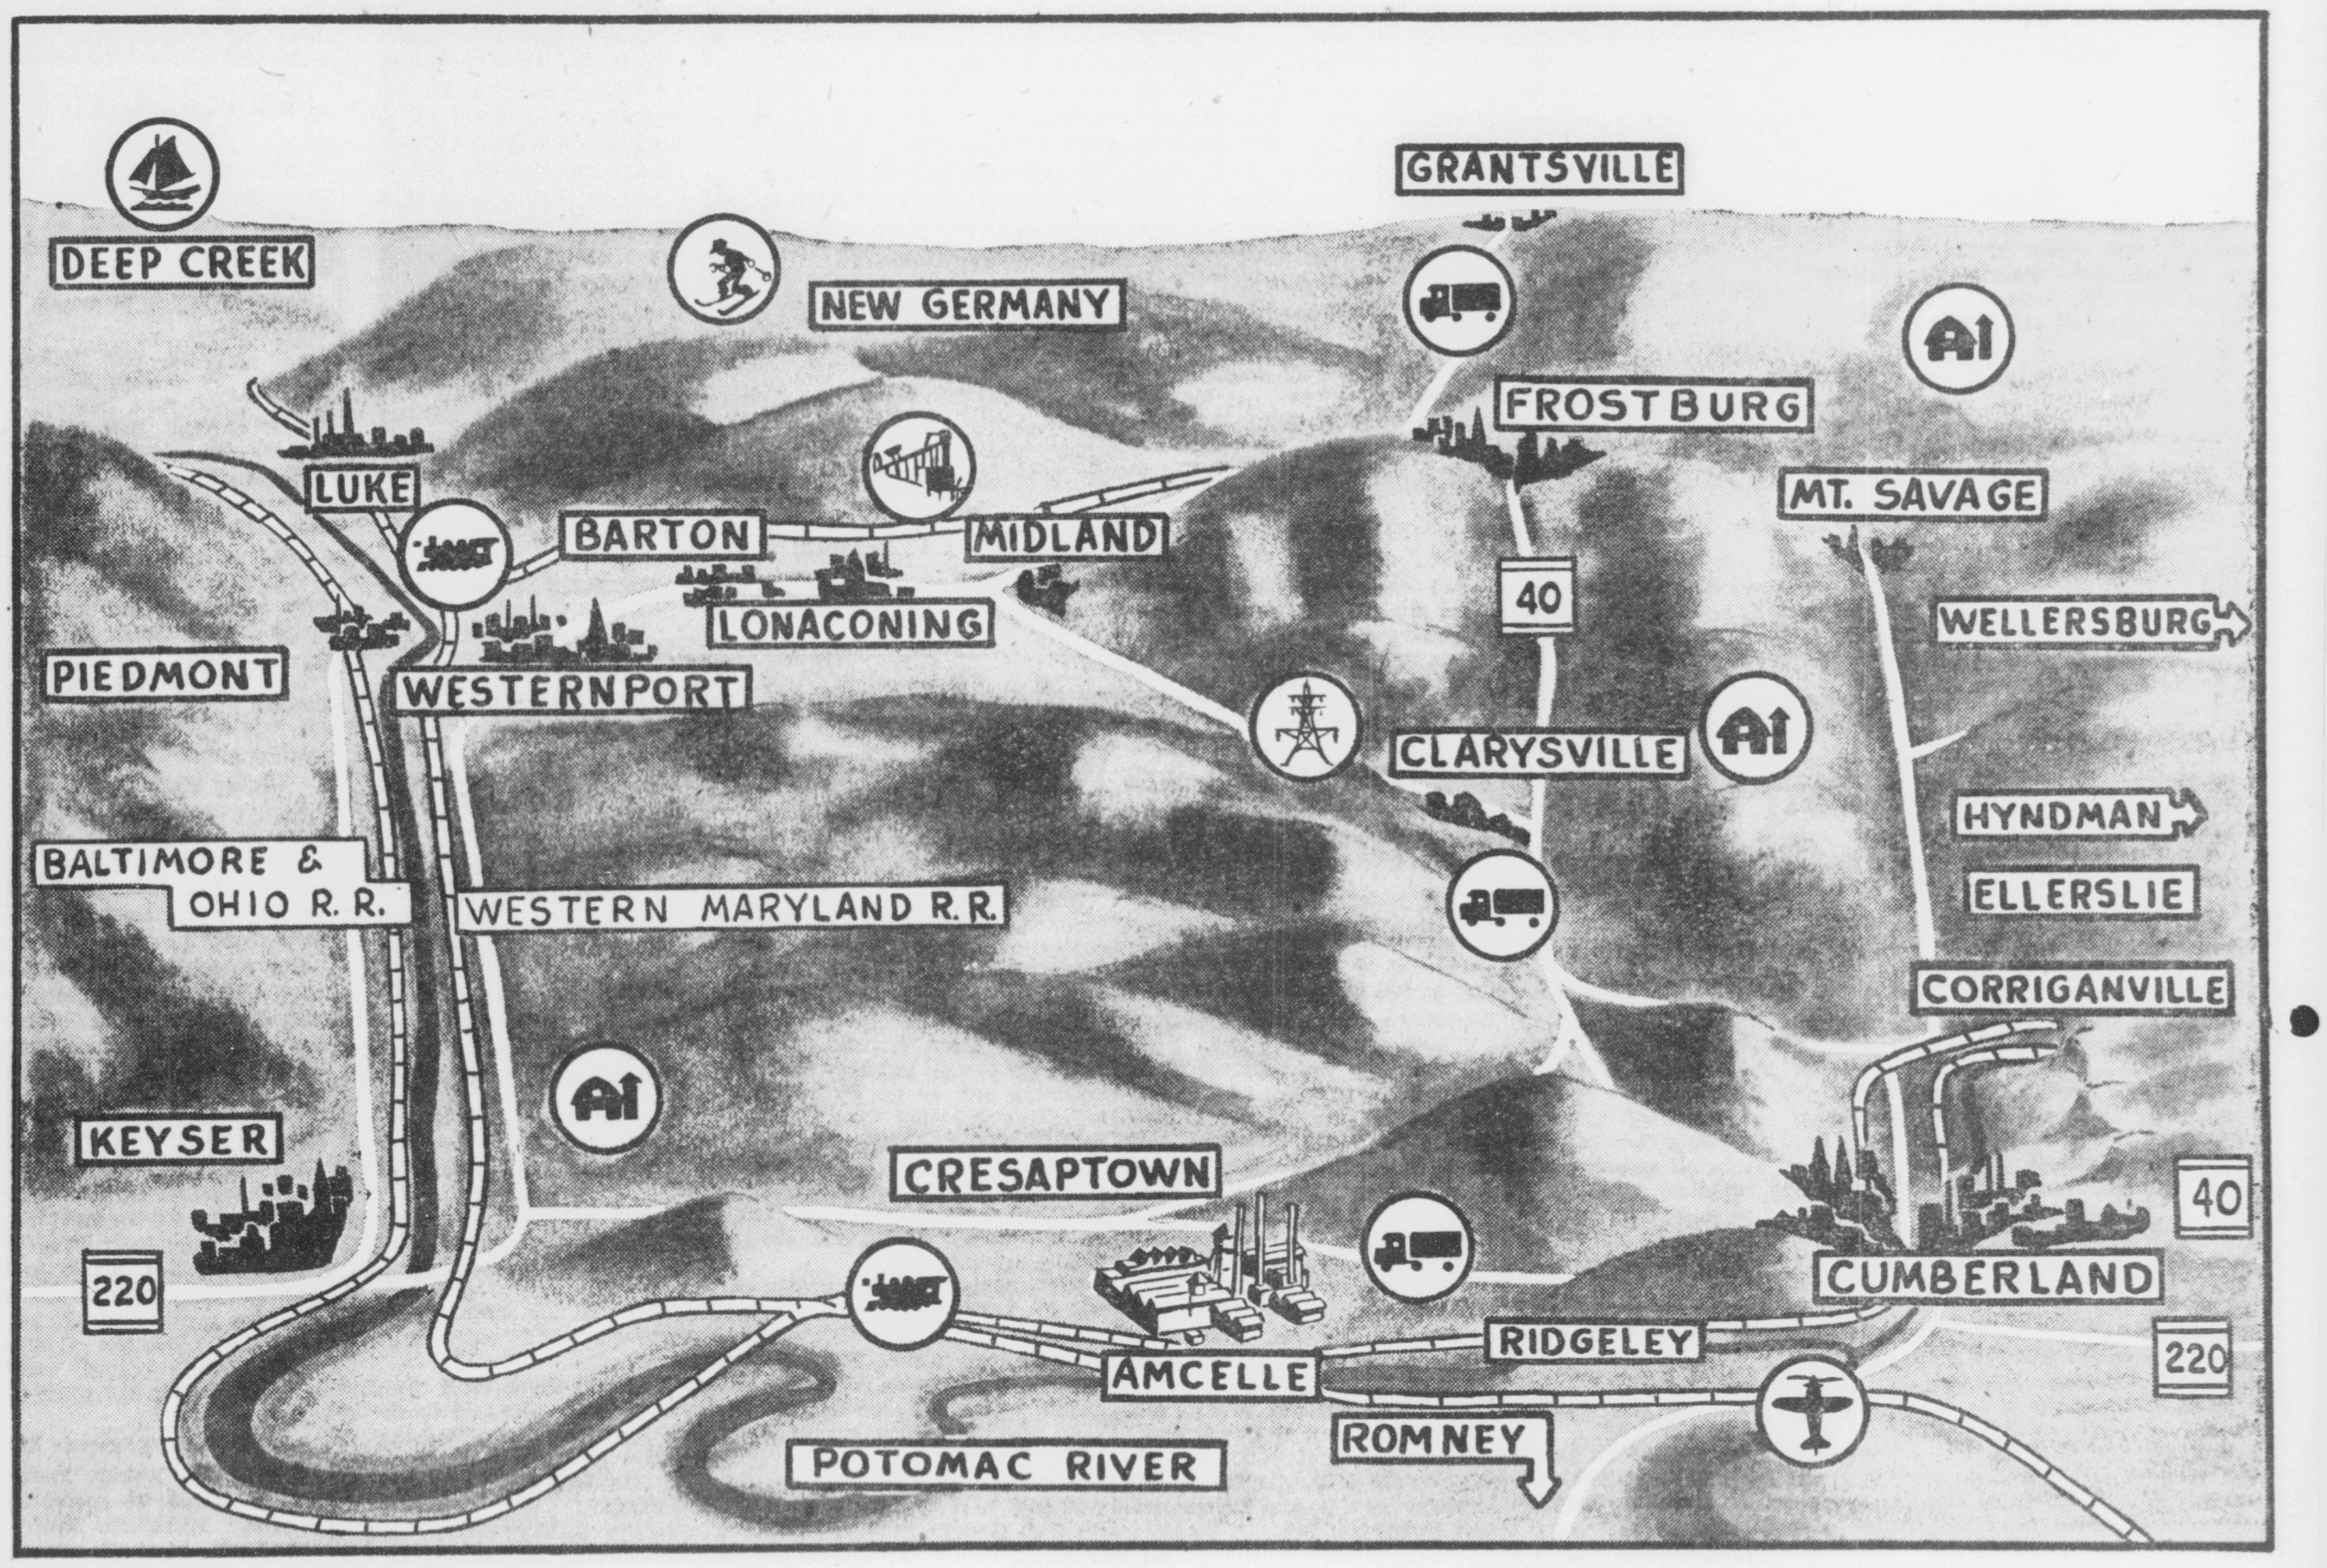
WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—"Some improvement" in the condition of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull was reported this afternoon by physicians at naval hospital.



Celanese brought $21,000,000 into the Tri-State area in 1950

Out from the Amcelle plant of Celanese go shipments of acetate yarn, dyed goods and cellulose acetate flake. Back comes money. In 1950, nearly $21,000,000 was paid out in the Tri-State area by Celanese.

This is the way these dollars were paid out:

Wages and Salaries	$17,067,512.00
Employee Welfare	353,368.00
Coal Purchases	1,514,500.00
Gas, Water, Electricity & Telephones	1,180,816.00
County Taxes	319,850.00
Local Charities and Donations	19,275.00
Miscellaneous Purchases, such as paper, lumber, hardware, gasoline, tires and foodstuffs	435,000.00
TOTAL	$20,890,321.00

The largest item, $17,067,512 for wages and salaries, is of great importance to the business and commercial life of the Tri-State area. Most of it is spent in this area and helps to provide jobs in local industries, stores, and service establishments.

Some of it goes into banks as savings, where it helps finance worthwhile projects for local businesses and individuals. Some goes as taxes for the upkeep of schools, roads, law enforcement agencies, and other public benefits. And some, of course, goes to support churches. In addition, $353,368.00 was paid for hospital and medical services for employees and their families covered by Celanese Group Insurance program.

Celanese, too, believes in buying at home when practicable, as the large expenditure for local purchases indicates. Also, the company is one of the largest taxpayers in Allegany County, and one of the best customers of the public utility companies. These expenditures provide jobs for many people.

Most of the Celanese employees at Amcelle realize that the surest way to keep this money flowing into the area is to produce quality materials at prices people are able and willing to pay. Tri-State area citizens can help, too, by knowing and boosting Celanese and its products.

The Secretary pleaded for a procedure in the Asia policy hearing by the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees "that does not destroy us in the field by serious reaction in the way of morale."

Marshall said yesterday he did not think the MacArthur program would bring victory. And he argued today: "The feeling has been that an extension of the present war, under the terms proposed by Gen. MacArthur, would not only hazard the development of a very much enlarged and probably a world war, but would not lead to a quick decision.

Cites Berlin Blockage

As did MacArthur, Marshall testified behind closed doors and a censored version of his remarks was made public.

MacArthur, whose disagreement with U. S. Asia policy led to his dismissal, contended the present course in Korea can lead only to a "bloody stalmate" costing thousands of American lives.

Marshall replied to this argument by saying the Berlin blockade which lasted for 15 months appeared to be a stalemate and some people were willing to risk war at that time by smashing through the blockade.

"There were times," he said, "when the fight for Berlin also looked like a stalemate, but we kept our heads and persevered and in the end won a notable victory." Marshall was secretary of state during this period.

He also recalled there were those who were impatient over U. S. policy in Greece and called it a "hopeless adventure"—a waste of military and economic aid.

"It is true that our rescue of Greece (from the Communists) was costly in comparison to the stakes involved," he added. "But it paid off x x x ."

He said he believed Yugoslavia would not have broken with the Kremlin had the Communists been able to dominate Greece.

Chair Ends Life Of Willie McGee

LAUREL, Miss., May 8 (AP)—Willie McGee was executed today.

But supporters still claimed the 37-year-old negro was innocent of the rape of a white woman for which he died after five and a half years of battling.

One long charge of electricity ended his life at 12:05 a. m. (CST) this morning. He was pronounced dead officially five minutes later.

His attorneys fought to the last minute to save the short, bushy-haired negro from Mississippi's portable electric chair. But 11th hour appeals last night to Gov. Fielding L. Wright, the U. S. District Court, the U. S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, the U. S. Supreme Court and President Truman failed.

In San Francisco, Harry Bridges, longshore leader, said McGee's execution "was a lynching of an American solely because of the color of his skin."

McGee's attorneys contended in court that no white man has ever been executed in Mississippi for rape. They said he was innocent, and convicted on perjured testimony without having an opportunity to have his entire story told to a jury.

Bettors Who Lose May Sue Bookies Under Florida Law

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 8 (AP)—An act designed to discourage illegal bookmaking by permitting an unlucky bettor to sue to recover his losses became a Florida law today.

The new law, one of a series of measures proposed by an interim Senate crime committee, provides that anyone losing at illicit gambling may sue the winner, within 90 days, to recover the losses.

The suits would be doubly costly to the bookies, casino operators and other winners. In addition to having to repay the loser they would have to pay the state an equal amount.

NSLI Dividend Rate 50 Cents Per $1,000

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP) — Veterans and servicemen under age 40 with National Service Life Insurance term policies reportedly are being paid a dividend of 50 cents per month per $1,000 of insurance.

Officials familiar with the payment plan said this date is being used to compute amounts for about half the 8,200,000 policies drawing the current refund. It is five cents less than that for all type policies in the first special NSLI dividend. Maximum payment for this group is $180.

Enlisted Reservists Won't Be Called

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The Army said today it will not order any enlisted member of a reserve unit into active service if his enlistment has less than a year to run.

This provision applies immediately to enlisted reservists whether or not they have received orders to report for duty.

Enlisted members of organized reserve units sign up for three years. The Army recently announced a similar provisions for reserves who are called up as individuals.

Truman Celebrates His 67th Birthday

WASHINGTON, May 8. (INS)—President Truman marked his 67th birthday today with a normal round of work at his White House desk.

A small family celebration, however, was to be held at Blair House tonight with daughter Margaret down from New York to help the Chief executive cut a cake bearing only 21 candles.

Friends and aides remembered the day, which is also the sixth anniversary of VE day, with a large bouquet of roses, a gavel made of the original wood in the White House and other gifts including an ancient Hebrew candelabra from Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

Fears Of War Overshadow Anniversary Of V-E Day

[By The Associated Press]

The European phase of World War II ended six years ago yesterday. Concern over the possibility of a World War III overshadowed observance of the anniversary in the Western world. In the Communist sphere, the Soviet army drew its usual praise.

Four men who met in a little red school house at Reims, the supreme headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, signed the document by which a beaten Germany surrendered unconditionally.

They were Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, German army chief of staff; U. S. Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's chief of staff; French Gen. Francois Sevez, and Soviet Maj. Gen. Ivan Susloparov.

Now Jodl is dead, hanged at Nuernberg for war crimes.

Smith is facing a new foe—aggressive Communism—as director of the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Sevez is dead, the victim of a hunting accident.

Susloparov is—who outside the Kremlin knows?

Only after the surrender did Eisenhower receive Jodl. That was to demand coldly an assurance that Jodl understood the terms.

Eisenhower spent the anniversary yesterday in a chilling rain inspecting Belgian military air fields in his new job as commander in chief of Atlantic alliance defense forces.

And, six years after the surrender, West German President Theodore Heuss appealed to all nations to repatriate their German prisoners of war "as a matter of simple humanity."

Washington County Teachers Ask Increase

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 8 (AP)—A delegation of Washington County teachers today asked the county commissioners for higher pay.

Superintendent of Schools William M. Brish, speaking for the delegation, told the commissioners it has been hard to get teachers to sign contracts for next year since Gov. McKeldin vetoed the $300 annual increase, passed by the General Assembly.

Brish reported that six Washington County teachers sumbitted their resignations last week and he expects at least two more this week.

The six who quit, he said, said they were going to other counties where the pay scales are higher. Brish reported that they did not want to leave but were forced to by higher living costs.

Two Towns Wrecked By El Salvador Quake

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvadore, May 8 (AP) — Two towns in southeastern El Salvador were scenes of desolation and death today following a series of earthquakes which killed about 1,000 persons and injured 4,000.

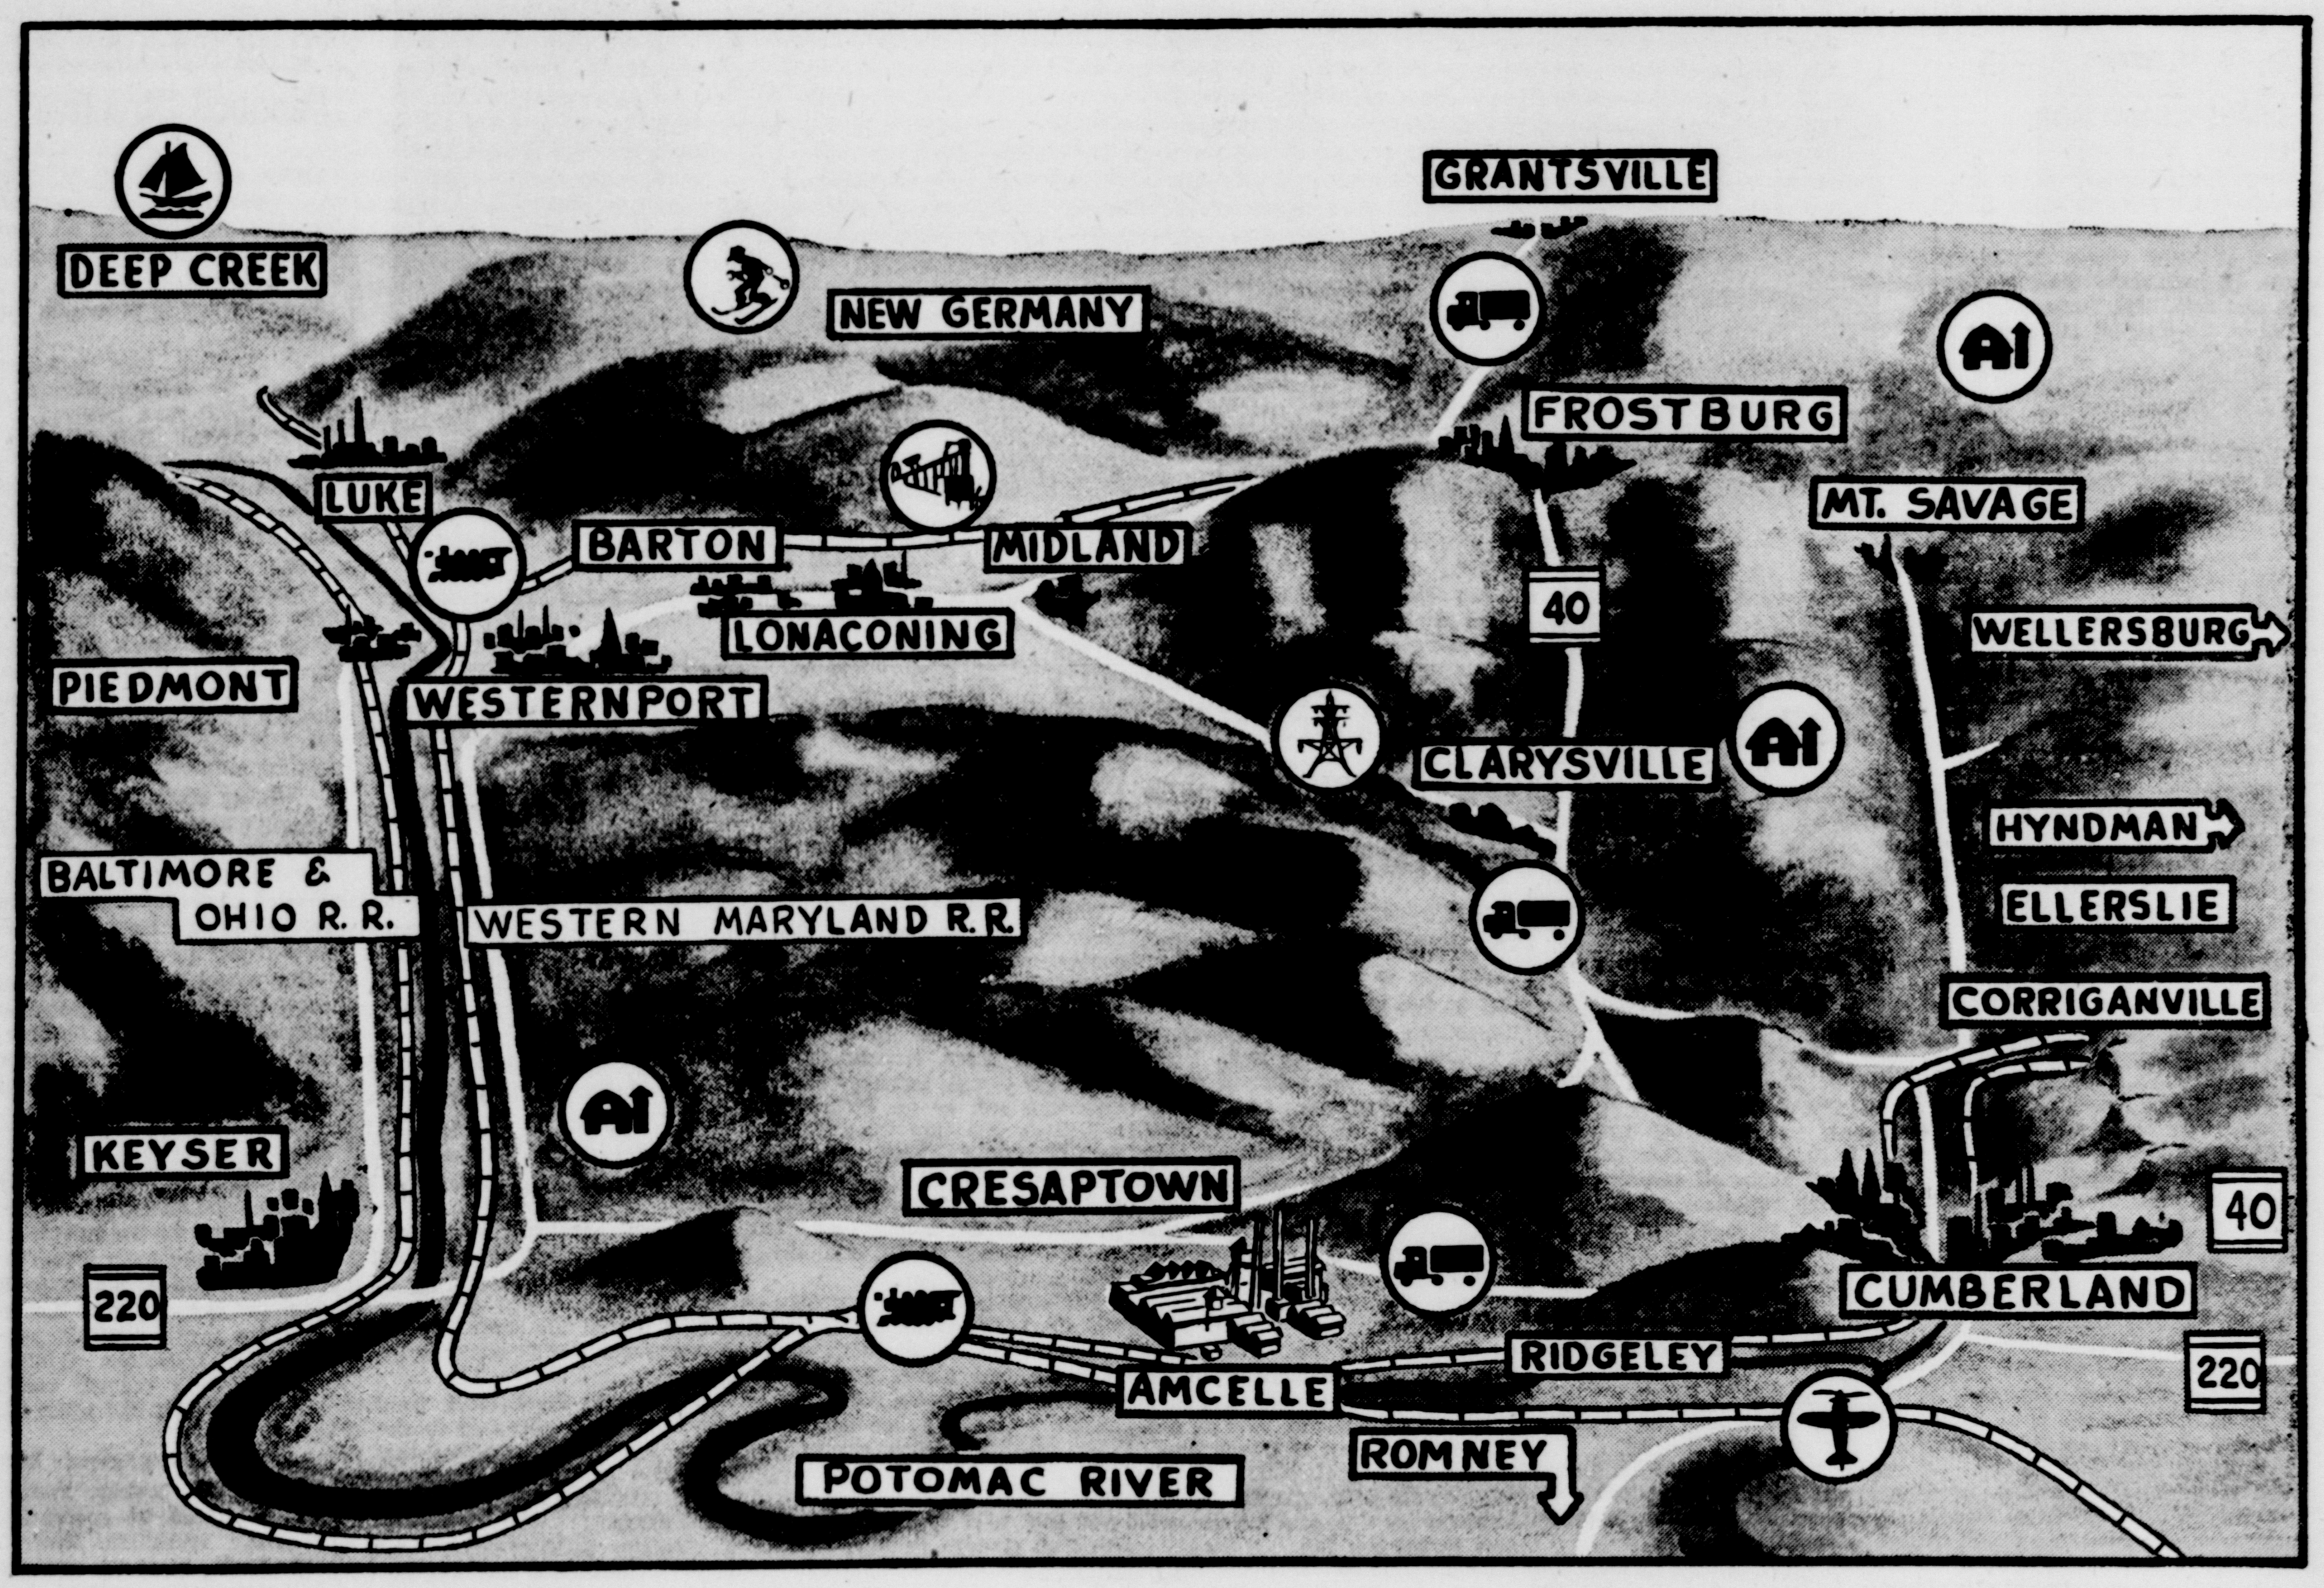
(A dispatch from neighboring Guatemala said the Salvadorian government intended to put the torch to the ruins to prevent spread of typhoid and other diseases already prevalent.)

Imbo Volcano, five miles south of Jucuapa, erupted steam and hot spray today following a series of earthquake shocks.

Jucuapa and Chinameca, with a combined population of about 29,000 were virtually destroyed. They were described as scenes of desolation and death.

Cordell Hull Improves

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—"Some improvement" in the condition of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull was reported this afternoon by physicians at naval hospital.



Celanese brought $21,000,000 into the Tri-State area in 1950

Out from the Amcelle plant of Celanese go shipments of acetate yarn, dyed goods and cellulose acetate flake. Back comes money. In 1950, nearly $21,000,000 was paid out in the Tri-State area by Celanese.

This is the way these dollars were paid out:

Wages and Salaries	$17,067,512.00
Employee Welfare	353,368.00
Coal Purchases	1,514,500.00
Gas, Water, Electricity & Telephones	1,180,816.00
County Taxes	319,850.00
Local Charities and Donations	19,275.00
Miscellaneous Purchases, such as paper, lumber, hardware, gasoline, tires and foodstuffs	435,000.00
TOTAL	$20,890,321.00

The largest item, $17,067,512 for wages and salaries, is of great importance to the business and commercial life of the Tri-State area. Most of it is spent in this area and helps to provide jobs in local industries, stores, and service establishments.

Some of it goes into banks as savings, where it helps finance worthwhile projects for local businesses and individuals. Some goes as taxes for the upkeep of schools, roads, law enforcement agencies, and other public benefits. And some, of course, goes to support churches. In addition, $353,368.00 was paid for hospital and medical services for employees and their families covered by Celanese Group Insurance program.

Celanese, too, believes in buying at home when practicable, as the large expenditure for local purchases indicates. Also, the company is one of the largest taxpayers in Allegany County, and one of the best customers of the public utility companies. These expenditures provide jobs for many people.

Most of the Celanese employees at Amcelle realize that the surest way to keep this money flowing into the area is to produce quality materials at prices people are able and willing to pay. Tri-State area citizens can help, too, by knowing and boosting Celanese and its products.

HOUSEWARES — FOURTH FLOOR

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

Entertaining A Four-Year-Old

WE'D BEEN TALKING fondly about the possibility of grandchildren when we met a youngster on the East Hampton beach last summer who had all the charm of Jimmy Stewart and all the courage of Eddie Rickenbacker. He was three. We swam together, and he wasn't afraid of the waves. When the other kids shied from barking dogs, he walked boldly up to them.

"Why don't you let me adopt John?" I said to his mother one day. She had been a nurse in the war.

"Then what would we do?" she asked.

"Well, you have two more," I hinted.

So we compromised, and he came up to the farm to visit us for four days recently. I thought all I had to do was to put on his overalls, and he would follow me around and admire me. He hadn't been in the house ten minutes, and I had barely turned my back when he began to spin all the knobs on the television set which caused considerable confusion on the screen like a chameleon trying to make good on plaid. Incidentally we had to hire an expert to come to unscramble it. We still get effects that look like ocean waves instead of images.

John and I went down to the barn where he was most enthusiastic about all the animals, except he must have read his picture book wrong or somewhere had gotten the idea you milked a horse. I pulled him out from under the animal's legs before he got his brains kicked out and restrained him from going to work on the cows during their rest period.

Always friendly and brave for a four-year-old which he now is, I took him along to the village when I went to call on a sick neighbor. We stopped at the drugstore, and he demanded a strawberry ice cream cone which I immediately got him, although his mother had told us never to feed him between meals. It kept him occupied for about half an hour.

At six the next morning I heard a knock on my door, and there was John in his pajamas wide awake and ready for business. He crawled into bed with me, a comfortable cozy companion, and began to pet a poodle which had moved up into the party, too. At quarter after six, the dog began to gulp, and I chased her off just before she was sick at her stomach. By half past, I gave in and got up for the day. It proved to be a pretty long one, too.

John was an inventive and inquisitive little cuss. Shortly after breakfast, I turned him out with a couple of dogs to get some country air and to give me some peace and a chance to read the Sunday papers. After a half hour, things seemed to be pretty quiet, so I went out to check and soon realized the reason for the silence. My friend had found the pipe through which oil is poured into the tank for the furnace. There was a ring with a padlock on it, but it had not been snapped shut. What good is an unlocked lock? John had taken it out, lifted the lid, and was walking to the driveway picking up handfuls of gravel and sand which he was pouring down the opening. I don't know how many loads he had transplanted before I stopped him. The furnace expert said he wouldn't be able to tell for sure what the result would be until next winter, a fine time to find out. Between innings he would ring all the bells he could find in the house and blow the horn of any idle automobile.

Before he went to bed that night, I said to him,

"Now you came in and woke me up this morning. Tomorrow it's my turn, so wait for me."

By seven, I had heard nothing from my guest, and went into his room where I found him on top of the bed, stark naked. It seems he had had a slight accident due to the delay, but the little fellow had stuck faithfully to my instructions.

The next day his mother and father came to get him, and we told them how good their son had been and what a model guest. At that, he is a fine little fellow, and probably a whole lot better than I was at his age or perhaps even now. My mother used to say I was a sour baby—whatever that means, but I suspect it is no compliment. At this writing, I am not so sure about grandchildren, although after my workout with John, I think I could take them in my stride.

Future British Generals Train For Science War

By GLENN WILLIAMS

SHRIVENHAM, England — (AP) — The British army has decided scientific war is here to stay. It is assigning its brightest young future generals for special scientific training here.

The Military College of Science was established here in 1946. Its doings were kept dark for five years, but recently a small party of correspondents was conducted through it.

About 150 men a year enter the college. The courses are tough. About 20 per cent of the officers flunk out before they're finished.

The young officers learn the scientific principles of weapons, including atom bombs, rockets and radar.

Gen. W. J. Eldridge, who commands the college, told the correspondents "the college endeavors to educate its men for their work up to 15 or 20 years ahead."

"From the army point of view, the technical officer is the go-between the soldier-user and the armament engineers and scientists," Gen. Eldridge said. "It is vitally important for him to be able to meet the scientists on their own ground."

The college concentrates on scientific principles, rather than on detailed application of science to particular weapons. The weapons themselves may become quickly outmoded but the scientific principles still hold true and the officer who understands them can keep up with the advance of weapons.

The college has two divisions.

Half its students are young subalterns fresh from Sandhurst Military Academy which does not provide the same sort of engineering and scientific training as West Point.

The rest are volunteers from the technical branches of the British army. Their job is to link the arms scientist and engineer with the needs and uses of the army.

The young officers from Sandhurst get engineering training equivalent to a scientific degree from London University.

The volunteers from the technical staff must have scientific qualifications from university training and pick one of three branches for further intensive study: Weapons, fighting vehicles and fire direction.

Weapons include such things as rockets and guided missiles; fighting vehicles study is heavily concentrated on tanks; fire direction takes in radio, radar and communications.

Subjects taught include mathematics, ballistics, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, mechanical engineering and machine designing, guns, rocket motors, electrical engineering, the use of computing machines and radar.

Officers from dominion armies also attend the technical staff courses. Canada has sent 35 officers and Australia 15 since the war. The only non-commonwealth which has sent officers here is the United States. Three Americans have taken the technical staff course. None is there now.

The college began in 1850 as a course of special studies for a handful of artillery officers.

It reached its present stage of high development in 1946 when it was moved to Shrivenham. The buildings—a big spread of dormitory like structures spreading farther than a big college campus—were erected for barracks in the 1930's.

The first American carpet mill was started in 1791 in Philadelphia.

The Old Second Guesser

Entertaining A Four-Year-Old

WE'D BEEN TALKING fondly about the possibility of grandchildren when we met a youngster on the East Hampton beach last summer who had all the charm of Jimmy Stewart and all the courage of Eddie Rickenbacker. He was three. We swam together, and he wasn't afraid of the waves. When the other kids shied from barking dogs, he walked boldly up to them.

"Why don't you let me adopt John?" I said to his mother one day. She had been a nurse in the war.

"Then what would we do?" she asked.

"Well, you have two more," I hinted.

So we compromised, and he came up to the farm to visit us for four days recently. I thought all I had to do was to put on his overalls, and he would follow me around and admire me. He hadn't been in the house ten minutes, and I had barely turned my back when he began to spin all the knobs on the television set which caused considerable confusion on the screen like a chameleon trying to make good on plaid. Incidentally we had to hire an expert to come to unscramble it. We still get effects that look like ocean waves instead of images.

John and I went down to the barn where he was most enthusiastic about all the animals, except he must have read his picture book wrong or somewhere had gotten the idea you milked a horse. I pulled him out from under the animal's legs before he got his brains kicked out and restrained him from going to work on the cows during their rest period.

Always friendly and brave for a four-year-old which he now is, I took him along to the village when I went to call on a sick neighbor. We stopped at the drugstore, and he demanded a strawberry ice cream cone which I immediately got him, although his mother had told us never to feed him between meals. It kept him occupied for about half an hour.

At six the next morning I heard a knock on my door, and there was John in his pajamas wide awake and ready for business. He crawled into bed with me, a comfortable cozy companion, and began to pet a poodle which had moved up into the party, too. At quarter after six, the dog began to gulp, and I chased her off just before she was sick at her stomach. By half past, I gave in and got up for the day. It proved to be a pretty long one, too.

John was an inventive and inquisitive little cuss. Shortly after breakfast, I turned him out with a couple of dogs to get some country air and to give me some peace and a chance to read the Sunday papers. After a half hour, things seemed to be pretty quiet, so I went out to check and soon realized the reason for the silence. My friend had found the pipe through which oil is poured into the tank for the furnace. There was a ring with a padlock on it, but it had not been snapped shut. What good is an unlocked lock? John had taken it out, lifted the lid, and was walking to the driveway picking up handfuls of gravel and sand which he was pouring down the opening. I don't know how many loads he had transplanted before I stopped him. The furnace expert said he wouldn't be able to tell for sure what the result would be until next winter, a fine time to find out. Between innings he would ring all the bells he could find in the house and blow the horn of any idle automobile.

Before he went to bed that night, I said to him,

"Now you came in and woke me up this morning. Tomorrow it's my turn, so wait for me."

By seven, I had heard nothing from my guest, and went into his room where I found him on top of the bed, stark naked. It seems he had had a slight accident due to the delay, but the little fellow had stuck faithfully to my instructions.

The next day his mother and father came to get him, and we told them how good their son had been and what a model guest. At that, he is a fine little fellow, and probably a whole lot better than I was at his age or perhaps even now. My mother used to say I was a sour baby—whatever that means, but I suspect it is no compliment. At this writing, I am not so sure about grandchildren, although after my workout with John, I think I could take them in my stride.

Future British Generals Train For Science War

By GLENN WILLIAMS

SHRIVENHAM, England — (AP) — The British army has decided scientific war is here to stay. It is assigning its brightest young future generals for special scientific training here.

The Military College of Science was established here in 1946. Its doings were kept dark for five years, but recently a small party of correspondents was conducted through it.

About 150 men a year enter the college. The courses are tough. About 20 per cent of the officers flunk out before they're finished.

The young officers learn the scientific principles of weapons, including atom bombs, rockets and radar.

Gen. W. J. Eldridge, who commands the college, told the correspondents "the college endeavors to educate its men for their work up to 15 or 20 years ahead."

"From the army point of view, the technical officer is the go-between the soldier-user and the armament engineers and scientists," Gen. Eldridge said. "It is vitally important for him to be able to meet the scientists on their own ground."

The college concentrates on scientific principles, rather than on detailed application of science to particular weapons. The weapons themselves may become quickly outmoded but the scientific principles still hold true and the officer who understands them can keep up with the advance of weapons.

The college has two divisions.

Half its students are young subalterns fresh from Sandhurst Military Academy which does not provide the same sort of engineering and scientific training as West Point.

The rest are volunteers from the technical branches of the British army. Their job is to link the arms scientist and engineer with the needs and uses of the army.

The young officers from Sandhurst get engineering training equivalent to a scientific degree from London University.

The volunteers from the technical staff must have scientific qualifications from university training and pick one of three branches for further intensive study: Weapons, fighting vehicles and fire direction.

Weapons include such things as rockets and guided missiles; fighting vehicles study is heavily concentrated on tanks; fire direction takes in radio, radar and communications.

Subjects taught include mathematics, ballistics, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, mechanical engineering and machine designing, guns, rocket motors, electrical engineering, the use of computing machines and radar.

Officers from dominion armies also attend the technical staff courses. Canada has sent 35 officers and Australia 15 since the war. The only non-commonwealth which has sent officers here is the United States. Three Americans have taken the technical staff course. None is there now.

The college began in 1850 as a course of special studies for a handful of artillery officers.

It reached its present stage of high development in 1946 when it was moved to Shrivenham. The buildings—a big spread of dormitory like structures spreading farther than a big college campus—were erected for barracks in the 1930's.

The first American carpet mill was started in 1791 in Philadelphia.

uerto Rican Is Over Eight eet Tall And Still Growing

NEW YORK—(INS)—An eight ot 2 inch tall Puerto Rican giant me to New York this week, and s presence in the big town brought ore gasps than Gulliver did among e Lilliputians.

The giant's name is Felipe Birrier. e's only 22 years old and still owing. He's well built, weighs 275 und and has one of those youthful waistlines, only 44 inches around.

Physicians say his abnormal growth is a result of a glandular condition, and that he will continue to soar until he reaches the age of 30 or 35.

They say he eventually will stop somewhere around 10 feet.

Felipe's parents, three sisters and two brothers in Puerto Rico are normal sized. He was too until he was 15—then the clouds started to descend about his head.

Like Gulliver, Felipe collects crowds as he wanders about the big town. Because of that, he doesn't like to go out on the streets. He's shy and blushes quickly when girls look at him.

He came from Puerto Rico with his manager, Luis Ramirez, hoping to land a job with a circus or at an amusement park. A Puerto Rican theater in the Bronx signed him up for a short engagement on first sight.

His suits, naturally, are extra, extra, extra, extra long. His shoes cost $75 a pair and are size 18J.

Felipe is staying with friends in Upper Manhattan. They're glad he landed a job so quickly. Their reason? Just look at Felipe's breakfast menu:

17 pork chops, two dozen eggs, two quarts of milk and two loaves of bread.

A form of football was played by the ancient Greeks and Romans.

UN Responsibility

The proposal that the responsibility for major decisions of military policy in Korea should be taken over by the United Nations General Assembly has been advanced by the American Association for the United Nations. This is a private organization which has no official connection with the international body or the American government. As things are now, although the war in Korea is officially a United Nations action the General Assembly takes no immediate responsibility toward it except for the general sanction and certain restraints, chiefly that against violation of Chinese territory, which have not been formally ratified.

By default the responsibility for actual military direction falls on the United States. This is undesirable both for America and for the UN. It is unjust that American officials should carry this great responsibility alone. It is not good for the United Nations that the Assembly is content to be a figurehead in this important enterprise, and the fact that the show in Korea is being run from Washington adds to the differences and tensions among the great powers.

At present, however, it is idle to dream that the General Assembly might take over. The initiative in Korea was taken by the United States because it seemed clear that the Assembly would not do anything effective about Korea without such leadership, and because the Assembly had no military forces at its disposal. These conditions have not changed very much. Strengthening of the United Nations, so that the Assembly could assume real command in Korea, would be to the advantage of all. But the strength must be created before it can be used.

Farm Labor Recruits

Everybody admits that something must be done about the hundreds of thousands of Mexican "wetbacks" who cross the border illegally and take jobs on farms in our Western and Southwestern states. Often if not usually they get wages well below U.S. standards and live under wretched conditions. On the one hand they are accused of competing unfairly with regular U.S. farm labor, on the other hand they are credited with harvesting crops that would otherwise go to waste because of shortage in other farm labor.

This week the Senate is scheduled to take action on the bill of Senator Ellender (D., La.) to facilitate and regularize the entry of Mexican farm workers actually needed in this country. A somewhat similar bill has been approved by the House Agriculture Committee.

Under a 1949 agreement with Mexico, 67,421 Mexican workers were imported in 1950 and 106,845 in 1949 (including 87,220 wetbacks legalized). About 30,000 of the 1950 legal entrants went to Texas, 13,000 to New Mexico, 9,500 to Arkansas, 9,000 to California. These totals do not include all of the workers held under contract from a previous year.

This sectional problem is part of the national problem of fewer farm workers at a time when greater farm production is being urged to meet defense requirements. The Agriculture Department says that six per cent more man-days are needed on farms this year than were used last year, the National Grange reports that half a million fewer farm workers are available.

The farmer is faced not only with difficulty in finding workers but also with paying higher wages for those he can get. On April 1 the composite hourly rate for farm labor over the country as a whole was 13 per cent higher than a year before. Under these circumstances the Government has a real job on its hands in trying to increase total farm production.

No Benefit In Exercise

The middle-aged man who sees no point in taking daily exercise, not even to the extent of an occasional golf game, but prefers to spend his leisure time in an easy chair, will derive satisfaction from the results of an interesting experiment conducted by the University of Minnesota and intended primarily to garner information on heart disease.

More than 300 men volunteered as guinea pigs for the experiment. They included fats and leans—all middle-aged business and professional men.

Put through all sorts of physical activities, even to running on a treadmill, they were given 56 different physical tests, including blood pressure, pulse rate and heart action. The big, strong, athletic type was found to be in no better physical condition than those whose only exercise consisted in walking to their automobiles.

Nor did the fat boy show up too badly, although it was suggested that he should be a bit more careful to have his heart examined occasionally because of his weight.

The late Chauncey Depew, who lived to a ripe old age, said the only exercise he took was acting as pallbearer for his golf-playing friends. According to the doctors who conducted the Minnesota tests, Old Sedentary Sam showed up just as well as did those who spent their leisure on the golf course or in a gymnasium. Exercise, they assert, does not make men healthy.

Fore!

Golfing enthusiasts greet spring with as much zest as the poet seeking inspiration. The real dyed-in-the-wool golfer hasn't been idle during the months when snow and ice covered the fairways. He has been practicing his putting on the living room rug and swinging his driver to the great danger of his wife's favorite vase.

Every spring the golfer feels a surge of new hope. Things will be different this year, he feels sure. Those putts that lipped the cup and rolled out last year will go in easily this season and the sand traps will not be so deep. Man is by nature an optimist.

One does not need to be gifted with psychic powers to predict that before long the golfer's optimism will dwindle. He will become convinced again that he takes his clubs out of the bag to do penance for his earthly sins. The sand trap on the fourth hole will once more grow to the proportions of the Grand Canyon, and golf clubs will lie where their owners broke them in anger at the perversity which makes them strike the ball in the wrong manner.

But regardless of what he suffers from the hot summer suns, the scheming of nature and the manufacturers of his equipment, the golfer is out again in the spring, convinced that "This year everything will be different."

How To Keep Well

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Restoration Of Breathing

THE HEART may beat for many minutes after respiration ceases. This is the reason why life-saving procedures are started whenever an individual suddenly stops breathing, turns blue, and appears to be dead (asphyxia). But the old ticker will not go on forever and unless resuscitation is instituted promptly, its beating becomes weaker and weaker and within a short time stops entirely.

Resuscitation is a procedure all of us should know. There are more than eight methods of artificial respiration and in addition various forms of inhalers are available through which oxygen or a mixture of this gas and carbon dioxide is administered. Oxygen accelerates recovery but something else is needed to encourage air and gases to enter and leave the lungs.

• — • — •

Most of us associate artificial respiration with drowning but breathing stops in other accidents and diseases. Such mishaps include electric shock, gas, carbon monoxide fumes, smoke, poisoning, head injuries, and occasionally during anesthetization. At any rate, these are reasons enough why every one should learn the procedure. Time is an important element and if it were necessary to wait for the physician or pulmotor squad, or to drive the victim two miles to a hospital, the majority of sufferers would not survive.

The Schafer prone pressure method is one of the oldest and best known. It is taught by the Red Cross and almost every Boy Scout has been instructed in its use. The Eve method is a more modern rendition of the old "barrel roll"; the subject is placed on a teeter-totter which is raised and lowered in rhythm. The Nielsen method is popular in Scandinavian countries and consists in raising and lowering the arms, which forces ventilation of the lungs. In the Emerson procedure the hips are raised four inches off the ground and lowered while the individual is in a prone position.

• — • — •

The most recent maneuver to be introduced is a combination of the Schafer and Emerson methods. It has the disadvantage of being more difficult but, according to Dr. Archer S. Gordon and associates, is most effective. The operator lifts or turns the hips of that patient at least 12 times a minute and each lift is alternated with the push on the chest of the prone pressure maneuver. It is tiring but after the first crucial minutes the hip movement is done less often; after every third or fourth push on the chest will be sufficient. A variation is to kneel astride the victim, push on the chest, and then grasp at the distant hip and roll it over onto the rescuer's knee and back again. Ventilation of the lungs then proceeds as well as in normal breathing.

(Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet giving details on various methods of artificial respiration.)

ALBUMEN

D. C. writes: Is albumen in the urine a serious condition?

REPLY

Usually not, if it is transient. If it persists, the symptoms may indicate kidney disease. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on albuminuria.

NOTCHED TEETH

V. T. writes :What are Hutchinson's teeth?

REPLY

Notched, peg shaped incisors that occur in congenital syphilis. They were first described by Sir Jonathan Hutchinson in 1861. His name is associated with many other eponyms because he was a good observer and wrote down everything he saw.

MUMPS

Mrs. D. writes: My boys, aged 1½ to 12, now have the mumps. My neighbors tell me the children may become sterile because of the disease. Is this possible?

REPLY

Your neighbors are certainly encouraging. Sterility as a complication of mumps is rare before puberty.

SUGGESTION

L. B. writes: When a physician discovers that a patient has diabetes, why does he assume a defeatist attitude rather than try to rehabilitate the pancreas? When my doctor found I had the disease he told me there is no cure but I felt he ought to have tried pancreatic stimulation. Is there any merit to my argument?

REPLY

The physician is not taking a defeatist attitude when he states there is no cure; he does not wish to raise false hopes. Furthermore, he encourages the victim by urging him to take care of himself with diet and insulin, if needed. The pancreas is stimulated easily by the administration of sugar but the gland does not have enough insulin to handle the sugar. The situation [illegible] saying. First Drive Of The Spring Offensive

DREW PEARSON on—

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Princess Rita Relaxes At Rustic Retreat; Pearson Farm Loses Face When Water Fails; Crisis Settles Family Well-Digging Argument

WASHINGTON—While the most glamorous man in the U.S.A. was in Washington testifying before the Senate, the most glamorous gal in the U.S.A. was also near Washington, though she kept a long way from the Senate.

Though newspaper headlines played up reports that Rita Hayworth was in Reno preparing to shed her title of princess, actually she was spending a few days on the Pearson farm in Maryland where she seemed more interested in 47 queens of the dairy barn, a couple of horses, and our prize Holstein bulls, "Harry S. Truman" and "Prediction No. 1" than in the nearby MacArthur show in the Senate.

After trying to cover the latter show, I got out to the farm late one afternoon to find a much more difficult problem staring me stark in the face.

Up until that point, things apparently had gone well. The farm hands had taken the presence of visiting royalty and Hollywood glamor in their stride. The dairyman's children did not even ask Miss Hayworth for an autograph, nor did our conscientious colored helper, Harry Clipper, a plate-passing deacon at the Seneca Baptist Church, ask for a contribution. Nobody was thrown by the horses, Harry Truman did not break down the fence as he usually does on the slightest excuse; while the dogwood, the tulips, and the iris put on a glamor show rivaling anything in Hollywood.

No Bath For Rita

However, I could see the minute I got out of my car and greeted Mrs. P that all was not well. Mrs. P had that steely glint in her eye which I had not seen for a long, long time—in fact, not since the hogs got loose and made mincemeat out of her deck tennis court.

"The water," said Mrs. P, "is off. Just how is Rita going to take a bath?"

"Have you called Leon Lowery?" I asked, referring to our neighbor who can fix anything from my grandson's nursing bottle to the twine-knotter on a new Holland pickup hay-bailer.

"Leon is busy and won't come," replied the little woman.

"I'm sure if you told him that Rita Hayworth needed a bath he'd come in a minute," I suggested.

"It isn't only a bath," reminded Mrs. P, who had been faced with the drought all day. "How do we wash the dishes? And what do we drink?"

"Well, we could try gin." But the crack didn't go over at all big.

"Maybe your cows would like gin, too?" shot back Mrs. P, aiming at a weak spot. "If you're not worried about baths for Rita and the Jackson Leighters and all the dirty dishes, at least I know you'll worry about your cows."

This, I confess, made me think twice. Because when cows get no water to drink, they give less milk, and when they give less milk my score goes down; and I have been aiming for a milk score that would beat Carroll Morgan's, who taunts me with his high score every time we meet.

Finally, I got Leon Lowery on the telephone. He had ordered an extra part for the pump a month ago, but Jake Snyder of Farmers Supply had forgotten to order it. So the pump couldn't get fixed that night, Rita couldn't get a bath, the dishes couldn't get washed, I couldn't shave in the morning, and my cows would get a lower score than Carroll Morgan's.

"Maybe Rita could do without a bath," I suggested hopefully. "I'll bet when she was a kid back in Brooklyn she even argued with her mother that she didn't want to bathe at all."

"Yes, but what about your cows?" reminded Mrs. P.

"Well, that's different," I admitted.

"And we can't flush the toilets."

"But we can use the Byrd house," I argued, referring to the Chic Sales job up near the dairy barn. "Anyway, your and my ancestors, and even Rita's, never had any toilets to flush. Why should we be so snobbish?"

Lizards In The Pipe

"Furthermore," I argued, I confess a little desperately, "look at New York City and all the trouble they had about water. We're not the only ones who have problems. Or take Los Angeles. Mayor Bowron out there is always making my daughter quit watering her lawn.

"Furthermore," say I, "I would like to quote an issue of a noted column—The Washington Merry-Go-Round—which recently said, 'A calamity worse than the atom bomb is being studied by scientists—the increasing shortage of water in the United States.'

"You and Rita will just have to get ready for the ultimate future," I concluded, "and the fact that our pump broke down is just good practice for the days that lie ahead."

However, it didn't do any good. By this time I had a strong suspicion where the argument was heading. There has long been a difference of opinion inside the Pearson family about the relative merits of water from a spring and water from a well. Miss Hayworth, as far as I could see, was not really perturbed about her bath. I imagine there were a good many days traveling through Africa with Prince Ali Khan that she never got a bath at all, and I gathered this was not the grounds for their impending divorce. So I had sort of an inkling of what was coming.

"Don't you think," said Mrs. P, changing to her most dulcet tones, "that what we really need is a well all our own—a well that we don't have to share with your 47 thirsty cows and the farm families? After all, a well would be so much better than a spring, with all those lizards always crawling into the pipe. I think you should call up a well-digger and get started tomorrow. After all, you're always building some silo or other that doesn't do any good except stick up in the air and spoil the scenery."

"But how is Jackson Leighter going to reduce if he doesn't help me fill the silo?" say I, referring to my well-padded radio agent, who, with Mrs. Leighter, has been traveling with Rita.

However, I saw it was no use. Rita Hayworth is a charming gal and a swell sport. She didn't mind the water shortage at all. But she has done me a great disfavor. Thanks to her, I have been euchred into drilling a well.

However, though Mrs. P doesn't know it yet, I am going to connect the well to the cow barn. I just can't afford to let my milk score drop.

Firm Cooperation

By MARK SULLIVAN

THERE is an American condition, a prevailing emotion and judgment on the part of our people, which the British government and people need to understand and take account of, in the interest of all-round helpfulness.

The American people regard China, under its present Communist government, as an enemy; It is making war on us, daily our soldiers die under its attacks. The war it is making on us is, from the American point of view, unprovoked and wanton. We had made no attack on China, had scrupulously refrained from intrusion on Chinese territory.

In this condition our people have been surprised and disquieted by actions and attitudes the British have taken within a period of a few weeks past. The British have suggested to our State Department that in the conference about to be held to complete a peace settlement for Japan, Communist China should be given some status, at the least a right to be present.

Replied Firmly

To this suggestion our State Department, speaking presumably its own view and most certainly the view of the American people, replied firmly. In effect it pointed out that we do not recognize the Communist government of China the "Peking regime," that we recognize the Nationalist government under Chiang Kai-shek. Firmly our State Department said the United States "has not and does not contemplate discussion with the Peking regime regarding the Japanese peace settlement."

Soon after the Communist government of China had established itself, Britain recognized it. Later and up to the present time the British have urged that the Communist government of China be admitted to the United Nations. Taking notice of this our State Department a few weeks ago spoke clearly: "The United States has vigorously opposed the admission of the Peking regime to the United Nations. We shall continue to follow that policy."

A few weeks ago Britain suggested to our State Department that the island of Formosa should ultimately be given to Communist China. For this notion, there was some slight technical justification. In a conference of Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang Kai-shek at Cairo in 1943 it had been agreed that Formosa, long in possession of Japan, should be given to China. But the China of that time was the China that was our ally in the war under the Nationalist government of Chiang-Kai-shek. Britain's recent suggestion that Formosa go to Communist China was rejected by our State Department.

Had Unfortunate Effect

The recent suggestions from Britain, having an apparent spirit of softness toward Communist China, had an unfortunate effect in America in several respects. Our people, firmly resisting the aggression of Communist China in Korea, and regarding Communist China as an enemy, wondered whether Britain felt as strongly as we. The British suggestions embarrassed our State Department, for it was under accusation of having been soft itself when the Communists were in process of taking over China.

The British have now acceded to our State Department's rejection of its recent suggestions, and these can be regarded as having had the status of suggestions. The whole picture of the relations between Britain and the United States can now be seen as it fundamentally is. That relation is one of firm cooperation in the defense of the non-Communist world against aggression on a global scale by Russian communism. All the plans for conduct of this resistance rely upon Britain as an indispensible buttress. Effective resistance by us globally by air or sea would depend upon use of bases that are in the control of Britain.

Washington understands this fully. It understands also the willingness of Britain to cooperate in this and other respects.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON. — Secretary Marshall's testimony is in many respects even more sensational than that of General MacArthur.

For it tells the American people for the first time that they have completely lost their independence of miliary action in the midst of a war in which 350,000 American boys are engaged.

It tells that decisions made by the President, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are vetoed in secret by other governments without an opportunity for the public opinion of the United States or of the world to be apprised of the facts.

It tells that, although the United States has contributed the bulk of the troops in Korea, the 13 governments which have contributed token forces decided to deny us the right to apply the military doctrine of pursuing the enemy—known as "hot pursuit."

It tells that the United Nations has appointed the United States as agent to conduct the military operations but that the agent cannot perform those military operations without continuously obtaining the consent of these allies.

It tells that the United States, though conscious of the importance of an economic blockade to stop strategic materials and munitions from getting to the enemy, has not succeeded in persuading the principal UN countries now involved in that trade to stop it, even though 10 months of war in Korea have elapsed.

It tells that all these troubles and frictions between the United States and its allies were never communicated to General MacArthur except in the vaguest terms.

It tells, by implication, that the famous 13-nation declaration which was supposed to bring about a negotiation of a "cease fire" was never sent to General MacArthur and that only a brief message saying such announcement was planned went to him on March 20 last.

It tells that the United States Government at present opposes the entry of Red China into the UN and opposes turning Formosa over to Communist China but that the United States Government is nevertheless willing to discuss these subjects as matters for negotiation with the Red Chinese when they agree to a "cease fire."

It tells that the United States will adhere to that policy but it doesn't tell whether the United States will use its veto to turn down such a reward for aggression or will merely bow to the will of the UN countries eventually, as it has done on some of the military measures proposed to the UN.

It tells that General MacArthur carried out his military instructions as Far East commander and did not violate any military orders but that his public statements—his letters answering a member of Congress, Representative Martin, and his interviews answering questions that were asked by the press concerning military operations—were distasteful to the President and his advisers and really caused his dismissal.

It tells that only four men sat in with President Truman and recommended summary dismissal of General MacArthur—Messrs. Acheson, Harriman, Bradley and Marshall.

It tells that the Joint Chiefs favored a replacement but did not have anything to do with the form of dismissal. It doesn't tell whether the Joint Chiefs were told that the President was displeased with MacArthur's statements and was considering a change in command.

It tells that the summary dismissal was decided upon suddenly as a means of preventing General MacArthur from making any further statements to the press and from developing a sort of "cumulative affair" of publicity. This has since come about anyway with probably more cumulative statements and hearings than anybody ever imagined.

It tells that the Secretary of De- believe the enemy can be driven out believe the enemy can b driven out of Korea but he hopes they will withdraw after their offensives fail. He doesn't think bombardment on Manchurian bases will chase them out, either, though he concedes that diversionary operations such as a blockade and other military efforts in Southeast Asia may cause them to tire of their effort to stay in Korea.

It tells that in a moment of great crisis—when MacArthur's troops were being pushed back last December after Red China entered the war—the UN allies became frightened and began to limit the operations of the UN troops, especially in fighting back in the air.

It tells that instructions went to General MacArthur forbidding him to bomb even two big distributing centers in North Korea which were 35 miles below the northern border of the country and well within Korea itself.

It tells that, despite General MacArthur's titles as supreme commander in Japan and UN commander and commander-in-chief of Far Eastern forces, Secretary Marshall regarded General MacArthur as just another "local theatre commander," without the latitude of expression to comment on military events that Eisenhower had or Nimitz had or MacArthur himself had during the last war, and without even the right to engage in psychological warfare in his own theatre of action because it might offend UN allies.

There are many more things revealed, the significance of which will become apparent as the hearings continue. But none is more vital than the revelation that America, although contributing the bulk of the military forces and the supplies, has surrendered her independence of action and her leadership and has abandoned 350,000 American boys to the whim of foreign cabinets.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The China Story

THIS is a good time to read Freda Utley's "The China Story," a new book which sets out to establish by facts how the United States lost 400,000,000 allies. Freda Utley knows the Far East and has written competently concerning it. She states her conclusions:

"One thing is certain. Communist conquest of a large part of the world since the defeat of Germany and Japan, and the threat of even greater conquests, was not unavoidable. In the first part of this book, I shall show how what we did—and what we failed to do—in the Far East led us straight down the path to war in Korea."

This is a bare-to-the-bone, fact upon fact account of how the United States, by error and lack of understanding, not only gave China to Soviet Russia but brought the Korean War upon us. In view of the increasing velocity of the quarrel over facts between General Douglas MacArthur and President Truman, it will be advantageous to check what appears among the controversial writers on the subject against Miss Utley's summary of events.

Any understanding of the Far Eastern situation, no matter where one's partisanship lies, must go back to Yalta, the Far Eastern terms of which Miss Utley summarizes as follows:

"1. The 'lease' of Port Arthur to Russia as a naval base;

"2. The 'internationalization' of Dairen with 'pre-eminent rights' for the Soviet Union in this largest of China's northeastern ports;

"3. The 'joint operation' of the Manchurian railways by China and Russia, with the 'pre-eminent interests' of the Soviet Union safeguarded."

It was in pursuit of the Yalta terms that General Marshall was sent to China to manage, cajole, arrange or force Chiang Kai-shek to conform to this agreement to which neither he nor China was a party. A memorandum by Secretary of State James Byrnes (1945) on this subject stated:

"Pending the outcome of General Marshall's discussions with Chinese leaders in Chungking . . . Further transportation of Chinese troops to North China, except as North China ports may be necessary for the movement of troops and supplies into Manchuria, will be held in abeyance."

In other words, sanctions were imposed upon our ally and friend, Nationalist China, in the interest of Soviet Russia. This appeasement has already resulted in the death of more than 10,500 Americans and more than 62,000 casualties.

General Marshall has never understood either China or communism. Apparently he could not, even in 1947, grasp the nature of Russian imperialism nor the extent of international Marxism. He seemed to be astonished that Chiang Kai-shek would not form an alliance with the Communists and, as Miss Utley says, he accepted the Marxist definition of a reactionary. This is what General Marshall declared on January 7, 1947:

"On the side of the national government, which is in effect the Kuomintang, there is a dominant group of reactionaries who have been opposed, in my opinion, to almost every effort I have made to influence the formation of genuine coalition government . . . They were quite frank in publicly stating that their belief that cooperation by the Chinese Communist party in the government was inconceivable and that only a policy of force could settle the issue."

Miss Utley is a former Communist who has devoted much of her life, at great personal sacrifice, to undo the evils of this party. She says of herself:

"I first met Owen Lattimore in April 1936 in Moscow, where I had been living for nearly six years as the wife of a Russian (a Sov[illegible] citizen but not a member of the Communist party). I was employed as a research worker in the Pacific Ocean section of the Institute of World Economy and Politics. This institute had become the Russian branch of the Institute of Pacific Relations a year or so earlier when the Kremlin switched over to the 'popular front' policy, and the Communist Academy (of which the institute formed a part) was rechristened Academy of Sciences. For the benefit of the visiting Americans, a room had been taken in another part of the town and a notice put up saying 'Soviet Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations.' It was here that E. C. Carter, president of the American Institute, and Owen Lattimore were first received by the leading Communists of the Institute. As I had left the Communist party years earlier, I could not attend their private meetings..."

UN Responsibility

The proposal that the responsibility for major decisions of military policy in Korea should be taken over by the United Nations General Assembly has been advanced by the American Association for the United Nations. This is a private organization which has no official connection with the international body or the American government. As things are now, although the war in Korea is officially a United Nations action the General Assembly takes no immediate responsibility toward it except for the general sanction and certain restraints, chiefly that against violation of Chinese territory, which have not been formally ratified.

By default the responsibility for actual military direction falls on the United States. This is undesirable both for America and for the UN. It is unjust that American officials should carry this great responsibility alone. It is not good for the United Nations that the Assembly is content to be a figurehead in this important enterprise, and the fact that the show in Korea is being run from Washington adds to the differences and tensions among the great powers.

At present, however, it is idle to dream that the General Assembly might take over. The initiative in Korea was taken by the United States because it seemed clear that the Assembly would not do anything effective about Korea without such leadership, and because the Assembly had no military forces at its disposal. These conditions have not changed very much. Strengthening of the United Nations, so that the Assembly could assume real command in Korea, would be to the advantage of all. But the strength must be created before it can be used.

Farm Labor Recruits

Everybody admits that something must be done about the hundreds of thousands of Mexican "wetbacks" who cross the border illegally and take jobs on farms in our Western and Southwestern states. Often if not usually they get wages well below U.S. standards and live under wretched conditions. On the one hand they are accused of competing unfairly with regular U.S. farm labor, on the other hand they are credited with harvesting crops that would otherwise go to waste because of shortage in other farm labor.

This week the Senate is scheduled to take action on the bill of Senator Ellender (D., La.) to facilitate and regularize the entry of Mexican farm workers actually needed in this country. A somewhat similar bill has been approved by the House Agriculture Committee.

Under a 1949 agreement with Mexico, 67,421 Mexican workers were imported in 1950 and 106,845 in 1949 (including 87,220 wetbacks legalized). About 30,000 of the 1950 legal entrants went to Texas, 13,000 to New Mexico, 9,500 to Arkansas, 9,000 to California. These totals do not include all of the workers held under contract from a previous year.

This sectional problem is part of the national problem of fewer farm workers at a time when greater farm production is being urged to meet defense requirements. The Agriculture Department says that six per cent more man-days are needed on farms this year than were used last year, the National Grange reports that half a million fewer farm workers are available.

The farmer is faced not only with difficulty in finding workers but also with paying higher wages for those he can get. On April 1 the composite hourly rate for farm labor over the country as a whole was 13 per cent higher than a year before. Under these circumstances the Government has a real job on its hands in trying to increase total farm production.

No Benefit In Exercise

The middle-aged man who sees no point in taking daily exercise, not even to the extent of an occasional golf game, but prefers to spend his leisure time in an easy chair, will derive satisfaction from the results of an interesting experiment conducted by the University of Minnesota and intended primarily to garner information on heart disease.

More than 300 men volunteered as guinea pigs for the experiment. They included fats and leans—all middle-aged business and professional men.

Put through all sorts of physical activities, even to running on a treadmill, they were given 56 different physical tests, including blood pressure, pulse rate and heart action. The big, strong, athletic type was found to be in no better physical condition than those whose only exercise consisted in walking to their automobiles.

Nor did the fat boy show up too badly, although it was suggested that he should be a bit more careful to have his heart examined occasionally because of his weight.

The late Chauncey Depew, who lived to a ripe old age, said the only exercise he took was acting as pallbearer for his golf-playing friends. According to the doctors who conducted the Minnesota tests, Old Sedentary Sam showed up just as well as did those who spent their leisure on the golf course or in a gymnasium. Exercise, they assert, does not make men healthy.

Golfing enthusiasts greet spring with as much zest as the poet seeking inspiration. The real dyed-in-the-wool golfer hasn't been idle during the months when snow and ice covered the fairways. He has been practicing his putting on the living room rug and swinging his driver to the great danger of his wife's favorite vase.

Every spring the golfer feels a surge of new hope. Things will be different this year, he feels sure. Those putts that lipped the cup and rolled out last year will go in easily this season and the sand traps will not be so deep. Man is by nature an optimist.

One does not need to be gifted with psychic powers to predict that before long the golfer's optimism will dwindle. He will become convinced again that he takes his clubs out of the bag to do penance for his earthly sins. The sand trap on the fourth hole will once more grow to the proportions of the Grand Canyon, and golf clubs will lie where their owners broke them in anger at the perversity which makes them strike the ball in the wrong manner.

But regardless of what he suffers from the hot summer suns, the scheming of nature and the manufacturers of his equipment, the golfer is out again in the spring, convinced that "This year everything will be different."

How To Keep Well

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Restoration Of Breathing

THE HEART may beat for many minutes after respiration ceases. This is the reason why lifesaving procedures are started whenever an individual suddenly stops breathing, turns blue, and appears to be dead (asphyxia). But the old ticker will not go on forever and unless resuscitation is instituted promptly, its beating becomes weaker and weaker and within a short time stops entirely.

Resuscitation is a procedure all of us should know. There are more than eight methods of artificial respiration and in addition various forms of inhalers are available through which oxygen or a mixture of this gas and carbon dioxide is administered. Oxygen accelerates recovery but something else is needed to encourage air and gases to enter and leave the lungs.

• — • — •

Most of us associate artificial respiration with drowning but breathing stops in other accidents and diseases. Such mishaps include electric shock, gas, carbon monoxide fumes, smoke, poisoning, head injuries, and occasionally during anesthetization. At any rate, these are reasons enough why every one should learn the procedure. Time is an important element and if it were necessary to wait for the physician or pulmotor squad, or to drive the victim two miles to a hospital, the majority of sufferers would not survive.

The Schafer prone pressure method is one of the oldest and best known. It is taught by the Red Cross and almost every Boy Scout has been instructed in its use. The Eve method is a more modern rendition of the old "barrel roll"; the subject is placed on a teeter-totter which is raised and lowered in rhythm. The Nielsen method is popular in Scandinavian countries and consists in raising and lowering the arms, which forces ventilation of the lungs. In the Emerson procedure the hips are raised four inches off the ground and lowered while the individual is in a prone position.

• — • — •

The most recent maneuver to be introduced is a combination of the Schafer and Emerson methods. It has the disadvantage of being more difficult but, according to Dr. Archer S. Gordon and associates, is most effective. The operator lifts or turns the hips of that patient at least 12 times a minute and each lift is alternated with the push on the chest of the prone pressure maneuver. It is tiring but after the first crucial minutes the hip movement is done less often; after every third or fourth push on the chest will be sufficient. A variation is to kneel astride the victim, push on the chest, and then grasp at the distant hip and roll it over onto the rescuer's knee and back again. Ventilation of the lungs then proceeds as well as in normal breathing.

ALBUMEN

D. C. writes: Is albumen in the urine a serious condition?

REPLY

Usually not, if it is transient. If it persists, the symptoms may indicate kidney disease. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on albuminuria.

NOTCHED TEETH

V. T. writes :What are Hutchinson's teeth?

REPLY

Notched, peg shaped incisors that occur in congenital syphilis. They were first described by Sir Jonathan Hutchinson in 1861. His name is associated with many other eponyms because he was a good observer and wrote down everything he saw.

MUMPS

Mrs. D. writes: My boys, aged 1½ to 12, now have the mumps. My neighbors tell me the children may become sterile because of the disease. Is this possible?

REPLY

Your neighbors are certainly encouraging. Sterility as a complication of mumps is rare before puberty.

SUGGESTION

L. B. writes: When a physician discovers that a patient has diabetes, why does he assume a defeatist attitude rather than try to rehabilitate the pancreas? When my doctor found I had the disease he told me there is no cure but I felt he ought to have tried pancreatic stimulation. Is there any merit to my argument?

REPLY

The physician is not taking a defeatist attitude when he states there is no cure; he does not wish to raise false hopes. Furthermore, he encourages the victim by urging him to take care of himself with diet and insulin, if needed. The pancreas is stimulated easily by the administration of sugar but the gland does not have enough insulin to handle the sugar. First Drive Of The Spring Offensive

DREW PEARSON on—

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Princess Rita Relaxes At Rustic Retreat; Pearson Farm Loses Face When Water Fails; Crisis Settles Family Well-Digging Argument

WASHINGTON—While the most glamorous man in the U.S.A. was in Washington testifying before the Senate, the most glamorous gal in the U.S.A. was also near Washington, though she kept a long way from the Senate.

Though newspaper headlines played up reports that Rita Hayworth was in Reno preparing to shed her title of princess, actually she was spending a few days on the Pearson farm in Maryland where she seemed more interested in 47 queens of the dairy barn, a couple of horses, and our prize Holstein bulls, "Harry S. Truman" and "Prediction No. 1" than in the nearby MacArthur show in the Senate.

After trying to cover the latter show, I got out to the farm late one afternoon to find a much more difficult problem staring me stark in the face.

Up until that point, things apparently had gone well. The farm hands had taken the presence of visiting royalty and Hollywood glamor in their stride. The dairyman's children did not even ask Miss Hayworth for an autograph, nor did our conscientious colored helper, Harry Clipper, a plate-passing deacon at the Seneca Baptist Church, ask for a contribution. Nobody was thrown by the horses, Harry Truman did not break down the fence as he usually does on the slightest excuse; while the dogwood, the tulips, and the iris put on a glamor show rivaling anything in Hollywood.

No Bath For Rita

However, I could see the minute I got out of my car and greeted Mrs. P that all was not well. Mrs. P had that steely glint in her eye which I had not seen for a long, long time—in fact, not since the hogs got loose and made mincemeat out of her deck tennis court.

"The water," said Mrs. P, "is off. Just how is Rita going to take a bath?"

"Have you called Leon Lowery?" I asked, referring to our neighbor who can fix anything from my grandson's nursing bottle to the twine-knotter on a new Holland pickup hay-bailer.

"Leon is busy and won't come," replied the little woman.

"I'm sure if you told him that Rita Hayworth needed a bath he'd come in a minute," I suggested.

"It isn't only a bath," reminded Mrs. P, who had been faced with the drought all day. "How do we wash the dishes? And what do we drink?"

"Well, we could try gin." But the crack didn't go over at all big.

"Maybe your cows would like gin, too?" shot back Mrs. P, aiming at a weak spot. "If you're not worried about baths for Rita and the Jackson Leighters and all the dirty dishes, at least I know you'll worry about your cows."

This, I confess, made me think twice. Because when cows get no water to drink, they give less milk, and when they give less milk my score goes down; and I have been aiming for a milk score that would beat Carroll Morgan's, who taunts me with his high score every time we meet.

Finally, I got Leon Lowery on the telephone. He had ordered an extra part for the pump a month ago, but Jake Snyder of Farmers Supply had forgotten to order it. So the pump couldn't get fixed that night, Rita couldn't get a bath, the dishes couldn't get washed, I couldn't shave in the morning, and my cows would get a lower score than Carroll Morgan's.

"Maybe Rita could do without a bath," I suggested hopefully. "I'll bet when she was a kid back in Brooklyn she even argued with her mother that she didn't want to bathe at all."

"Yes, but what about your cows?" reminded Mrs. P.

"Well, that's different," I admitted.

"And we can't flush the toilets."

"But we can use the Byrd house," I argued, referring to the Chic Sales job up near the dairy barn. "Anyway, your and my ancestors, and even Rita's, never had any toilets to flush. Why should we be so snobbish?"

Lizards In The Pipe

"Furthermore," I argued, I confess a little desperately, "look at New York City and all the trouble they had about water. We're not the only ones who have problems. Or take Los Angeles. Mayor Bowron out there is always making my daughter quit watering her lawn.

"Furthermore," say I, "I would like to quote an issue of a noted column—The Washington Merry-Go-Round—which recently said, 'A calamity worse than the atom bomb is being studied by scientists—the increasing shortage of water in the United States.'

"You and Rita will just have to get ready for the ultimate future," I concluded, "and the fact that our pump broke down is just good practice for the days that lie ahead."

However, it didn't do any good. By this time I had a strong suspicion where the argument was heading. There has long been a difference of opinion inside the Pearson family about the relative merits of water from a spring and water from a well. Miss Hayworth, as far as I could see, was not really perturbed about her bath. I imagine there were a good many days traveling through Africa with Prince Ali Khan that she never got a bath at all, and I gathered this was not the grounds for their impending divorce. So I had sort of an inkling of what was coming.

"Don't you think," said Mrs. P, changing to her most dulcet tones, "that what we really need is a well all our own—a well that we don't have to share with your 47 thirsty cows and the farm families? After all, a well would be so much better than a spring, with all those lizards always crawling into the pipe. I think you should call up a well-digger and get started tomorrow. After all, you're always building some silo or other that doesn't do any good except stick up in the air and spoil the scenery."

"But how is Jackson Leighter going to reduce if he doesn't help me fill the silo?" say I, referring to my well-padded radio agent, who, with Mrs. Leighter, has been traveling with Rita.

However, I saw it was no use. Rita Hayworth is a charming gal and a swell sport. She didn't mind the water shortage at all. But she has done me a great disfavor. Thanks to her, I have been euchred into drilling a well.

However, though Mrs. P doesn't know it yet, I am going to connect the well to the cow barn. I just can't afford to let my milk score drop.

Firm Cooperation

By MARK SULLIVAN

THERE is an American condition, a prevailing emotion and judgment on the part of our people, which the British government and people need to understand and take account of, in the interest of all-round helpfulness.

The American people regard China, under its present Communist government, as an enemy. It is making war on us, daily our soldiers die under its attacks. The war it is making on us is, from the American point of view, unprovoked and wanton. We had made no attack on China, had scrupulously refrained from intrusion on Chinese territory.

In this condition our people have been surprised and disquieted by actions and attitudes the British have taken within a period of a few weeks past. The British have suggested to our State Department that in the conference about to be held to complete a peace settlement for Japan, Communist China should be given some status, at the least a right to be present.

Replied Firmly

To this suggestion our State Department, speaking presumably its own view and most certainly the view of the American people, replied firmly. In effect it pointed out that we do not recognize the Communist government of China the "Peking regime," that we recognize the Nationalist government under Chiang Kai-shek. Firmly our State Department said the United States "has not and does not contemplate discussion with the Peking regime regarding the Japanese peace settlement."

Soon after the Communist government of China had established itself, Britain recognized it. Later and up to the present time the British have urged that the Communist government of China be admitted to the United Nations. Taking notice of this our State Department a few weeks ago spoke clearly: "The United States has vigorously opposed the admission of the Peking regime to the United Nations. We shall continue to follow that policy."

A few weeks ago Britain suggested to our State Department that the island of Formosa should ultimately be given to Communist China. For this notion, there was some slight technical justification. In a conference of Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang Kai-shek at Cairo in 1943 it had been agreed that Formosa, long in possession of Japan, should be given to China. But the China of that time was the China that was our ally in the war under the Nationalist government of Chiang-Kai-shek. Britain's recent suggestion that Formosa go to Communist China was rejected by our State Department.

Had Unfortunate Effect

The recent suggestions from Britain, having an apparent spirit of softness toward Communist China, had an unfortunate effect in America in several respects. Our people, firmly resisting the aggression of Communist China in Korea, and regarding Communist China as an enemy, wondered whether Britain felt as strongly as we. The British suggestions embarrassed our State Department, for it was under accusation of having been soft itself when the Communists were in process of taking over China.

The British have now acceded to our State Department's rejection of its recent suggestions, and these can be regarded as having had the status of suggestions. The whole picture of the relations between Britain and the United States can now be seen as it fundamentally is. That relation is one of firm cooperation in the defense of the non-Communist world against aggression on a global scale by Russian communism. All the plans for conduct of this resistance rely upon Britain as an indispensible buttress. Effective resistance by us globally by air or sea would depend upon use of bases that are in the control of Britain.

Washington understands this fully. It understands also the willingness of Britain to cooperate in this and other respects.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON. — Secretary Marshall's testimony is in many respects even more sensational than that of General MacArthur.

For it tells the American people for the first time that they have completely lost their independence of miliary action in the midst of a war in which 350,000 American boys are engaged.

It tells that decisions made by the President, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are vetoed in secret by other governments without an opportunity for the public opinion of the United States or of the world to be apprised of the facts.

It tells that, although the United States has contributed the bulk of the troops in Korea, the 13 governments which have contributed token forces decided to deny us the right to apply the military doctrine of pursuing the enemy—known as "hot pursuit."

It tells that the United Nations has appointed the United States as agent to conduct the military operations but that the agent cannot perform those military operations without continuously obtaining the consent of these allies.

It tells that the United States, though conscious of the importance of an economic blockade to stop strategic materials and munitions from getting to the enemy, has not succeeded in persuading the principal UN countries now involved in that trade to stop it, even though 10 months of war in Korea have elapsed.

It tells that all these troubles and frictions between the United States and its allies were never communicated to General MacArthur except in the vaguest terms.

It tells, by implication, that the famous 13-nation declaration which was supposed to bring about a negotiation of a "cease fire" was never sent to General MacArthur and that only a brief message saying such announcement was planned went to him on March 20 last.

It tells that the United States Government at present opposes the entry of Red China into the UN and opposes turning Formosa over to Communist China but that the United States Government is nevertheless willing to discuss these subjects as matters for negotiation with the Red Chinese when they agree to a "cease fire."

It tells that the United States will adhere to that policy but it doesn't tell whether the United States will use its veto to turn down such a reward for aggression or will merely bow to the will of the UN countries eventually, as it has done on some of the military measures proposed to the UN.

It tells that General MacArthur carried out his military instructions as Far East commander and did not violate any military orders but that his public statements—his letters answering a member of Congress, Representative Martin, and his interviews answering questions that were asked by the press concerning military operations—were distasteful to the President and his advisers and really caused his dismissal.

It tells that only four men sat in with President Truman and recommended summary dismissal of General MacArthur—Messrs. Acheson, Harriman, Bradley and Marshall.

It tells that the Joint Chiefs favored a replacement but did not have anything to do with the form of dismissal. It doesn't tell whether the Joint Chiefs were told that the President was displeased with MacArthur's statements and was considering a change in command.

It tells that the summary dismissal was decided upon suddenly as a means of preventing General MacArthur from making any further statements to the press and from developing a sort of "cumulative affair" of publicity. This has since come about anyway with probably more cumulative statements and hearings than anybody ever imagined.

It tells that the Secretary of De-believe the enemy can be driven out believe the enemy can b driven out of Korea but he hopes they will withdraw after their offensives fail. He doesn't think bombardment on Manchurian bases will chase them out, either, though he concedes that diversionary operations such as a blockade and other military efforts in Southeast Asia may cause them to tire of their effort to stay in Korea.

It tells that in a moment of great crisis — when MacArthur's troops were being pushed back last December after Red China entered the war—the UN allies became frightened and began to limit the operations of the UN troops, especially in fighting back in the air.

It tells that instructions went to General MacArthur forbidding him to bomb even two big distributing centers in North Korea which were 35 miles below the northern border of the country and well within Korea itself.

It tells that, despite General MacArthur's titles as supreme commander in Japan and UN commander and commander-in-chief of Far Eastern forces, Secretary Marshall regarded General MacArthur as just another "local theatre commander," without the latitude of expression to comment on military events that Eisenhower had or Nimitz had or MacArthur himself had during the last war, and without even the right to engage in psychological warfare in his own theatre of action because it might offend UN allies.

There are many more things revealed, the significance of which will become apparent as the hearings continue. But none is more vital than the revelation that America, although contributing the bulk of the military forces and the supplies, has surrendered her independence of action and her leadership and has abandoned 350,000 American boys to the whim of foreign cabinets.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The China Story

THIS is a good time to read Freda Utley's "The China Story," a new book which sets out to establish by facts how the United States lost 400,000,000 allies. Freda Utley knows the Far East and has written competently concerning it. She states her conclusions:

"One thing is certain. Communist conquest of a large part of the world since the defeat of Germany and Japan, and the threat of even greater conquests, was not unavoidable. In the first part of this book, I shall show how what we did—and what we failed to do—in the Far East led us straight down the path to war in Korea."

This is a bare-to-the-bone, fact upon fact account of how the United States, by error and lack of understanding, not only gave China to Soviet Russia but brought the Korean War upon us. In view of the increasing velocity of the quarrel over facts between General Douglas MacArthur and President Truman, it will be advantageous to check what appears among the controversial writers on the subject against Miss Utley's summary of events.

Any understanding of the Far Eastern situation, no matter where one's partisanship lies, must go back to Yalta, the Far Eastern terms of which Miss Utley summarizes as follows:

"1. The 'lease' of Port Arthur to Russia as a naval base;

"2. The 'internationalization' of Dairen with 'pre-eminent rights' for the Soviet Union in this largest of China's northeastern ports;

"3. The 'joint operation' of the Manchurian railways by China and Russia, with the 'pre-eminent interests' of the Soviet Union safeguarded."

It was in pursuit of the Yalta terms that General Marshall was sent to China to manage, cajole, arrange or force Chiang Kai-shek to conform to this agreement to which neither he nor China was a party. A memorandum by Secretary of State James Byrnes (1945) on this subject stated:

"Pending the outcome of General Marshall's discussions with Chinese leaders in Chungking . . . Further transportation of Chinese troops to North China, except as North China ports may be necessary for the movement of troops and supplies into Manchuria, will be held in abeyance."

In other words, sanctions were imposed upon our ally and friend, Nationalist China, in the interest of Soviet Russia. This appeasement has already resulted in the death of more than 10,500 Americans and more than 62,000 casualties.

General Marshall has never understood either China or communism. Apparently he could not, even in 1947, grasp the nature of Russian imperialism nor the extent of international Marxism. He seemed to be astonished that Chiang Kai-shek would not form an alliance with the Communists and, as Miss Utley says, he accepted the Marxist definition of a reactionary. This is what General Marshall declared on January 7, 1947:

"On the side of the national government, which is in effect the Kuomintang, there is a dominant group of reactionaries who have been opposed, in my opinion, to almost every effort I have made to influence the formation of genuine coalition government . . . They were quite frank in publicly stating that their belief that cooperation by the Chinese Communist party in the government was inconceivable and that only a policy of force could settle the issue."

Miss Utley is a former Communist who has devoted much of her life, at great personal sacrifice, to undo the evils of this party. She says of herself:

"I first met Owen Lattimore in April 1936 in Moscow, where I had been living for nearly six years as the wife of a Russian (a Soviet citizen but not a member of the Communist party). I was employed as a research worker in the Pacific Ocean section of the Institute of World Economy and Politics. This institute had become the Russian branch of the Institute of Pacific Relations a year or so earlier when the Kremlin switched over to the 'popular front' policy, and the Communist Academy (of which the institute formed a part) was rechristened Academy of Sciences. For the benefit of the visiting Americans, a room had been taken in another part of the town and a notice put up saying 'Soviet Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations.' It was here that E. C. Carter, president of the American Institute, and Owen Lattimore were first received by the leading Communists at the Institute. As I had left the Communist party years earlier, I could not attend their private meetings.."

Black's back for the beach . . . Swim suits sparked with colored beads, embroidered with seashells or pearls . . . Nothing, but nothing, for hats . . . Hedda "Hatter" Hopper seeing "The King and I" under a veil showered with pink blossoms and crystal dewdrops . . . With her, Mrs. Robert McCormick, who had just seen the Colonel off for Chicago. . . . Blonde Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., who has black-fringed eyes, dining out in black chiffon—the skirt layer upon layer, the top a mere cobweb.

FOOD

A New York restaurant now invites you to "order by photograph" . . . How do they do it? Well, Keene's Chop House has several stereopticon viewers with built-in light sources. The waiter brings you a collection of colored slides showing mouth-watering "views" of tasty dishes on their menu . . . They say it makes customers even hungrier to see what they're going to eat.

Researchers of the Bureau of the United States Dairy Association have found that ice cream is more flavorsome and whips easier when butter milk is used rather than cream . . . Now it's buttermilk ice cream!

Refrigeration may be a thing of the past in a few years. By destroying the basteria which make food decay, two scientists have been able to keep food fresh indefinitely without refrigeration. In the future you'll take from the kitchen shelf a transparent-wrapped steak or filet of flounder which you bought two or three years ago! . . . On the same shelf you have cartons of vegetables, eggs, fruits—everything in the way of ordinary perishable foods—just stacked up the way you'd store sugar or cereals . . . Yet the foods have been on your shelf at room temperature for months or years . . . And they stay fresh and tasty as the day you bought them . . . In a N. Y. laboratory, foods have been shot with a monumental bombardment (the same atomic bullets that bring pictures to your television screen) and every micro-organism that makes food decay has been destroyed, but the food itself not injured or changed.

Other perishables, such as year-old cut flowers, fresh as the moment they were plucked, vaccines, hormones, and even blood plasma that have been lying around for a year can be used at a moment's notice!

Inventors of this Buck Rogers enterprise, Dr. Arno Brasch and Dr. Wolfgang Huber, will begin "sterilizing" edibles for a large food processor in a few months.

The Veep did not travel down to the Kentucky Derby this year. But a lot of Washingtonians watched the gee-gee's on Tee-Vee and in person . . . Similar to ones sold at the track (as much for souvenirs as drinks made of aluminum, filled with julep costing around a dollar.

The Honarable Order of Kentucky Colonels on Friday night whooped up their traditional "Colonels' Dinner" . . . Presided over by Fred J. Mills, General of the Order. . . . And at this dinner, mint juleps are so good that too many are drunk . . .

WHAT-NOT

On two sides of a single, long-playing disc you can now hear General MacArthur's historic address to Congress (36 minutes.)

QUIPS

A man working for a bureaucrat was talking to a friend who had applied for a job. "Tell me," said the applicant, "what sort of a guy is the boss?"

"Full of quirks and twists!" said the government worker.

"You mean he's going to psychiatrists?"

"No—but after a couple of weeks you will!"

Other night at the Washington Real Estate Board's dinner, Rep Charlie Bennett of Florida duelled with Senator Nixon from California. . . . Over the respective merits of their home states.

"We had gone deep sea fishing in Florida and Nixon got a bite," related Bennett. "He reeled it in and there was a mermaid on the end of his line—mermaids are rare, even for Florida. Well, he took a long, searching look at her and threw her back in. I asked him why he did that, and Nixon said, 'I just figured there wasn't enough woman there to love—nor enough fish to eat!'"

Arm symmetry is a beauty attribute easily attained. Here are corrections for both heavy and thin arms.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

MANY A TEENAGER looks at her thin, gangling arms with a feeling of despair . . . and many an umpteenager looks at her large flaccid arms with the same feeling. But any woman can have beautiful, symmetrical arms. No arms are hopelessly thin or irreducibly heavy.

You can easily remold your arms into graceful contours, symmetrically proportioned with firm muscle tone. An arm imperfection is one of the easiest to correct, because arms are in such constant motion, getting some kind of workout throughout your ordinary round of daily activities.

Beauty In Motion

The secret of speedy improvement lies in making every motion of your arms count. Try to use your entire arm as much as possible instead of limiting your reach to a motion from your elbow or wrist; extend your entire arm from your shoulder joint. So doing will bring all the stretching muscles into play, firming them and enhancing the appearance of both the thin and heavy arm.

Learn, also, to keep your arms relaxed when they are in motion. For a while, be conscious of whether you use them jerkily or stiffly. Think for a moment now of a ballerina's grace in arm gestures and of how relaxed her joints are as her motions flow one into another. There's a beautifier for every type of arm!

And here's another one, adaptable to both slight and weighty arms. Stand with your arms down at your sides. Swing them out to shoulder level at the sides—then let them fall back to starting position. Next, swing them forward to shoulder level, continuing upward toward the ceiling and reaching as far back as you can with your hands. Return to starting position. Make all of these motions continuous, without so much as a pause between them.

If you wish to develop your arms, perform the exercise very slowly and with resistance, as if someone were holding your arms to prevent any movement and you had to put up a good fight to get your own way.

To reduce your arms, perform the routine at great speed with all the rhythm at your command.

Fifteen times is enough for anyone at the beginning. Increase gradually to about fifty times a day. That's the way to see your arms achieve alabaster beauty.

Tomorrow: How model secrets help careers.

FASHION

Black's back for the beach . . . Swim suits sparked with colored beads, embroidered with seashells or pearls . . . Nothing, but nothing, for hats . . . Hedda "Hatter" Hopper seeing "The King and I" under a veil showered with pink blossoms and crystal dewdrops . . . With her, Mrs. Robert McCormick, who had just seen the Colonel off for Chicago. . . . Ever-feminine, grey-haired Maryland McCormick in a theatre chapeau of black horsehair scattered with moonstones.

AUSTINE

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, traveling down to Washington this week in Charlie James' screaming loud coat of steamer rugs. . . . He combed New York for the biggest checks for the wife of the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

The Duchess of Windsor, who hasn't a long dinner dress in her closet, showing off pretty ankles and feet at dinner the other night in wine red satin with flirtatious, black pleated taffeta petticoats peeping below . . . Blonde Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., who has black-fringed eyes, dining out in black chiffon—the skirt layer upon layer, the top a mere cobweb.

FOOD

A New York restaurant now invites you to "order by photograph" . . . How do they do it? Well, Keene's Chop House has several stereopticon viewers with built-in light sources. The waiter brings you a collection of colored slides showing mouth-watering "views" of tasty dishes on their menu . . . They say it makes customers even hungrier to see what they're going to eat.

Researchers of the Bureau of the United States Dairy Association have found that ice cream is more flavorsome and whips easier when butter milk is used rather than cream . . . Now it's buttermilk ice cream!

Refrigeration may be a thing of the past in a few years. By destroying the basteria which make food decay, two scientists have been able to keep food fresh indefinitely without refrigeration. In the future you'll take from the kitchen shelf a transparent-wrapped steak or filet of flounder which you bought two or three years ago! . . . On the same shelf you have cartons of vegetables, eggs, fruits—everything in the way of ordinary perishable foods—just stacked up the way you'd store sugar or cereals . . . Yet the foods have been on your shelf at room temperature for months or years . . . And they stay fresh and tasty as the day you bought them . . . In a N. Y. laboratory, foods have been shot with a monumental bombardment (the same atomic bullets that bring pictures to your television screen) and every micro-organism that makes food decay has been destroyed, but the food itself not injured or changed.

Other perishables, such as year-old cut flowers, fresh as the moment they were plucked, vaccines, hormones, and even blood plasma that have been lying around for a year can be used at a moment's notice!

Inventors of this Buck Rogers enterprise, Dr. Arno Brasch and Dr. Wolfgang Huber, will begin "sterilizing" edibles for a large food processor in a few months.

TRAVEL

The Veep did not travel down to the Kentucky Derby this year. But a lot of Washingtonians watched the gee-gee's on Tee-Vee and in person . . . Kentucky Senators Earle Clements and Thomas Underwood and their wives . . . White House Staffers Lela Mae Stiles from Cecilia, Kentucky, and Miss Lorrain Winfrey, one of the Veep's secretaries, went together.

This year, for the first time, a jeweler in Louisville sold "An Official Mint Julep Cup" . . . In sterling silver, Jewelers Brown, Waterhouse and Kaiser offered them for $29.75 apiece, $350 a dozen. Similar to ones sold at the track (as much for souvenirs as drinks made of aluminum, filled with julep costing around a dollar.

The Honarable Order of Kentucky Colonels on Friday night whooped up their traditional "Colonels' Dinner" . . . Presided over by Fred J. Mills, General of the Order. . . . And at this dinner, mint juleps are so good that too many are drunk . . .

WHAT-NOT

On two sides of a single, long-playing disc you can now hear General MacArthur's historic address to Congress (36 minutes.)

QUIPS

A man working for a bureaucrat was talking to a friend who had applied for a job. "Tell me," said the applicant, "what sort of a guy is the boss?"

"Full of quirks and twists!" said the government worker.

"You mean he's going to psychiatrists?"

"No—but after a couple of weeks you will!"

Other night at the Washington Real Estate Board's dinner, Rep Charlie Bennett of Florida duelled with Senator Nixon from California. . . . Over the respective merits of their home states.

"We had gone deep sea fishing in Florida and Nixon got a bite," related Bennett. "He reeled it in and there was a mermaid on the end of his line—mermaids are rare, even for Florida. Well, he took a long, searching look at her and threw her back in. I asked him why he did that, and Nixon said, 'I just figured there wasn't enough woman there to love—nor enough fish to eat!'"

Arm symmetry is a beauty attribute easily attained. Here are corrections for both heavy and thin arms.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

MANY A TEENAGER looks at her thin, gangling arms with a feeling of despair . . . and many an umpteenager looks at her large flaccid arms with the same feeling. But any woman can have beautiful, symmetrical arms. No arms are hopelessly thin or irreducibly heavy.

You can easily remold your arms into graceful contours, symmetrically proportioned with firm muscle tone. An arm imperfection is one of the easiest to correct, because arms are in such constant motion, getting some kind of workout throughout your ordinary round of daily activities.

Beauty In Motion

The secret of speedy improvement lies in making every motion of your arms count. Try to use your entire arm as much as possible instead of limiting your reach to a motion from your elbow or wrist; extend your entire arm from your shoulder joint. So doing will bring all the stretching muscles into play, firming them and enhancing the appearance of both the thin and heavy arm.

Learn, also, to keep your arms relaxed when they are in motion. For a while, be conscious of whether you use them jerkily or stiffly. Think for a moment now of a ballerina's grace in arm gestures and of how relaxed her joints are as her motions flow one into another. There's a beautifier for every type of arm!

And here's another one, adaptable to both slight and weighty arms. Stand with your arms down at your sides. Swing them out to shoulder level at the sides—then let them fall back to starting position. Next, swing them forward to shoulder level, continuing upward toward the ceiling and reaching as far back as you can with your hands. Return to starting position. Make all of these motions continuous, without so much as a pause between them.

If you wish to develop your arms, perform the exercise very slowly and with resistance, as if someone were holding your arms to prevent any movement and you had to put up a good fight to get your own way.

To reduce your arms, perform the routine at great speed with all the rhythm at your command.

Fifteen times is enough for anyone at the beginning. Increase gradually to about fifty times a day. That's the way to see your arms achieve alabaster beauty.

Tomorrow: How model secrets help careers.

PRESERVE YOUR CHANCE

THERE are some throw-in plays that are absolutely certain to succeed. Others have only a 50-50 chance because they depend on a particular defender holding some certain card or cards. In other cases, the chance of success is still lower. But if the only possibility of making your contract is to find the key cards in a favorable location, the plucky and keen declarer will attempt the play. That is, if he is brilliant enough to spot the chance for it.

When the response to the Blackwood 5-No Trump bid showed North with no kings, hope of a grand slam bid had to be abandoned. It required keen play to make the small slam, but exactly that kind was furnished by the declarer, Emanuel H. Sulkis, of Boston, prominent shoe manufacturer, who won the Mediterranean championship tournament on the maiden cruise of the great American peace ship Independence.

After the club K lead to the A, it would have appeared to most players that one trick each would have to be lost in the minor suits. But Mr. Sulkis did not see it that way. He found a path to success. To the second and third tricks he led top trumps, next cleared hearts from both his holdings in three rounds. Then he was ready for the big try. He led the club 9, hoping the trick would be won by the defender who also held the diamond K.

That is exactly what West had to do. He took it with the J, and then had an impossible choice to make. If he returned a heart or club, it could be ruffed in dummy while a diamond was discarded from the South hand. He chose instead to return the diamond 9, hoping East had the Q. But Mr. Sulkis did, and took the trick with it, thus bringing his contract into port as safely as the Good Ship Independence was steered into 22 ports on its cruise.

When the response to the Blackwood 5-No Trump bid showed North with no kings, hope of a grand slam bid had to be abandoned. It required keen play to make the small slam, but exactly that kind was furnished by the declarer, Emanuel H. Sulkis, of Boston, prominent shoe manufacturer, who won the Mediterranean championship tournament on the maiden cruise of the great American peace ship Independence.

After the club K lead to the A, it would have appeared to most players that one trick each would have to be lost in the minor suits. But Mr. Sulkis did not see it that way. He found a path to success. To the second and third tricks he led top trumps, next cleared hearts from both his holdings in three rounds. Then he was ready for the big try. He led the club 9, hoping the trick would be won by the defender who also held the diamond K.

That is exactly what West had to do. He took it with the J, and then had an impossible choice to make. If he returned a heart or club, it could be ruffed in dummy while a diamond was discarded from the South hand. He chose instead to return the diamond 9, hoping East had the Q. But Mr. Sulkis did, and took the trick with it, thus bringing his contract into port as safely as the Good Ship Independence was steered into 22 ports on its cruise.

Mrs. Roeder Opposes More Extensions For Feldstein

The Mayor and Council refused to jump the gun on its "fencing in" order to the Feldstein Iron and Steel Metal Company Monday night but not before a member suggested a "bombing" might be a condition under which the firm could not complete the requirement.

Commissioner of Streets and Public Property Lucile W. Roeder broached the subject by noting the extension time for Abe Feldstein to fence in a junk yard property at 130 Wineow Street is up Friday, May 18.

Mrs. Roeder said she would like to see the council go on record as opposing any more extension of time for the work. Feldstein has been given two extensions totaling 60 days.

Mrs. Roeder continued that Feldstein could have started the job there weeks ago and she saw no reason to extend the time limit.

Finance Commissioner William H. Buchholtz made a motion that the council go on record against any extension time for Feldstein and Mrs. Roeder seconded. But the motion was killed by a vote of 3-2.

Mayor Thomas S. Post commented: "Before we take action we ought to see the expiration of his time. Conditions might arise whereby we wouldn't have to act on it."

"What," Mrs. Roeder asked, "kind of conditions could they be?"

The Mayor replied: "Suppose a bomb would drop on it. Did you ever think of that?"

The council also accepted the bid of $500 from Kathleen A. Stakem to operate the concession at Constitution Park.

The South Cumberland Business Men's Association was granted permission to block off South Street between First and Second Streets during its "Fun Fair" May 10-12.

A request for a donation from Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, for two mobile medical units under the civil defense program was tabled for one week but Commissioner Buchholtz said the request was worthy of consideration. Each of the units would cost $2,600.

Edward J. Ryan, attorney for Mrs. Barbara Dircks, informed the council his client has 40 acres of land adjacent to Constitution Park available for purchase. Mrs. Roeder was asked to investigate the proposition.

The Maryland State Firemen's Association was voted $75 for a full page advertisement in the state convention program.

Two bids were received and referred to Mrs. Roeder for tabulation and report. The Norton Petroleum Company bid on road oil and the Wright Richardson Company for construction of a fire escape and other work at the Girl Scout House.

Commissioner Buchholtz requested that $200 be donated to help defray cost of the Armed Forces Day ceremony May 18 and an order was directed prepared. Mayor Post was authorized to issue a proclamation on Armed Forces Day.

Rubber Workers Vote Tomorrow

Members of Local 26, United Rubber Workers Union, CIO, will cast ballots tomorrow to choose new officers.

Ballots will be cast at the conference room at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant, where the union members are employed.

Voting booths will be open from 6 to 8 a. m.; 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.; 2 to 4 p. m.; 5 to 6:30 p. m. and 10:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m.

Members of the election committee will handle the voting and the ballots will be counted Friday at the Union Hall, South Mechanic Street.

Principal post to be decided will be that of president. There are two candidates, R. C. Burkhart, the incumbent, and Ralph C. Beard, currently vice president and also a former president of the union.

Members of the election committee are Thomas Boone, L. G. Jenkins, F. E. Roninson, Joseph Schnibbe and G. M. Caruthers.

Brothers Seek Estate Share In Court Suit

A bill of complaint was docketed in Circuit Court yesterday morning by two Cumberland brothers. They seek to have a deed to a property reconveyed to them and an accounting made of all rents and profits from the property at 243-245 Virginia Avenue.

Listed as plaintiffs in the suit are Charles E. and William F. Krapf. The defendants are Clyde F. Adams, Frank H. Krapf, Florence Adams Whitefield, Roy E. Adams, Philip D. Adams, Nonda Adams Rockwell, Anna Adams Arthurs and Melvin Deal.

Claim Two-Thirds Interest

The bill of complaint states the plaintiffs, Charles E. and William F. Krapf, were left a one-third interest each in the property on Virginia Avenue. It was stated the property consisted of a three-story double brick structure.

Mary J. Krapf, grandmother of the plaintiffs, left the two men the property and the other one-third interest was left to the late Charles Krapf. This occurred November 14, 1933. It was stated in the complaint that Charles Krapf, the grandfather of the two plaintiffs, on December 18, 1934 induced them to convey the deed to the property to him for $1,000.

It was further stated that the grandfather stated the property would come back to them anyhow upon his death. The plaintiffs stated that for a number of years they had resided with their grandfather and came to look upon him almost as a father and that he had great influence over them. They also stated that they were at the time of the conveying of the deed 23 and 21 years of age respectively and unversed in business and looked upon their grandfather with trust and confidence.

Grandfather Died

The bill of complaint states that last September 8 the grandfather died and left the property to the defendants named in the complaint.

The court is asked to set aside the deed to the property which they conveyed in 1933 and also requested an accounting for all rents and profits on the property.

It was stated in the bill that the property in 1933 was very valuable and is now.

John M. Robb is attorney for the plaintiffs.

When twins were born in an Oregon Indian tribe, it was the custom to put one or both to death.

Beall Requests Flood Funds

Appearing before a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, Rep J. Glenn Beall yesterday urged that $2,400,000 be included in the budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 for the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control project.

Rep. Beall pointed out the U. S. Engineers and the Budget Bureau have both requested the appropriation.

It was explained by the Congressman that to stop the project at this time because it is not essential to the defense effort would bring about a great hardship.

The unemployment situation in the Cumberland area was outlined by Rep. Beall, who said it might be more costly in the long run to stop the work and begin again at a later date.

Rep. Beall reported members of the group appeared impressed by his arguments.

Phone Co. Employes Hold Practice Air Raid Drill

In a brief, but effective air raid drill yesterday employes of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company demonstrated how they will protect the community's communications system and themselves during a disaster.

Both Richard E. Harman, manager, and Harry Patton, central office foreman and civil defense officer, pronounced the drill a success.

The drill lasted approximately 45 seconds, but operators at both local and long distance boards left their posts and headed in orderly single file for an exit. As they left, tele-set cords (the connecting wire for earphones) were wrapped around their waists to keep them from tripping. This same procedure is followed in a fire drill, officials said.

The practice session was planned for 8:35 a. m., a time when call traffic is one of the lightest of the day. In spite of that, when the operators left their local boards, new calls and completed calls caused the board to light up like a Christmas tree.

Despite the importance of these drills, telephone company officials are attempting to carry them off with the least inconvenience to the public as possible.

Harman said that the drills will be held from time to time. Plant workers in the field will be guided by the public warning in event of attack, Patton said.

Signals are given employes by a light-bell arrangement in 13 different parts of the building. The bell rings for an exit and again when the alarm is over.

The basement area of the building is thought to be adequate protection against atomic attack. In the No. 1 shelter room, walls are of 20-inch, reinforced concrete.

The wire-glass windows and venetian blinds at the building are also considered excellent protection against the atomic flash, according to R. C. Lord, plant wire chief.

Yesterday's drill differed from an actual raid in only one respect. All operators left the boards when the alarm sounded. In a real air raid, volunteer workers will man the boards as long as possible to keep communications intact.

Times-News Mibs Tourney Gets Underway Next Week

The first of 20 school tournaments to select the entries who will "shoot it out" for the 1951 marbles championship of Cumberland will be held Wednesday, May 16, at Corriganville. Cresaptown's champ will be determined the next day, May 17, and the LaVale champ on May 18.

With the three suburban area championships settled first, the tournaments will open in Cumberland on Monday, May 21, when school finals will be held at Gephart playground for both Gephart and Carver.

June 12 is the tentative date for the city finals, to be held on Gephart playground rings built by the City Recreation Department.

As in previous years the Times-News is sponsoring the marbles tournament and will pay the expenses of the city champ to Asbury Park, N. J. to play for the championship of the United States during the week of June 24. At Asbury Park the approximately 80 best mibsters of the nation will live like kings for the week of the National Tournament.

Cumberland is sure to have a new champion this year, as the 1949 and 1950 champion, Milton "Boy" Steward, of St. Patrick's, is over the 15-year age limit and not eligible to enter the tournament. His predecessor, however, Lowell Coates, of Columbia Street School (1948 champion) is still under 15 and eligible to play.

The complete schedule follows:

May 16—Corriganville; May 17—Cresaptown; May 18—La Vale; May 21—Gephart and Carver; May 22—St. Patrick's and LaSalle Jr. High; May 23—East Side; May 24—West Side; May 25—Columbia Street; May 28—SS. Peter and Paul and Centre Street; May 29—Mt. Royal; May 31—Humbird; June 1—Virginia Avenue; June 5—St. Mary's; June 6—Johnson Hts; June 7—Penn. Avenue.

The Allegany and Fort Hill Junior High championships will be decided in series of games prior to June 7.

Citron wood or citrus wood was the most costly furniture wood of Roman times.

Final Concert Planned Tuesday

The Cumberland Civic Symphony Orchestra will present its final concert of the season next Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. in Allegany High School auditorium.

Directed by S. Lua Syckes, the 40-piece musical group will offer the following two-hour program:

Part I—Prelude, Choral and Fugue, J. S. Bach, and Symphony No. 8 in B Minor (unfinished) Schubert; Part II—Miss Letha Dawson, 15, Mifflintown, Pa., trombone soloist; Part III—Semiranide Overture, Rossini; Ballet Egyptian, Luigini; Sleeping Beauty Waltz, Tschaikowsky, and grand march from "Aida," Verdi.

Miss Dawson, student of Richard Smith, music instructor at Lewistown, Pa., High School, will play several semi-classical selections. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Walter Smiley, of Lewistown.

Orchestra officials said her musical ton is similar to that of Tommy Dorsey, noted band-leader. She is striving to appear on a popular radio talent show.

There will be no admission charge for the spring concert but a silver offering will be collected during the intermission.

Seven Magistrates Sworn Into Office

Seven more newly appointed magistrates were sworn into office yesterday morning at the Court House by Clerk of Court Joseph E. Boden.

They are William J. Gunter, this city; Fred Crowe and James M. Carter, both of Frostburg; Thomas R. Smith, Sr., of Barton; James G. Blair, of Midland; Carl W. Shaffer, of Westernport and Melvin S. Sloan, of Lonaconing.

Howard R. Stevens, of Mt. Savage, has not yet qualified to take the oath. It is expected he will be sworn in within the next few days.

All of the new magistrates are Republicans and were appointed by Gov. McKeldin upon recommendation of the Republican State Central Committee.

Majorettes Place Second

The drum majorettes of the Allegany High School band took second place in the competition among about 75 musical units which took part in the annual Apple Blossom Festival parade at Winchester, Va., last Friday.

An estimated 125,000 persons viewed the procession in the Virginia city.

At the same time as the drum majorettes were winning second place for all classes in the parade, the band copped fourth place in the Class A high school division of 15 bands.

The majorettes were trained by Carroll Taylor, the drum major, and the prize-winning group is comprised of Ann Gellner, head majorette; Ruth Howe, Jean Haenftling, Patricia Fallen, Barbara Stark, Hulda Miller, Marcia Metz, and Janet Ridgeley.

In the Class B competition of high school bands the Morgan County band, comprised of students from Berkeley Springs and Paw Paw, W. Va., took first place honors.

Two Draft Registrants

Draft Board No. 27 will send two registrants to Martinsburg, W. Va., Monday for pre-induction physical examinations.

Officials said the men will leave Queen City Station at 6:55 a. m. (DST) and return to Cumberland the same day.

MacARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

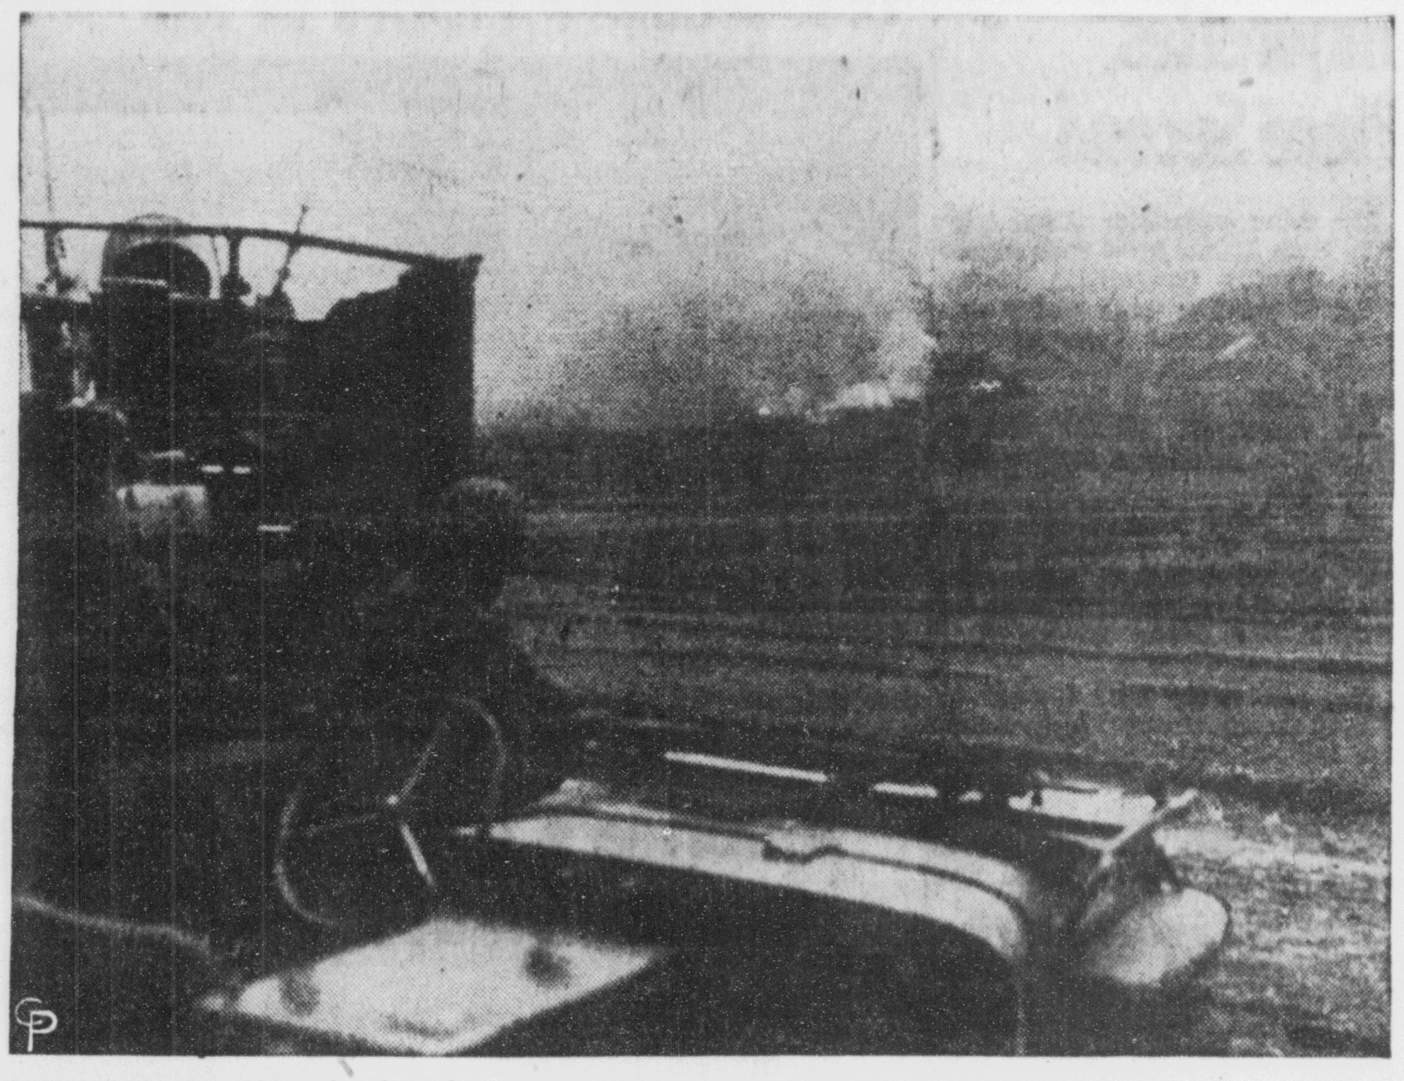

CROUCHING BETWEEN a truck and a jeep, a United Nations soldier watches the results of an artillery barrage laid down on houses held by Chinese Reds north of 38th parallel in Korea. (International)

6. "I Shall Return"

In December, 1941, at the time of Pearl Harbor, the Japanese lashed out at the Philippines. First they bombed key airfields, destroying American planes which could not be dispersed in time because of lack of radar warning networks. Nor were there enough anti-aircraft guns on hand. It was one of the early instances of too little too late.

MacArthur had 11,500 miles of Philippine coastline to defend. He could not have his troops everywhere at once and was compelled to await a Japanese invasion. It came in overwhelming numbers in northwestern Luzon and on the east coast of Luzon. They tossed more than 200,000 men at MacArthur's mixed defenders.

MacArthur, utilizing the classic defense of the Philippines that had been projected nearly 30 years before by Gen Lea, avoided the pincers operation that the Japanese had hoped to pull off against him north and south of Manila. Evacuating Manila at Christmas, he managed an orderly withdrawal into the Bataan Peninsula, jutting south into Manila Bay and covered and protected by the island fortress of Corregidor. He sent the few remaining bombers south from Clark Field to Mindanao, later to Australia.

Without decent food and medicines, the malaria-ridden, weary troops under MacArthur could do nothing but fall back southward along the Bataan Peninsula. They exacted a heavy toll of the Japanese as they did so. On half rations since mid-January of 1942, the GIs of that day went on even smaller rations by the end of March. And they began to slaughter horses and mules to improve their diet.

General Homma Replaced

MacArthur's men fought on grimly on Bataan. They staved off three big enemy attacks so well that Lieutenant-General Homma, a fast man with a whisky highball and possessor of an Oxford accent, was removed in favor of General Yamashita, who had conquered Singapore.

In February, 1942, the War Department and President Roosevelt ordered MacArthur to save his skill for the long pull. He was told to proceed to Australia and assume command of the newly designated Southwest Pacific Area. He was to hold Australia, check the foe along the Melanesian barrier, protect land, sea, and air communications with the Southwest Pacific, and maintain our slipping position in the Philippines. Quite an order.

Two 65-foot motor torpedo boats of the type MacArthur had ordered for defense of the Philippines slipped into the Corregidor dock at dusk on March 11, 1942. MacArthur, his wife, and son, with young Arthur's Chinese nurse, climbed aboard one boat. Some of the 19 staff officers who were to go with the General to Australia boarded the other boat.

Toward dawn the PTs made Mindanao. There was an agonizing three-day wait for three Flying Fortresses that had been sent north to pick up the party. Only two arrived; baggage, arms and equipment were jettisoned. All got aboard. The planes took off about midnight, March 16, and flew for about 11 hours to northern Australia.

As MacArthur's train approached Melbourne on a crisp March morning, 4,000 gathered to meet him at the station. Assorted generals and admirals in khaki, and an American guard of honor, and seven brown Filipino soldiers awaited. The train stopped. There was a wait. MacArthur stepped out, in a plain, faded khaki jacket, open at the neck and without his four stars of rank, and sharply pressed khaki trousers. There was a touch of gold on his garrison cap. In his right hand swung a bamboo swagger stick.

MacArthur stepped up to a microphone.

"I have every confidence in the ultimate success of our joint cause, but success in modern war requires something more than courage and willingness to die. It requires careful preparation . . . No general can make something from nothing. My success or failure will depend primarily upon the resources which our respective governments place at my disposal. My faith in them is complete. In any event, I shall do my best. I shall keep the soldier's faith."

"What's that?" asked a scribbling Australian reporter, who couldn't catch the last word.

"I shall keep the soldier's faith," Douglas MacArthur repeated firmly into the microphone.

MacArthur was scarcely in Australia when the Japanese opened an all-out attack on Wainwright's positions on Bataan. Bataan fell early in April.

Corregidor and its satellite island forts guarding the mouth of Manila Bay—held out for nearly a month longer, with counter-battery and anti-aircraft fire. On May 5 the Japanese, after a week of bombardment that buried some defenses under rocky landslides, came ashore. The next day the exhausted Americans surrendered honorably.

Skillful Delaying Operations

Technically, Bataan and Corregidor were defeats for MacArthur's forces. Actually, they were skillfully conducted delaying operations against an overwhelmingly superior enemy. MacArthur, Wainwright & Company exacted a heavy price from the Japanese. They tied up crack Japanese troops for nearly five months when they might have been employed elsewhere. They denied to the Japanese the use of Manila harbor, one of the finest in the Orient. The time gained enabled men and material to flow to Australia, New Caledonia, and elsewhere in the Pacific.

Winston Churchill has recorded that when he was visiting Franklin D. Roosevelt at the White House late in December, 1941, and learned of the "approaching fate" of MacArthur on Bataan and Corregidor, he "thought it right" to show to Mr. Roosevelt and Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, the dispatch which the British War Office had sent in the dark days of May, 1940, to Viscount Gort, then commander of the British Expeditionary Force that was falling back upon Dunkirk.

The War Office message told Gort that he would be ordered to return to England with a few officers and turn over command to a corps commander. The message said that on political grounds it would be bad for the Germans to capture Gort and it would be "a needless triumph" for the enemy.

Churchill concedes it is possible that the tenor of this message influenced other great events and the fortunes of "another valiant commander," namely MacArthur. Churchill says Roosevelt and Stimson read the message with deep attention; Stimson asked for a copy of it. Churchill says it may have been "that this influenced them in the right decision." "I should like to think this was true," Churchill has written.

Early in February of 1942 Quezon wirelessed a bombshell to the White House. He suggested to Roosevelt that the United States should declare the Philippines independent and that this country and Japan should then proceed to neutralize the islands. All troops would be withdrawn and the Philippine army mustered out.

Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of the late President Woodrow Wilson and then high commissioner in the Philippines, subscribed to Quezon's scheme.

It was MacArthur's lot to forward the Quezon and Sayre messages.

MacArthur made it clear that he had no illusions about the future but he wanted to know what to do.

"So far as the military angle is concerned," he added, "the problem presents itself as to whether the plan of President Quezon might offer the best possible solution of what is about to be a disastrous debacle. It would not affect the ultimate solution in the Philippines for that would be determined by the results in other theaters."

Stimson Answers

One can imagine the reaction in the Pentagon and at the White House. Quezon seemed to be selling out despite his public pronouncements. Sayre, and worst of all MacArthur, appeared to be backing Quezon's scheme. Stimson and the Chief of Staff, General of the Army George C. Marshall, rushed to see Roosevelt. The President asked Marshall what he proposed to do. Marshall let Stimson answer. Stimson felt that the Quezon idea played into the Japanese hands, that it would ruin the friendship between the Philippines and the United States, that Japan could not be trusted to keep any agreement about neutralizing the islands, and that the United States and Japan would be held equally guilty of destroying the Philippines.

Marshall spent the afternoon working up a reply to MacArthur; Stimson drafted one for Quezon. The upshot was this message from Roosevelt to MacArthur, dated February 9, 1942:

"In the second section of this message I am making, through you, an immediate reply to President Quezon's proposals of February 8. My reply must emphatically deny the possibility of this government's agreement to the political aspects of President Quezon's proposal. I authorize you to arrange for the capitulation of the Filipino elements of the defending forces, when and if in your opinion that course appears necessary and always having in mind that the Filipino troops are in the service of the United States. Details of all necessary arrangements will be left in your hands, including plans for segregation of forces and the withdrawal, if your judgment so dictates, of American elements to Fort Mills (Corregidor). The timing also will be left to you.

"American forces will continue to keep our flag flying in the Philippines so long as there remains any possibility of resistance. I have made these decisions in complete understanding of your military estimate that accompanied President Quezon's message to me. The duty and the necessity of resisting Japanese aggression to the last transcends in importance any other obligation now facing us in the Philippines."

Roosevelt asked MacArthur to radio the gist of his plans in accordance with the above instructions. He also asked the General to pass along to Quezon the second section of the message. This part, in effect, told Quezon that the United States was pledged to give the Philippines their independence in 1946, that Japanese offers of promises could never be relied upon, that whatever happened to MacArthur's garrison, the American forces would return "and drive the last remnant of the invaders from your soil."

Quezon, with his shot in the arm, promised to abide by Roosevelt's message. MacArthur characteristically said he would fight on to the end, and that in no circumstances would he surrender the Filipino troops under him.

Whatever Quezon felt, MacArthur appreciated everything only too well; it must have been easy in the air-conditioned purlieus of Washington in 1942 to have flashed hortatory messages to Bataan, where the temperature under an implacable sun and before a tenacious, skillful foe was in the hundreds and Americans were dying like flies. In those days — even as today — Washington and the rest of the United States were only partially mobilized; there was a groping fumbling understanding of what war meant (the men on Bataan knew); even as today there was the desire to carry on "business as usual" and not to do anything too drastic on the home front that might boomerang politically.

"Rally to me. Let the indomitable spirit of Bataan and Corregidor lead on . . . For the land of your sacred birth, strike!

"Let no heart be faint. Let every arm be steeled. The guidance of Divine God points to the way. Follow in His name to the Holy Grail of righteous victory."

These were the words of Douglas MacArthur as he stepped ashore on Leyte on Oct. 20, 1944.

Kept His Promise

It was his destiny to liberate the Philippines. He had promised to come back, and he did.

The Navy was busy with carrier strikes softening up Japanese defenses, taking pictures, feeling out the enemy. In the early fall of 1944 a naval aviator was shot down over Leyte; he got ashore unhurt and was concealed by friendly Filipinos. He was picked up not long after and made a startling intelligence report which led to alteration of the plan for conquering the Philippines. He reported that Leyte rather than Mindanao, would be a comparative pushover. Further, it had good beaches.

The report was confirmed by photographs. MacArthur and the chiefs of staff in Washington hastily revised their plans. Only a few months before MacArthur had gone to Hawaii to meet President Roosevelt and to win with his persuasiveness a powerful argument against the Navy. The Navy wanted to skip the Philippines, hit Formosa, and prepare for a landing on the China coast. MacArthur said no; he pointed out our moral obligation to retake the Philippines, convinced Roosevelt it could be done without the blood baths that the Navy and the Marines had suffered in their Central Pacific operations against such Jap strongholds as Tarawa, Eniwetok and Saipan.

The report on Jap weakness at Leyte speeded up the reconquest of the islands by three months. Our troops sailed in gigantic convoys. It was the mightiest armada yet seen in the Pacific.

The Leyte campaign was tough to the end. It broke the back of Japanese resistance in the islands and gave us air bases from which to hammer enemy air strength on Luzon. MacArthur's forces went into Luzon—as the Japanese had in 1941 — by way of Lingayen gulf. They were in Manila in February, 1945.

On March 2 Douglas MacArthur set foot once again on battle-scarred Corregidor. He saw the Stars and Stripes hoisted on the battered white flagpole from which the enemy had ripped it three years before. He said: "I see the old flagstaff still stands. Haul the colors to its peak and let no enemy ever haul them down."

MacARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

6. "I Shall Return"

In December, 1941, at the time of Pearl Harbor, the Japanese lashed out at the Philippines. First they bombed key airfields, destroying American planes which could not be dispersed in time because of lack of radar warning networks. Nor were there enough anti-aircraft guns on hand. It was one of the early instances of too little too late.

MacArthur had 11,500 miles of Philippine coastline to defend. He could not have his troops everywhere at once and was compelled to await a Japanese invasion. It came in overwhelming numbers in northwestern Luzon and on the east coast of Luzon. They tossed more than 200,000 men at MacArthur's mixed defenders.

MacArthur, utilizing the classic defense of the Philippines that had been projected nearly 30 years before by Gen Lea, avoided the pincers operation that the Japanese had hoped to pull off against him north and south of Manila. Evacuating Manila at Christmas, he managed an orderly withdrawal into the Bataan Peninsula, jutting south into Manila Bay and covered and protected by the island fortress of Corregidor. He sent the few remaining bombers south from Clark Field to Mindanao, later to Australia.

Without decent food and medicines, the malaria-ridden, weary troops under MacArthur could do nothing but fall back southward along the Bataan Peninsula. They exacted a heavy toll of the Japanese as they did so. On half rations since mid-January of 1942, the GIs of that day went on even smaller rations by the end of March. And they began to slaughter horses and mules to improve their diet.

General Homma Replaced

MacArthur's men fought on grimly on Bataan. They staved off three big enemy attacks so well that Lieutenant-General Homma, a fast man with a whisky highball and possessor of an Oxford accent, was removed in favor of General Yamashita, who had conquered Singapore.

In February, 1942, the War Department and President Roosevelt ordered MacArthur to save his skill for the long pull. He was told to proceed to Australia and assume command of the newly designated Southwest Pacific Area. He was to hold Australia, check the foe along the Melanesian barrier, protect land, sea, and air communications with the Southwest Pacific, and maintain our slipping position in the Philippines. Quite an order.

Two 65-foot motor torpedo boats of the type MacArthur had ordered for defense of the Philippines slipped into the Corregidor dock at dusk on March 11, 1942. MacArthur, his wife, and son, with young Arthur's Chinese nurse, climbed aboard one boat. Some of the 19 staff officers who were to go with the General to Australia boarded the other boat.

Toward dawn the PTs made Mindanao. There was an agonizing three-day wait for three Flying Fortresses that had been sent north to pick up the party. Only two arrived; baggage, arms and equipment were jettisoned. All got aboard. The planes took off about midnight, March 16, and flew for about 11 hours to northern Australia.

As MacArthur's train approached Melbourne on a crisp March morning, 4,000 gathered to meet him at the station. Assorted generals and admirals in khaki, and an American guard of honor, and seven brown Filipino soldiers awaited. The train stopped. There was a wait. MacArthur stepped out, in a plain, faded khaki jacket, open at the neck and without his four stars of rank, and sharply pressed khaki trousers. There was a touch of gold on his garrison cap. In his right hand swung a bamboo swagger stick.

MacArthur stepped up to a microphone.

"I have every confidence in the ultimate success of our joint cause, but success in modern war requires something more than courage and willingness to die. It requires careful preparation . . . No general can make something from nothing. My success or failure will depend primarily upon the resources which our respective governments place at my disposal. My faith in them is complete. In any event, I shall do my best. I shall keep the soldier's faith."

"What's that?" asked a scribbling Australian reporter, who couldn't catch the last word.

"I shall keep the soldier's faith," Douglas MacArthur repeated firmly into the microphone.

MacArthur was scarcely in Australia when the Japanese opened an all-out attack on Wainwright's positions on Bataan. Bataan fell early in April.

Corregidor and its satellite island forts guarding the mouth of Manila Bay—held out for nearly a month longer, with counter-battery and anti-aircraft fire. On May 5 the Japanese, after a week of bombardment that buried some defenses under rocky landslides, came ashore. The next day the exhausted Americans surrendered honorably.

Skillful Delaying Operations

Technically, Bataan and Corregidor were defeats for MacArthur's forces. Actually, they were skillfully conducted delaying operations against an overwhelmingly superior enemy. MacArthur, Wainwright & Company exacted a heavy price from the Japanese. They tied up crack Japanese troops for nearly five months when they might have been employed elsewhere. They denied to the Japanese the use of Manila harbor, one of the finest in the Orient. The time gained enabled men and material to flow to Australia, New Caledonia, and elsewhere in the Pacific.

Winston Churchill has recorded that when he was visiting Franklin D. Roosevelt at the White House late in December, 1941, and learned of the "approaching fate" of MacArthur on Bataan and Corregidor, he "thought it right" to show to Mr. Roosevelt and Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, the dispatch which the British War Office had sent in the dark days of May, 1940, to Viscount Gort, then commander of the British Expeditionary Force that was falling back upon Dunkirk.

The War Office message told Gort that he would be ordered to return to England with a few officers and turn over command to a corps commander. The message said that on political grounds it would be bad for the Germans to capture Gort and it would be "a needless triumph" for the enemy.

Churchill concedes it is possible that the tenor of this message influenced other great events and the fortunes of "another valiant commander," namely MacArthur. Churchill says Roosevelt and Stimson read the message with deep attention; Stimson asked for a copy of it. Churchill says it may have been "that this influenced them in the right decision." "I should like to think this was true," Churchill has written.

Early in February of 1942 Quezon wirelessed a bombshell to the White House. He suggested to Roosevelt that the United States should declare the Philippines independent and that this country and Japan should then proceed to neutralize the islands. All troops would be withdrawn and the Philippine army mustered out.

Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of the late President Woodrow Wilson and then high commissioner in the Philippines, subscribed to Quezon's scheme.

It was MacArthur's lot to forward the Quezon and Sayre messages.

MacArthur made it clear that he had no illusions about the future but he wanted to know what to do.

"So far as the military angle is concerned," he added, "the problem presents itself as to whether the plan of President Quezon might offer the best possible solution of what is about to be a disastrous debacle. It would not affect the ultimate solution in the Philippines for that would be determined by the results in other theaters."

Stimson Answers

One can imagine the reaction in the Pentagon and at the White House. Quezon seemed to be selling out despite his public pronouncements. Sayre, and worst of all MacArthur, appeared to be backing Quezon's scheme. Stimson and the Chief of Staff, General of the Army George C. Marshall, rushed to see Roosevelt. The President asked Marshall what he proposed to do. Marshall let Stimson answer. Stimson felt that the Quezon idea played into the Japanese hands, that it would ruin the friendship between the Philippines and the United States, that Japan could not be trusted to keep any agreement about neutralizing the islands, and that the United States and Japan would be held equally guilty of destroying the Philippines.

Marshall spent the afternoon working up a reply to MacArthur; Stimson drafted one for Quezon. The upshot was this message from Roosevelt to MacArthur, dated February 9, 1942:

"In the second section of this message I am making, through you, an immediate reply to President Quezon's proposals of February 8. My reply must emphatically deny the possibility of this government's agreement to the political aspects of President Quezon's proposal. I authorize you to arrange for the capitulation of the Filipino elements of the defending forces, when and if in your opinion that course appears necessary and always having in mind that the Filipino troops are in the service of the United States. Details of all necessary arrangements will be left in your hands, including plans for segregation of forces and the withdrawal, if your judgment so dictates, of American elements to Fort Mills (Corregidor). The timing also will be left to you.

"American forces will continue to keep our flag flying in the Philippines so long as there remains any possibility of resistance. I have made these decisions in complete understanding of your military estimate that accompanied President Quezon's message to me. The duty and the necessity of resisting Japanese aggression to the last transcends in importance any other obligation now facing us in the Philippines."

Roosevelt asked MacArthur to radio the gist of his plans in accordance with the above instructions. He also asked the General to pass along to Quezon the second section of the message. This part, in effect, told Quezon that the United States was pledged to give the Philippines their independence in 1946, that Japanese offers of promises could never be relied upon, that whatever happened to MacArthur's garrison, the American forces would return "and drive the last remnant of the invaders from your soil."

Quezon, with his shot in the arm, promised to abide by Roosevelt's message. MacArthur characteristically said he would fight on to the end, and that in no circumstances would he surrender the Filipino troops under him.

Whatever Quezon felt, MacArthur appreciated everything only too well; it must have been easy in the air-conditioned purlieus of Washington in 1942 to have flashed hortatory messages to Bataan, where the temperature under an implacable sun and before a tenacious, skillful foe was in the hundreds and Americans were dying like flies. In those days — even as today — Washington and the rest of the United States were only partially mobilized; there was a groping fumbling understanding of what war meant (the men on Bataan knew); even as today there was the desire to carry on "business as usual" and not to do anything too drastic on the home front that might boomerang politically.

"Rally to me. Let the indomitable spirit of Bataan and Corregidor lead on . . . For the land of your sacred birth, strike!

"Let no heart be faint. Let every arm be steeled. The guidance of Divine God points to the way. Follow in His name to the Holy Grail of righteous victory."

These were the words of Douglas MacArthur as he stepped ashore on Leyte on Oct. 20, 1944.

Kept His Promise

It was his destiny to liberate the Philippines. He had promised to come back, and he did.

The Navy was busy with carrier strikes softening up Japanese defenses, taking pictures, feeling out the enemy. In the early fall of 1944 a naval aviator was shot down over Leyte; he got ashore unhurt and was concealed by friendly Filipinos. He was picked up not long after and made a startling intelligence report which led to alteration of the plan for conquering the Philippines. He reported that Leyte rather than Mindanao, would be a comparative pushover. Further, it had good beaches.

The report was confirmed by photographs. MacArthur and the chiefs of staff in Washington hastily revised their plans. Only a few months before MacArthur had gone to Hawaii to meet President Roosevelt and to win with his persuasiveness a powerful argument against the Navy. The Navy wanted to skip the Philippines, hit Formosa, and prepare for a landing on the China coast. MacArthur said no; he pointed out our moral obligation to retake the Philippines, convinced Roosevelt it could be done without the blood baths that the Navy and the Marines had suffered in their Central Pacific operations against such Jap strongholds as Tarawa, Eniwetok and Saipan.

The report on Jap weakness at Leyte speeded up the reconquest of the islands by three months. Our troops sailed in gigantic convoys. It was the mightiest armada yet seen in the Pacific.

The Leyte campaign was tough to the end. It broke the back of Japanese resistance in the islands and gave us air bases from which to hammer enemy air strength on Luzon. MacArthur's forces went into Luzon—as the Japanese had in 1941 — by way of Lingayen gulf. They were in Manila in February, 1945.

On March 2 Douglas MacArthur set foot once again on battle-scarred Corregidor. He saw the Stars and Stripes hoisted on the battered white flagpole from which the enemy had ripped it three years before. He said: "I see the old flagstaff still stands. Haul the colors to its peak and let no enemy ever haul them down."

British Official Defends Policy Of China Trade

LONDON, May 8 (AP)—Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of Britain's Board of Trade, said yesterday it was "nonsense" to say that British goods shipped to Red China greatly helped the Communists in their Korean fighting.

Sir Hartley's statement to the House of Commons was seen as a direct rebuttal to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's declaration before a joint Senate committee in Washington last Thursday that materials reaching Red China through the crown colony of Hong Kong had been of "substantial assistance" to the Communists in Korea.

Shawcross defended the Labor government's policy of trade with the Chinese Communists.

"These exports," he declared, "have made no significant contribution to the Chinese war potential against our forces in Korea."

But he indicated that should the United Nations order an embargo of strategic materials to China, Britain would cut off her shipments. In order to carry out such sanctions, Britain would have to break off the diplomatic recognition she offered Peiping Jan. 6 1950.

An American resolution calling for such an embargo was to be put before the U. N. 12-nations sanctions committee today.

SINGAPORE, May 8 (AP)—E. F. Stanton, U. S. ambassador to Thailand (Siam), proposed today that the United Nations set up recruitment offices throughout the world for volunteer forces to fight Communist aggression.

Baltimorean Is Held In Shooting Of Youth

WESTMINSTER, Md., May 8 (AP)—Francis Vincent Welsh, 29, Baltimore, was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of manslaughter in the shooting of Robert Stanley Hood, 12, Pickett's Corner.

Welsh was in the Carroll County jail in default of $1,000 bond.

State Police Corporal James S. Poteet, who signed the warrant, said his investigation disclosed no motive for the shooting, which apparently was the result "of careless handling of firearms."

Welsh told officers he was firing a .38 caliber pistol at bottles, which the Hood boy was placing in position for future shots.

Trouble developed in the gun, Welsh added, and it discharged accidentally as he tried to clear it. The bullet struck Hood.

U. S., Russia Break Off Lend-Lease Parley

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States and Russia yesterday broke off direct talks aimed at settlement of Moscow's $10,800,000,000 lend-lease account.

Both sides agreed to call off their regular meetings after a brief 30-minute session produced the usual deadlock.

Russian Ambassador Panyushkin made no move to budge from his firm opposition to returning American lend-lease ships or boosting Moscow's financial settlement offer.

The United States has reduced its bill to $800,000,000. Moscow has countered with a $240,000,000 offer.

He's grown–fast!

Pearl Harbor—1941. Korea—1951. Only ten years. But in that time the Bell System's capacity to serve the nation has literally doubled!

And the Long Distance telephone network which ties America together has grown even more. In 1941, there was very little coaxial cable in use. Radio relay was still in an experimental stage. Yet today there are 8,000 miles of coaxial cable in service—plus thousands of miles of radio relay. And Long Distance telephone circuits have increased in ten years from about 4,800,000 miles to 20,800,000.

In times like these, telephone lines are defense lines. For they are helping America rush its big production program. It's fortunate this nationwide network has grown so big, so fast.

British Official Defends Policy Of China Trade

LONDON, May 8 (AP)—Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of Britain's Board of Trade, said yesterday it was "nonsense" to say that British goods shipped to Red China greatly helped the Communists in their Korean fighting.

Sir Hartley's statement to the House of Commons was seen as a direct rebuttal to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's declaration before a joint Senate committee in Washington last Thursday that materials reaching Red China through the crown colony of Hong Kong had been of "substantial assistance" to the Communists in Korea.

Shawcross defended the Labor government's policy of trade with the Chinese Communists.

"These exports," he declared, "have made no significant contribution to the Chinese war potential against our forces in Korea."

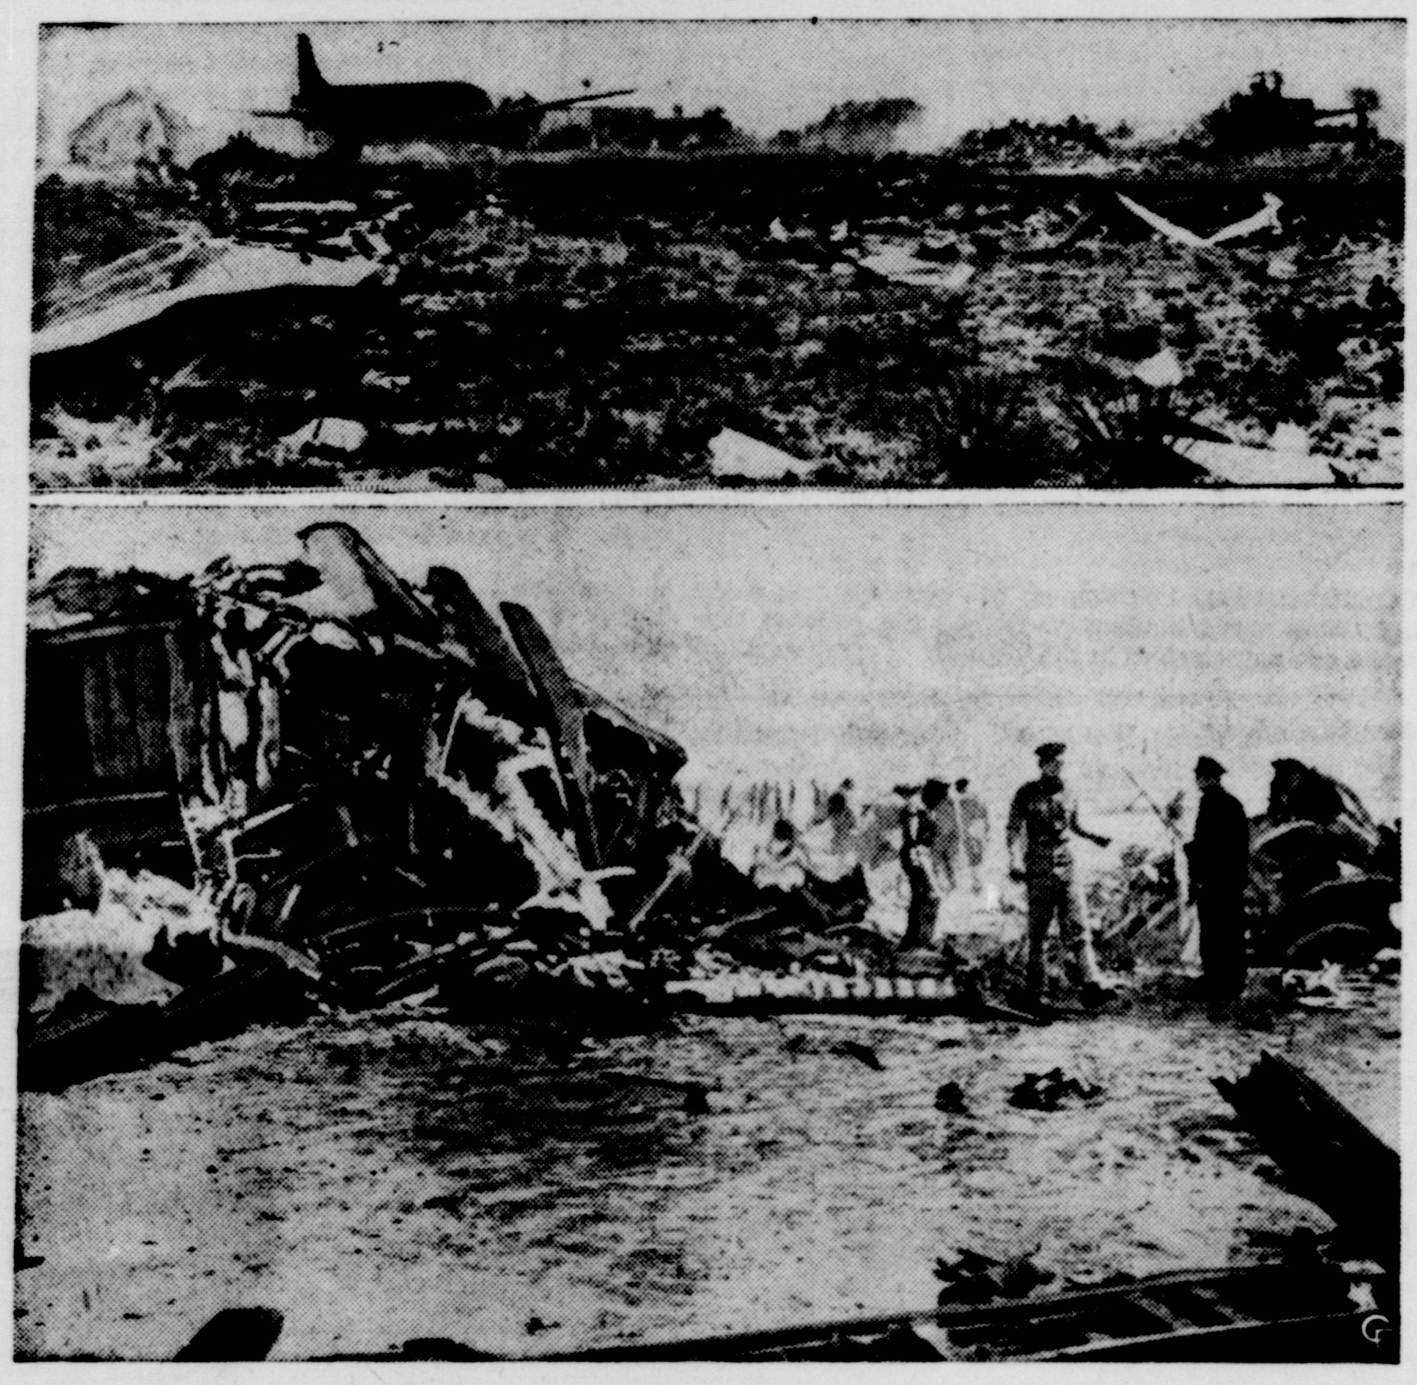
But he indicated that should the United Nations order an embargo of strategic materials to China, Britain would cut off her shipments. In order to carry out such sanctions, Britain would have to break off the diplomatic recognition she offered Peiping Jan. 6 1950.

An American resolution calling for such an embargo was to be put before the U. N. 12-nations sanctions committee today.

Hasty Makes Waste

INDIANAPOLIS, May 7 (AP) — Hasty made waste Saturday night. William Hasty, 25, was called into Municipal Court yesterday to answer two charges of reckless driving. Police had stopped him twice, 29 minutes apart.

SEEK CAUSE OF B-36 CRASH IN WHICH 23 DIED



AFTER HOURS OF INVESTIGATION the cause of the worst B-36 bomber crash in history remained a mystery. Wreckage of the giant plane lies scattered over four acres of the Kirkland Air Force Base (top) at Albuquerque, N. M., where it crashed during a blinding sandstorm, bringing death to 23 of 25 persons aboard. Two are in critical condition. Rescue workers (bottom) probe debris. (International Soundphoto)

Mexican Labor Okayed

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Legislation authorizing the government to recruit Mexicans for seasonal work on U. S. farms was approved yesterday by the Senate.

The measure was passed by voice vote. It now goes to the House.

World Legion Urged

SINGAPORE, May 8 (AP)—E. F. Stanton, U. S. ambassador to Thailand (Siam), proposed today that the United Nations set up recruitment offices throughout the world for volunteer forces to fight Communist aggression.

Until a world convention on international traffic was signed by the United Nations in 1949, American tourists taking automobiles abroad had to register them as vehicles of a foreign country. Now home-state license plates are valid across much of Europe, the National Geographic Society notes.

Baltimorean Is Held In Shooting Of Youth

WESTMINSTER, Md., May 8 (AP)—Francis Vincent Welsh, 29, Baltimore, was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of manslaughter in the shooting of Robert Stanley Hood, 12, Pickett's Corner.

Welsh was in the Carroll County jail in default of $1,000 bond.

State Police Corporal James S. Poteet, who signed the warrant, said his investigation disclosed no motive for the shooting, which apparently was the result "of careless handling of firearms."

Welsh told officers he was firing a .38 caliber pistol at bottles, which the Hood boy was placing in position for future shots.

Trouble developed in the gun, Welsh added, and it discharged accidentally as he tried to clear it. The bullet struck Hood.

133 Direct Descendants

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn., May 8 (AP)—Mrs. Lizzie Jane Finchum Flynn, 86, died yesterday leaving 133 direct descendants.

Mrs. Flynn is survived by two sons, three daughters, 40 grandchildren, 82 great-grandchildren and six great-great-grandchildren.

U. S., Russia Break Off Lend-Lease Parley

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States and Russia yesterday broke off direct talks aimed at settlement of Moscow's $10,800,000,000 lend-lease account.

Both sides agreed to call off their regular meetings after a brief 30-minute session produced the usual deadlock.

Russian Ambassador Panyushkin made no move to budge from his firm opposition to returning American lend-lease ships or boosting Moscow's financial settlement offer.

The United States has reduced its bill to $800,000,000. Moscow has countered with a $240,000,000 offer.

Pearl Harbor—1941. Korea—1951. Only ten years. But in that time the Bell System's capacity to serve the nation has literally doubled!

And the Long Distance telephone network which ties America together has grown even more. In 1941, there was very little coaxial cable in use. Radio relay was still in an experimental stage. Yet today there are 8,000 miles of coaxial cable in service—plus thousands of miles of radio relay. And Long Distance telephone circuits have increased in ten years from about 4,800,000 miles to 20,800,000.

In times like these, telephone lines are defense lines. For they are helping America rush its big production program. It's fortunate this nationwide network has grown so big, so fast.

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK (INS)—

SIDEGLANCES at celebrities:

Met a man the other night who, with his partner, has turned down a Hollywood offer of $5,000,000.

Dick Rodgers, one of the greatest composers of fine popular music in the history of this country. The Hollywood-coveted property is "Oklahoma!" first of a great series of smash hits by Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein.

It ran on Broadway for years and has been running on the road since it closed in New York, a long time ago. It is the biggest money-maker in the history of the British theater. Nobody ever seems to tire of it, a state of mind which may cause the fabulous pair to bring it back to Broadway this summer—under the auspices of the Theater Guild.

"It's like an annuity," Rodgers explained. "If we sell it to Hollywood, we kill our golden goose. Besides, we'd have to split with the Theater Guild, then cut the rest in two, then pay the taxes, and there wouldn't be much left out of five million."

For much the same reason, Rodgers and Hammerstein will not sell their "South Pacific" or their new and incredibly beautiful one, "The King And I." which springs from an idea submitted to them by Star Gertrude Lawrence and her court.

They'd be happy to let their "Carousel," go to Hollywood, if someone comes along with a slab of important money.

Here's an astounding thing: Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the atomic spy, became a suspect as far back as 1946, when his name was mentioned in connection with the seizure of Dr. Allan Nunn May, the Canadian scientist-spy who was turned in by the Russian code clerk he had been using as a courier.

In 1947 we decided that a certain amount of atomic secrets had to be taken out of the "top secret" file and declassified, to speed up the industrial and medical uses of uranium and plutonium.

We asked the British to send over a team of physicists to participate in the declassification meeting, just as they had sent a team to engage in the creation of the a-bomb. The list the British submitted did not include the name of Fuchs.

But certain American scientists insisted that he be added to the British team, and he was.

So the man who while at Los Alamos in 1945 had given to Courier Harry Gold information which changed the course of history was permitted to come back here and nose into what we had learned since his departure.

Who was his sponsors?

• — • — •

Jack Frye, now head of General Aniline and Film Corp., was one of the young pioneers of American commercial aviation. The far-sighted executive became one of the fathers of the country's trans-ocean routes, helped lay out fabulously far-flung routes for his company, T W A. . .routes that extend as far as Bombay.

Last week I went to a party for Frye and learned it was a farewell fete. He was leaving the next day for Europe.

That seemed like an old story for Frye, but the host shook his head.

"It's Jack's first trip abroad."

At the Quebec conference during World War II, F. D. R. and his advisors promised the British that we would never drop an a-bomb without first gaining the consent of Britain.

It was put in writing, in the still-shrouded document that was born at Quebec. Only the vehement protests of Sen. Hickenlooper and New York Congressman W. Sterling Cole—made to the State Department—caused a rewrite of the agreement. Each threatened to denounce the clause in Congress.

A horse attached to a heavily loaded lumber wagon belonging to Mr. Louis Weber, balked on the streetcar tracks on Virginia avenue, yesterday morning. Every effort to start the horse was made. A driver of a coal cart backed his team against the vehicle but his efforts were in vain. He then unhitched his horse and tried to drag the obstinate animal of the lumber team off the track but did not succeed. The motorman of street car 16 finally pushed the horse and wagon off the track with his car. Street car traffic was delayed almost an hour. Half the lumber on the wagon was unloaded before the horse could be moved after getting off the track.

Bus Service Talks Continue

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 8 (AP)—A plan to discontinue bus service between Franklin, W. Va. and Cumberland, Md. was sidetracked indefinitely today by the Public Service Commission.

The Commission agreed to a request of the Reynolds Transportation Company to continue a hearing pending a new study of means of continuing the bus service.

The company had sought authority to discontinue the route, contending it has been losing money for some time. The loss, the firm said, amounted to 3.5 cents per bus mile in the June 12-July 12 period of 1950.

Many residents of the area had protested the discontinuance. It is the only public transportation service now furnished over the route.

Students At Work On Botanical Garden And Park At Kitzmiller

At Kitzmiller, in Garrett County, high school students and even some of the younger pupils have been busily engaged for the past several weeks in the construction of an outdoor classroom, in the form of a botanical garden and park. The planting, construction and development has been undertaken on the school grounds and an adjoining three-acre tract given them by the Kitzmiller Lions Club. The project is under the guidance of Melvin Brown, the school's science teacher, and over 300 species of trees, flowers and shrubs have been planted, representing every state in the union. In the top right hand picture, Ralph Calandrella and Bobby Davis are seen putting the finishing touches on a windmill. The windmill is gaily colored, and is an exact replica of those used in Holland. This one was built of orange crates and other salvaged material and will pump water from a nearby spring to help irrigate the park. Upper center shows some of the older boys laying stone in mortar for one of several native stone fireplaces in the garden. The boys include Neil Smith, Gary Brady, John Bruckey and Danny Tasker. Upper left is a waterfall or stream of water which cascades down into the Mill Race which flows through the park. This stream of water spreads for about a hundred feet along the hillside as it seeped from a coal mine at the top of the hill. However, the boys cut off the stream at the top, controlled all the little channels it had created, and diverted it into one cascade. This provided control of the water and added to the picturesque beauty of the project. Lower left shows some of the girls who have been doing their share. Much of the planting has been done by the feminine members of the school, while the boys have willingly undertaken the heavier work of constructing shelters, benches, tables, fireplaces, gravel paths, etc. The four girls, left to right are Margaret Holland, Clarice Barrick, Shirley Rhorbaugh, and Patsy Burrell. The flower bed contains hyacinths and parrot tulips. In the center photo Thomas Fike, Sonny Shank and John Rinker are the three busy carpenters working on the park bench. Below that picture a group of boys are shown constructing a bridge across the Mill Race. While all of the boys who majored on bridge building are not in the picture the group included James Calhoun, James Henline, Ralph Shaffer, William Anderson, Vernon Sullivan, Cecil Pyle and William Stewart. Lower right shows Norman Parks and Harold Phillips setting out spruce trees from the State of Washington. A dedication program is planned for Thursday, Ma y 10, at 1:30 p. m. at the school, followed by formal opening of the garden. The scheduled program includes the coronation of a queen and king.

Botanical Garden Project Pride Of Kitzmiller Class

Over 300 Species Planted In Park

One of the most ambitious projects ever undertaken b ya public school in Maryland will reach a climax tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, when students, townspeople and visitors formally open the Kitzmiller School Botanical Garden and Park adjacent to the high school building.

Some time ago, under the direction of Melvin Brown, science teacher and other faculty members, the school's 135 students began the study of all types of native plant life. They prepared a mimographed book, containing more than 300 species of trees, flowers, plants and shrubs, and then decided they would like to attempt to grow them.

Lions Club Helps

Through the help of the Kitzmiller Lions Club, a three-acre tract of land was acquired adjacent to the school. The students, teachers and a few volunteers began clearing the land and preparing it as a park.

Copies of their books on the project were sent to the Forestry and Agriculture departments of each state and they requested specimens of trees, shrubs and flowers, native to those states. Many responded and the result has been the planting of several hundred.

In the meantime, the students, boys and girls, got busy with shovels rakes, wheelbarrows, hammers and axes, and have converted the old barren and brush grown plot into a beautiful park. Gravel paths wind about the area. A waterfall cascades gracefully down a hillside, where there was only a bog before; a number of large stone fireplaces have been built, benches, shelters and a bridge have been constructed with native stones and timbers to add to the natural beauty.

Permanent Undertaking

The project is a permanent undertaking and each class in the school has a section with flowers, trees and shrubs planted by them. Each specimen is properly marked with a neatly lettered plaque and credited to the class responsible.

The project has gained the encouragement of the townspeople, and organizations within the town, and the students are enthusiastic about it. Moreover, it has given them something constructive to do and has kept practically every youngster in the town fully occupied long hours every day.

The botanical garden, which is in itself a park, picnic grounds and community center, is a permanent contribution and one which will live and grow, long after those who started it are gone. It has proven to be a great outdoor classroom, a recreational project, a youth program, and an addition to the outdoor attractions of Western Maryland's natural beauty.

This type of project, which cost mostly hard work, initiative and imagination, could easily be duplicated in many communities in the area, and we predict it will attract wide attention in a very short time.

Lester Oates To Run For Mayor This Term

KEYSER, W. Va.—With only four days remaining to file petitions to be placed on the ballot for the city election, only two candidates have filed as candidates. Signed petitions must be filed with the city clerk by May 12.

Lester Oates, whose term as councilman expires July 1, has submitted his intention to run again for office, this time for mayor.

James Jennings has entered his name as a candidate for council, to fill the term to be vacated by Oates.

No other petitions have been returned and it is believed that only the two men named will be voted on at the primary election to be held on May 22. The city election will be held on June 5 and the new officers will take office on July 1.

Two councilmen, Elmer Hartman and Richard Herndon are holdovers this year and will continue in office. Mayor John C. Freeland, whose term expires in July, has indicated he will not seek reelection.

HOLLYWOOD, May (INS)—Elizabeth Taylor will have to tear herself away from Stanley Donen come summer.

Elizabeth Taylor

She is Dore Schary's choice to take the Deborah Kerr role in "Ivanhoe." Wasn't Elizabeth originally named for that part? Seems to me she was. Anyway, now that Deborah expects a baby and is out of the cast, Elizabeth is Robert Taylor's co-star.

This will be the second for Bob and Liz in England. I remember him telling me at the time they made "The Conspirators," that he was amazed at Liz' acting ability in so young a girl. He told me one minute she would be in an intense love scene and then the next minute she acted like a child. Well, a lot of water has gone under the bridge since then. Liz has been married and divorced.

Whatever else you may say about her, she's never been difficult with her studio, and now she's told to go to London you can bet all the tea in China she'll go.

Nice compliment for Glenn Ford: He's the only American actor (so far) to be invited to appear in "The Magic Box," a movie for the Festival of Britain, with such beloved favorites as Laurence Oliver, Robert Donat, John Mills and others. It's about the history of motion pictures—the title referring to the camera, of course.

Glenn, as you know, is in Europe making "The White Road" and while most of it is being filmed in Italy, he will arrange time off to accept the British honor.

Glenn cables that star "status" has nothing to do with appearances in the movie. Laurence Olivier is playing what amounts to a "bit" part—a London policeman.

Our own Betty Hutton proved herself a heroine at the May Day party given at the Brentwood Town and Country School.

Betty was there to watch her two little girls, Lindsay and Candy, in a play, along with the other mothers. Suddenly Betty looked across the aisle and the dress of one of the mother' at the school play was ablaze from a cigaret someone had thrown carelessly.

Without waiting for any men in the place to do anything, Betty rushed in and with her bare hands put out the fire, stamping it as she rubbed out the flames. She was given a round of applause. That was quick thinking on the part of Miss Hutton.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Hear from New York that Ethel Merman and her husband, Bob Levitt, have parted. But they have separated before and made up, so let's hope this is just one of those family quarrels.

Herbert Marshall was ready to go home from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, after coming through the operation beautifully, when he was stricken. Now his date of leaving the hospital is indefinite, although he is reported better.

Barbara Hutton is still very sick. When she is well enough she plans to go to Europe. At that time she will arrange for her divorce from Prince Igor Troubetzkoy. Right now she is too sick to think of anything but getting well.

An unusual foursome at Ciro's to hear Sophie Tucker was Lynn Bari and her ex-husband, Walter Kane, and Cookie Gordon with her ex, Mack Gordon. They were all together at one table.

Sophie continues to bring them in. Her last night, next Sunday, May 13, is really going to be a gala with all the great entertainment. Best part is the proceeds go to the Korean war wounded—and there is no better cause.

Mother Tongue, Mervyn Leroy's racing thoroughbred, became a mother on Kentucky Derby Day, so Merv is calling the cold Derby Day, hoping the name will be significant. Had dinner with him at La Rue. Ann Rutherford was with Bill Dozier.

J. Carroll Naish is entering his 20-year-old daughter, Elaine, in dramatic school. Elaine wants to become an actress and Papa is going to see that she has the right training.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Dear John I'm tired Cindy

Is suicide a form of murder?

Answer: Certainly. In at least one language, German, it is called "self-murder" (Selbst-mord). A person does not kill himself because he is sad and discouraged, but because his sadness and discouragement have made him murderously angry and there is no one but himself on whom his fears or moral scruples will allow him to vent his rage. Suicide is most frequent in people who have been brought up under tyrannically strict discipline line and in whom frustration in adult life re-awakens the rage which in childhood they felt at their parents, but later "displaced" onto themselves.

May benzedrine create a "craving"?

Answer: As is true of other drugs, even including the narcotics, this will depend on how fundamentally well-balanced you are. In the Detroit State Medical Journal, Dr. F. A. Freyhan says that people whose moods do not interfere with their capacity for work feel no marked phychological effects from taking benzedrine. But people who suffer from moods of sluggishness and fatigue in which they "can't seem to get going" find that benzedrine makes them cheerful, energetic and productive, and may develop an unhealthy craving for it.

Are "spastics" feeble-minded?

Answer: Not always, by any means, says a joint bulletin of the U. S. Children's Bureau and Office of education. Washington, D.C. "Some of them are very bright," and "those who look and act worst sometimes are the brightest." What is now known as "cerebral palsy" is due to brain injury before, during or soon after birth and affects the victim's power to control some functions of his mind or body—most frequently certain types of muscular movements. It is not contagious or inheritable and in many cases can show marked improvement under proper medical and parental care.

Radio And Television

By Fred Allen

(John Crosby is in Europe on vacation. In his absence his column will be written by his friends. Today's column is by Fred Allen.)

TELEVISION is here to stay—and so is General MacArthur. In the beginning, God worked six days and created the Earth. Today, 1 director, 1 scenic designer, 8 writers, 4 painters, 6 carpenters, 5 wardrobe women, 4 cameramen, 4 assistants, 2 floor managers, 8 chorus girls, 10 actors, 6 electricians, 18 stagehands and 20 musicians work six days and create a mediocre television show.

• — • — •

In Chicago, during 1950, a crime was committed every 12½ minutes.

(Criminals on TV crime shows claim they could have beaten this record if they didn't have to stop for commercials.)

• — • — •

The Western Union Telegraph Company has formed a subsidiary to install and service television receivers.

(If you come home some night and see a messenger boy on your roof—there is no reason to stop drinking.)

• — • — •

The National Credit Office, Inc., reports that 70 per cent of consumer purchases of television receivers are on an installment basis.

(The size of a TV actor's audience has nothing to do with his ability—it is determined by the finance company's collections.)

• — • — •

To cover the recent demonstration for General MacArthur the various networks had more than 500 technicians and $2,500,000 worth of TV equiument in the streets.

(Many radio actors wish the networks would leave them there.)

• — • — •

The Supreme Court will shortly rule on whether the CBS or RCA system will be used for color television.

(Meantime, both TV networks will operate in one color—red.)

• — • — •

According to a survey, conducted by a Northwestern University professor, teen-age youths are reading less because of television.

(In most American homes the 20-inch screen is replacing the 5-foot shelf.)

• — • — •

The newspaper critic's scathing review of a TV show is hate's labor lost.

(The minute a program is finished the viewer at home forms his opinion of the actors and their wares. The critic's pernicious monograph, appearing in the paper the following morning, is too late to serve a purpose. It is merely the obituary of a departed charade.)

• — • — •

Television is keeping so many baseball fans away from one minor league park that the teams are only playing with seven men.

(The other two players sit in the stands so there will be somebody to watch the games.)

• — • — •

A Boston incident. Excited by something it saw on a television program, a Doberman-Pinscher bit his six-year-old master.

(It's logical—the dog couldn't turn the set off—it did the next best thing.)

• — • — •

A special committee of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters reports it will attempt to raise necklines in television.

(Faye Emerson is sure going to look incognito in a turtle-neck evening gown.)

• — • — •

One columnist wonders why most TV directors have those short haircuts.

(TV directors wear crew cuts to keep the actors from getting in their hair.)

• — • — •

There are so many college men working in television any office door can be opened with a fraternity key.

• — • — •

A Cleveland Transit System board member blames television for trolley line's deficit.

(Television may be going places but the people who are looking at it aren't.)

• — • — •

One TV survey outfit has a new electro-mechanical system that eliminates calling viewers by phone.

(Today there are so many surveys calling set owners that the set owners are starting to call the surveys—and what they are calling them threatens to reach a new high in sulphurous invective. Some of the phrases contain so much sulphur if they are rubbed on a hard surface the words will give off a dull blue flame.)

• — • — •

In South Bend a TV antenna fell across a 27,000-volt power line with some amazing results. Balls of fire bounced up and down on the roof with thunderous explosions; the telephone burned out; a glove lying in the yard burst into flames; the plumbing began throwing off sparks and pipes melted around the kitchen sink.

(The family was not alarmed. They thought it was the Ralph Edwards' TV show starting.)

• — • — •

A Jersey family living in a two-room converted chicken coop has a $750 television set with a large screen.

(A large screen is probably no novelty in a chicken coop.)

• — • — •

A mortician, in Indiana, has made a casket with a built-in TV set.

(It's for pallbearers who do not want to miss their favorite programs while they are at work.)

• — • — •

All radio and television actors are by-products of advertising. The actor who formerly had to worry about his public now only has to keep his sponsor happy.

• — • — •

The TV critic, who wouldn't think of going to an automobile plant and selecting one car rolling off the assembly line to criticize, will isolate one of a comedian's shows at random, lash it to his typewriter and pelt it to death with snide nouns, verbs, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions.

• — • — •

A small-time vaudeville agent is trying to cross a man with St. Vitus Dance, a waddling penguin and a large bird that flaps its wings. He hopes to produce a comedian who will win instant acclaim in television.

• — • — •

To save the trouble of explaining prehistoric monsters to your children, turn on the TV set and let them watch any wrestling match.

• — • — •

An adult who attends wrestling matches probably reads comic books for enlightenment.

• — • — •

Television may mean the end of civilization. If the medium developes, and TV shows improve, people will spend all of their time indoors sitting before their sets. Babies will be born, families will be raised, old folks will pass on without ever leaving their houses. Nobody will get out to buy the products advertised on television. Giant corporations will collapse. Nobody will work or pay taxes. Everybody will be home collecting unemployment insurance. The government will fall. If a foreign power lands on our shores unchallenged, marches through our empty streets and proclaims that it has conquered the nation, the people of our country will never know—they will all be sprawled around indoors watching Kukla, Fran and Ollie.

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The Supreme Court will shortly rule on whether the CBS or RCA system will be used for color television.

(Meantime, both TV networks will operate in one color—red.)

•—•—•

According to a survey, conducted by a Northwestern University professor, teen-age youths are reading less because of television.

(In most American homes the 20-inch screen is replacing the 5-foot shelf.)

The newspaper critic's scathing review of a TV show is hate's labor lost.

(The minute a program is finished the viewer at home forms his opinion of the actors and their wares. The critic's pernicious monograph, appearing in the paper the following morning, is too late to serve a purpose. It is merely the obituary of a departed charade.)

•—•—•

Television is keeping so many baseball fans away from one minor league park that the teams are only playing with seven men.

(The other two players sit in the stands so there will be somebody to watch the games.)

•—•—•

A Boston incident. Excited by something it saw on a television program, a Doberman-Pinscher bit his six-year-old master.

(It's logical—the dog couldn't turn the set off—it did the next best thing.)

•—•—•

A special committee of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters reports it will attempt to raise necklines in television.

(Faye Emerson is sure going to look incognito in a turtle-neck evening gown.)

•—•—•

One columnist wonders why most TV directors have those short haircuts.

(TV directors wear crew cuts to keep the actors from getting in their hair.)

•—•—•

There are so many college men working in television any office door can be opened with a fraternity key.

•—•—•

A Cleveland Transit System board member blames television for trolley line's deficit.

(Television may be going places but the people who are looking at it aren't.)

•—•—•

One TV survey outfit has a new electro-mechanical system that eliminates calling viewers by phone.

(Today there are so many surveys calling set owners that the set owners are starting to call the surveys—and what they are calling them threatens to reach a new high in sulphurous invective. Some of the phrases contain so much sulphur if they are rubbed on a hard surface the words will give off a dull blue flame.)

•—•—•

In South Bend a TV antenna fell across a 27,000-volt power line with some amazing results. Balls of fire bounced up and down on the roof with thunderous explosions; the telephone burned out; a glove lying in the yard burst into flames; the plumbing began throwing off sparks and pipes melted around the kitchen sink.

(The family was not alarmed. They thought it was the Ralph Edwards' TV show starting.)

•—•—•

A Jersey family living in a two-room converted chicken coop has a $750 television set with a large screen.

(A large screen is probably no novelty in a chicken coop.)

A mortician, in Indiana, has made a casket with a built-in TV set.

(It's for pallbearers who do not want to miss their favorite programs while they are at work.)

•—•—•

All radio and television actors are by-products of advertising. The actor who formerly had to worry about his public now only has to keep his sponsor happy.

•—•—•

The TV critic, who wouldn't think of going to an automobile plant and selecting one car rolling off the assembly line to criticize, will isolate one of a comedian's shows at random, lash it to his typewriter and pelt it to death with snide nouns, verbs, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions.

•—•—•

A small-time vaudeville agent is trying to cross a man with St. Vitus Dance, a waddling penguin and a large bird that flaps its wings. He hopes to produce a comedian who will win instant acclaim in television.

•—•—•

To save the trouble of explaining prehistoric monsters to your children, turn on the TV set and let them watch any wrestling match.

•—•—•

An adult who attends wrestling matches probably reads comic books for enlightenment.

•—•—•

Television may mean the end of civilization. If the medium developes, and TV shows improve, people will spend all of their time indoors sitting before their sets. Babies will be born, families will be raised, old folks will pass on without ever leaving their houses. Nobody will get out to buy the products advertised on television. Giant corporations will collapse. Nobody will work or pay taxes. Everybody will be home collecting unemployment insurance. The government will fall. If a foreign power lands on our shores unchallenged, marches through our empty streets and proclaims that it has conquered the nation, the people of our country will never know—they will all be sprawled around indoors watching Kukla, Fran and Ollie.

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Court Awards Negro Youth Estate For Which He Murdered His Father

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals has awarded a $3,500 estate to a 15-year-old negro youth who murdered his father to obtain the property he knew was being willed to him.

Two wills were factors in the case, which came to the high court on appeal from Mecklenburg County Circuit Court.

One was the will of the father, Micajah Jiggetts, which left most of his estate to his only son, William H. Jiggetts. The youth confessed he shot his sleeping father in the head with a shotgun on December 3, 1948.

At his trial, the boy—then 13 years old—said he killed his father so he could inherit his estate when the elder Jiggetts refused to give him $5. The boy was sentenced to serve 36 years in a state reformatory.

The lower court held that young Jiggetts, under Virginia law, was not entitled to benefit from the will because of his conviction for murder.

But there was an earlier will—one made jointly by the father and his late wife, Estella Jiggetts, before their only child was born.

Among other things, this will said their jointly-held property on their deaths should pass to any children they might have.

After a careful analysis of the complicated sentence structure of the earlier will, the Supreme Court ruled it made the son the heir regardless of his disqualification under the second will.

The court therefore reversed the lower court and directed it to enter a decree holding young Jiggetts became owner of the property under provisions of the will in which his mother had a voice.

Approximately $3,500 realized by sale of the property involved now is deposited in a bank in Clarksville to be claimed by young Jiggetts when he becomes eligible for parole after serving one-fourth of his sentence.

The court therefore reversed the lower court and directed it to enter a decree holding young Jiggetts became owner of the property under provisions of the will in which his mother had a voice.

Approximately $3,500 realized by sale of the property involved now is deposited in a bank in Clarksville to be claimed by young Jiggetts when he becomes eligible for parole after serving one-fourth of his sentence.

Navajo Indians still follow a centuries-old habit of scraping canary-yellow uranium ore from lonely rock faces on the Colorado Plateau and daubing it on their faces for ceremonial dances, the National Geographic Society notes.

WINNER of first place in a baby contest during homecoming week at the Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago, 13-month-old Danny Storzbach poses in his daddy's cap. His father is a CPO in the naval ROTC at Illinois Tech Institute. (International)

Sauer's Homer Enables Schultz To Beat Dodgers

Hank Sews Up Game In 1st Frame, 2-1

BROOKLYN, May 8 (AP) — One swipe by the home run bat of big Hank Sauer gave the Chicago Cubs enough runs for Bob Schultz today as the rookie lefty scattered nine Brooklyn hits for a 2-1 victory.

Hank Sauer

Sauer slammed a Carl Erskine pitch into the lower left field seats, a poke of some 360 feet, with Ramson Jackson on first base in the first inning. That was the ball game. It also was Sauer's fifth homer.

Schultz, a 27-year-old husky who knocked around the Chicago White Sox chain until last year, yielded the lone Brooklyn run in the sixth. Cal Abrams singled. After Pee Wee Reese flied out, Duke Snider forced Abrams. Jackie Robinson walked and Gil Hodges singled to left, scoring Snider.

Then came a sparkling catch by right fielder Frankie Baumholtz. Judging perfectly the flight of Carl Furillo's long high drive, he backed near the wall and jumped just at the right second. He came down clutching the ball in his glove hand. Box:

Wertz's Fluke Single In 11th Beats Yankees

Ducks Pitch, Ball Hits Bat, Wins Game, 6-5

DETROIT, May 8 (AP)—Vic Wertz tried to duck a pitched ball in the 11th inning but it struck his bat and bounced into left field for a game-winning single as the Detroit Tigers licked the league-leading New York Yankees, 6-5.

The fluke single handed rookie pitcher Ray Herbert his fourth straight victory as a relief pitcher without a defeat. Allie Reynolds, who went the distance, took his second loss against one victory.

New York's Hank Bauer, making his first start, belted two homers. Teammate Jackie Jensen smacked his fifth of the season.

Wertz whacked a two-run homer and drove in three runs to spark Detroit's 12-hit attack. Catcher Joe Ginsberg poled his third homer for the Tigers.

With one out in the eleventh Jerry Priddy singled to left. After Dick Kryhosky flied out, Priddy scooted to third on George Kell's single to right. Then Wertz followed with his fluke single, sending Priddy across the plate with the winning run. Box:

Feller Is Scalded, Inactive For Week

CLEVELAND, May 8 (AP)—A hose flew out of pitcher Bob Feller's hands today and threw scalding water on the lower half of his body.

Dr. Don A. Kelly, team physician, said the Cleveland Indians star suffered first and second degree burns on his torso and legs. The burns won't keep him sidelined more than a week, he said.

Feller had been working out at Municipal Stadium. The hose got away from him as he attempted to fill a whirlpool bath in the clubhouse.

Feller had been attempting to work out a muscular spasm in the small of his back. The spasm is "extremely painful," the club said and if anything will keep him out longer than the burns.

Sauer's Homer Enables Schultz To Beat Dodgers

Hank Sews Up Game In 1st Frame, 2-1

BROOKLYN, May 8 (AP) — One swipe by the home run bat of big Hank Sauer gave the Chicago Cubs enough runs for Bob Schultz today as the rookie lefty scattered nine Brooklyn hits for a 2-1 victory.

Hank Sauer

Sauer slammed a Carl Erskine pitch into the lower left field seats, a poke of some 360 feet, with Ramson Jackson on first base in the first inning. That was the ball game. It also was Sauer's fifth homer.

Schultz, a 27-year-old husky who knocked around the Chicago White Sox chain until last year, yielded the lone Brooklyn run in the sixth. Cal Abrams singled. After Pee Wee Reese flied out, Duke Snider forced Abrams. Jackie Robinson walked and Gil Hodges singled to left, scoring Snider.

Then came a sparkling catch by right fielder Frankie Baumholtz. Judging perfectly the flight of Carl Furillo's long high drive, he backed near the wall and jumped just at the right second. He came down clutching the ball in his glove hand. Box:

Wertz's Fluke Single In 11th Beats Yankees

Ducks Pitch, Ball Hits Bat, Wins Game, 6-5

DETROIT, May 8 (AP)—Vic Wertz tried to duck a pitched ball in the 11th inning but it struck his bat and bounced into left field for a game-winning single as the Detroit Tigers licked the league-leading New York Yankees, 6-5.

The fluke single handed rookie pitcher Ray Herbert his fourth straight victory as a relief pitcher without a defeat. Allie Reynolds, who went the distance, took his second loss against one victory.

New York's Hank Bauer, making his first start, belted two homers. Teammate Jackie Jensen smacked his fifth of the season.

Wertz whacked a two-run homer and drove in three runs to spark Detroit's 12-hit attack. Catcher Joe Ginsberg poled his third homer for the Tigers.

With one out in the eleventh Jerry Priddy singled to left. After Dick Kryhosky flied out, Priddy scooted to third on George Kell's single to right. Then Wertz followed with his fluke single, sending Priddy across the plate with the winning run. Box:

Feller Is Scalded, Inactive For Week

CLEVELAND, May 8 (AP)—A hose flew out of pitcher Bob Feller's hands today and threw scalding water on the lower half of his body.

Dr. Don A. Kelly, team physician, said the Cleveland Indians star suffered first and second degree burns on his torso and legs. The burns won't keep him sidelined more than a week, he said.

Feller had been working out at Municipal Stadium. The hose got away from him as he attempted to fill a whirlpool bath in the clubhouse.

Feller had been attempting to work out a muscular spasm in the small of his back. The spasm is "extremely painful," the club said and if anything will keep him out longer than the burns.

Business Men Go To Bat For B & O Plan

Will Urge Action On Thomas St. Project At Council Today

Because of its long range possibilities as well as immediate assistance toward the improvement of economic conditions in the area, a group of citizens will appear before the Mayor and City Council at 10:30 a. m. today to urge immediate action on a proposal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for expansion of its facility here.

Representatives of the South Cumberland Business Men's Association disclosed their displeasure last night with what they termed the delay and "stalling" action of the Mayor and City Council on this project.

Spokesmen for the organization said a delegation from their group, along with several other delegations, will urge the Council to proceed with the plan immediately.

Forerunner Of Expansion

A little more than a week ago, representatives of the railroad company appeared before an open meeting of the Council with a plan to relocate parts of Thomas Street, eliminate two dangerous curves and exchange land with the city, to provide more space for tracks.

The use of Diesels and other advancements which make longer trains possible has created a shortage of tracks in the yards here, it is explained, and the company has planned this project as the forerunner of other local expansions.

At that first Council meeting, action was deferred because one commissioner, George Tederick, was out of the city. However, at Monday night's meeting, with all members of the Council present, no final action on the proposal was taken.

Commissioner of Finance William H. Buchholtz made a motion that the plan be approved, but the motion was lost for want of a second.

The proposal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to expand its tracks and possibly other local installations here has been an open secret for several months.

Numerous conferences were held with city and railroad officials, and the Mayor and City Council had full knowledge of the proposal months before it was discussed at open meeting.

Included City Requests

Spokesmen for the South End Business Men maintain that they have learned the Council objected to some proposals in the first agreement presented by the railroad company, but that the company prepared a second agreement, incorporating as far as feasible, all the requests of the city officials.

This agreement is the one on which action has been delayed.

It was also learned yesterday that the railroad company has purchased practically all the property along Thomas Street and vicinity needed for the improvement. One or two houses and properties remain to be negotiated for.

One of these particularly, assessed for less than $4,000, is an obstacle, the business men said. The railroad company has offered owners $10,000 for the property, plus the house and moving it to another location. However, it was learned that one city official showed considerable interest in this property, going so far as to send a personal appraiser to the porperty for a valuation.

May Speed Traffic

Under terms of the agreement as offered by the railroad, the City of Cumberland will get a modern improvement along Thomas Street without cost to the city, and will receive land which can be developed as a playground or small park. It will also enable the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to take the first step in a long-range program of expansion.

Some officials feel that the additional tracks in the Thomas Street area may help alleviate the traffic tie-ups resulting from blocked crossings uptown and, more especially at this particular time, will create some employment, as well as encourage other firms and industries to proceed with an expansion program.

The South End Business Men and other interested citizens said they will ask the Council today for specific reasons why the expansion is not desirable, and will ask for public statements as to why the agreement has not been signed and the project encouraged.

Plane Wreckage Found; Pilot Is Dead, One Hurt

SOMERSET, Pa., May 8 (AP) — Surveyors found the wreckage of a small cabin plane atop the Allegheny Mountain near the Pennsylvania Turnpike today with the pilot dead and an occupant in critical condition.

The survivor identified himself as Richard G. Adair, 23, of Danville, Ill. Suffering from exposure and two broken legs, he told rescuers the plane crashed into the mountain side last Saturday.

Adair identified the dead pilot as George Seymour, also of Danville, Ill. He said they were en route from Columbus, Ohio, to Baltimore. Adair is also known as Ike Thornsborough, a son of M. Rose Thornsborough, Danville.

State police said they apparently became lost in a fog while following the turnpike eastward.

Surveyors located the dead pilot and the injured man during a timber survey. Adair heard the surveyors calling to each other and yelled for help.

"It all happened so fast. We crashed into the trees and then into the mountain side."

He said he crawled about 150 yards from the wreckage.

"I kept hearing the roar of trucks and autos from all sides of the mountain," said Adair, "but couldn't reach any vantage point to yell for help."

Scout Executive To Visit Local Units Next Week

James H. Gelwicks, deputy regional executive for Region Three, Boy Scouts of America, Philadelphia, will spend the week of May 14 in Potomac Council district on organizational work, Dr. E. E. Church, Keyser, council president, announced.

The schedule for the week includes evening meetings in Mountain District, Frostburg, Monday, May 14; Cumberland, Tuesday, May 15; Tri-Towns, Westernport, Wednesday, May 16; New Creek District, Keyser, Thursday, May 17; and South Branch District, Moorefield, Friday, May 18.

Gelwicks will be guest speaker at a number of service club meetings throughout the council during the week, President Church said. He also will conduct training courses for Den Mothers in the afternoons.

The scout executive has had long and varied experience in Scouting, serving as scout and scoutmaster for 20 years. He became assistant scout executive at Sandusky, Ohio and served as scout executive at Richmond, Ind., and Madison, Wisc., before becoming regional deputy of Region Eight at Kansas City. Prior to joining Region Three staff he was director of training for the St. Louis, Mo., scout council.

The regular executive meeting of the local council normally scheduled for last night has been postponed until next Tuesday to combine with Gelwicks' visit, Church said.

Chemical Treatment Unit To Improve City Water Supply

Construction of a new chemical treatment unit at Lake Gordon to provide rigid quality control over Cumberland's water supply is nearing completion.

Cost of the project involving renovation of the old shop office building is estimated at about $12,000.

All work is being done by personnel of the Evitts Creek Water Company, according to George M. Hitchcock, superintendent.

The building will house four one-ton chlorine and two half-ton ammonia containers, equipment for dispensing alum by the weight system and soda ash, lime and black alum by the batch system.

The modern installation, Hitchcock said, will allow better control of the addition of chemicals by housing all equipment in one building.

Pre-chlorination of water, part of the new installation, will improve the taste of water by killing much of the algae before raw water reaches the filter beds.

Hitchcock said two large motorized rafts have been built to house equipment for broadcasting copper sulphate on the beaches of Lake Koon and Lake Gordon.

The chemical, he added, will materially reduce the growth of algae along the shore line.

In addition to the pre-chlorination treatment, sufficient chlorine will be added between the filters and the clear well to maintain the five parts of chlorine to a million parts of water required by the Boards of Health of Maryland and Pennsylvania, he explained.

Officials said about seven tests must be taken each day to maintain chemical controls of the water system.

Death Of Two Miners Caused By Explosion

SOMERSET, Pa., May 8 (AP) — A powder explosion in an Elk Lick Township mine caused the death of two men, Coroner A. M. Uphouse said today.

The victims were Harry E. Warnick, 28, and Peter J. Mathews, 27, both of R.D. 1 Salisbury.

Fred Warnick, a brother of Harry, said the men went to inspect the mine before seeking a job there. They were reported missing Saturday night by Warnick's wife. A partly filled powder can was found near their bodies.

NEWS IN BRIEF

A child hygiene clinic will be held May 25 at the Flintstone Fire Hall by the Allegany County Health Department.

The flight of 14 planes from Cumberland to Baltimore in the state civil air defense drill was postponed Sunday because of local weather conditions.

Gerry Athey, 18-month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Athey, 219 Virginia Avenue, was treated for a lacerated forehead Sunday in Allegany Hospital. The child fell and struck his head in his home at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Circle 1, Trinity Lutheran Church, corner of Smith and North Centre Streets, will hold a rummage sale tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the parish hall.

Body Of Premature Child Found Along River Bank

An investigation by Donald C. Hott, Mineral County State's Attorney, is being conducted in the finding of a five-month-old female fetus yesterday evening along the Potomac River bank in Piedmont, W. Va.

The premature child was found about 6:55 p. m. along the bank near the American Steam Laundry between Ashfield Street and the old C&P Railroad tracks.

Delmar Kimble and his brother Donny, of Piedmont, were playing near the river's edge and stumbled over a paper sack containing the body. They told other playmates who notified Officer E. R. Saville, Piedmont Police Department, who in turn called the state's attorney, at Keyser.

The body was taken to Fredlock Funeral Home and a physician summoned to examine it. The physician said it was between five and six months old and had been dead from 24 to 48 hours.

Dick, who assumed his duties one day prior to Gunter, handled 19 of the cases Monday, including one drunken driving charge and two overloading violations. Gunter handled two of the cases including a drunken driving violation.

Coincidently the two drunken driving charges were the first on the docket of each Trial Magistrate, court officials noted.

SRC To Request Conference Here On Bridge Job

Several Agencies To Attend Meeting

The State Roads Commission of Maryland will arrange a meeting here in the near future to discuss plans for the proposed relocation of Blue Bridge.

In a letter to Mayor Thomas S. Post, Russell H. McCain, SRC chairman, said the proposal has been referred to the department's engineering department with the request that a meeting be arranged in Cumberland, to be attended by representatives of various participating agencies.

McCain added that the SRC will try to arrange the conference as soon as possible.

Considerable discussions have been held with the Maryland State Roads Commission, the West Virginia State Roads Commission and the Corps of Engineers on the plan.

At present, an Army Engineers survey crew is working in Cumberland, securing data which would be needed in the relocation of the dam across the Potomac here and the subsequent changes in the Blue Bridge. The crew will also compile data for channel work.

This work was slated for the fourth phase of the Cumberland-Ridgeley Flood Control Project.

The relocation of the dam would require raising the present bridge several feet and the plan under consideration calls for the use of the dam as the substructure of a new modern bridge across the Potomac here.

The final phases of the flood control project would include the removal of the present dam, construction of a new dam and channel and levee work.

Tulsa Concert Is Last Program For This Season

Tonight's Event At Fort Hill High

Tonight's concert by the University of Tulsa Radio-Concert Chorus, Tulsa, Okla., in the Fort Hill High School auditorium at 8:30 o'clock will be the ninth and last program sponsored by the Cumberland Choral Society for the current season.

Jack Platt, who directs the Cumberland Choral Society, yesterday recalled the previous eight programs that have been presented since last fall.

In the fall, the society's members sang Elijah and the Messiah. Then, in January, Virgil Fox, nationally-famed organist, presented a concert in the Centre Street Methodist Church.

Cornelia Stabler, monologist, was here in February and Claudia Pinza sang a program in March. The society also presented an all-Gershwin program, a Palm Sunday concert and another concert in Westernport.

The chorus which will appear here tonight is considered one of the outstanding musical units of its kind in the country. Only Sunday, the singers presented a broadcast from New York City.

Director of the chorus is Arthur D. Hestwood, a former member of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. Hestwood is director of choral music in the College of Fine Arts at the University of Tulsa. His chorus sings much in the pattern of Waring's aggregation.

The chorus, which numbers 20 girls and 21 boys, sings a repertoire that includes classical, sacred, popular and novelty selections.

Today is the second of three days that the UT group is appearing in the Tri-State area. Last night, Hestwood's singers were at the Bedford (Pa.) High School. Tomorrow they will entertain student bodies at Allegany High School, Beall High School and Frostburg State Teachers College.

No admission will be charged at tonight's concert but an offering will be collected.

Bowley Child Is Drowned Near Franklin

Three-Year-Old Boy Falls Into Georges Creek Near His Home

William Michael Bowley, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bowley, Brophytown, Franklin, Md. drowned yesterday afternoon in George's Creek about one-half mile from his home. The body was recovered by James Ray and "Bobby" Jones, Franklin, at 4:15 p. m.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said last night that death was caused by accidental drowning.

The child, who would have been three on July 10, was last seen with playmates around noon. He had gone from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Wilson T. Keller, with whom he resided for the past month, to play with his cousins.

The child was fascinated by buses, according to neighbors, and since children daily cross the bridge to catch their school bus, it is believed the child wandered across the bridge to the bus stop. Neighbors presume the child fell into the water while crossing to the other side.

Since the child had a liking for buses it is presumed he wandered near the creek and fell from a swinging bridge into the water.

The child's grandmother became alarmed when he did not return home and notified Westernport firemen and police at 3:30 p. m. An extensive search by Rev. G. Stanley Schwind, district committeeman of Boy Scouts, Harold Raines, scoutmaster at Franklin and a party of 25 scouts was organized.

At 4:15 p. m. the child's body was found in about a foot of water lying on its back, lodged against a crate, with several bruise marks about the face. The creek at the point is about 40 feet wide.

The resuscitator of the Luke plant of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company was sent for, but it was of no avail. Dr. James H. Wolverton, Jr., pronounced the child dead. Trooper Timothy M. Gilmore, Maryland State Police, Deputy Sheriff Edgar M. Lewis, and Westernport Police investigated.

Besides its parents, the child is survived by one brother, Edward Paul Bowley, ten-months old. The mother is the former Betty Keller. The father is a World War II veteran and served in the U. S. Navy. He is now employed as a civilian worker at the Naval Ordnance, Washington, D. C. His wife and two children had been residing at the home of the grandmother for the past month.

The body is at Boal's Funeral Home, Westernport.

Will Urge Action On Thomas St. Project At Council Today

Because of its long range possibilities as well as immediate assistance toward the improvement of economic conditions in the area, a group of citizens will appear before the Mayor and City Council at 10:30 a. m. today to urge immediate action on a proposal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for expansion of its facility here.

Representatives of the South Cumberland Business Men's Association disclosed their displeasure last night with what they termed the delay and "stalling" action of the Mayor and City Council on this project.

Spokesmen for the organization said a delegation from their group, along with several other delegations, will urge the Council to proceed with the plan immediately.

Forerunner Of Expansion

A little more than a week ago, representatives of the railroad company appeared before an open meeting of the Council with a plan to relocate parts of Thomas Street, eliminate two dangerous curves and exchange land with the city, to provide more space for tracks.

The use of Diesels and other advancements which make longer trains possible has created a shortage of tracks in the yards here, it is explained, and the company has planned this project as the forerunner of other local expansions.

At that first Council meeting, action was deferred because one commissioner, George Tederick, was out of the city. However, at Monday night's meeting, with all members of the Council present, no final action on the proposal was taken.

Commissioner of Finance William H. Buchholtz made a motion that the plan be approved, but the motion was lost for want of a second.

The proposal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to expand its tracks and possibly other local installations here has been an open secret for several months.

Numerous conferences were held with city and railroad officials, and the Mayor and City Council had full knowledge of the proposal months before it was discussed at open meeting.

Included City Requests

Spokesmen for the South End Business Men maintain that they have learned the Council objected to some proposals in the first agreement presented by the railroad company, but that the company prepared a second agreement, incorporating as far as feasible, all the requests of the city officials.

This agreement is the one on which action has been delayed.

It was also learned yesterday that the railroad company has purchased practically all the property along Thomas Street and vicinity needed for the improvement. One or two houses and properties remain to be negotiated for.

One of these particularly, assessed for less than $4,000, is an obstacle, the business men said. The railroad company has offered owners $10,000 for the property, plus the house and moving it to another location. However, it was learned that one city official showed considerable interest in this property, going so far as to send a personal appraiser to the porperty for a valuation.

May Speed Traffic

Under terms of the agreement as offered by the railroad, the City of Cumberland will get a modern improvement along Thomas Street without cost to the city, and will receive land which can be developed as a playground or small park. It will also enable the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to take the first step in a long-range program of expansion.

Some officials feel that the additional tracks in the Thomas Street area may help alleviate the traffic tie-ups resulting from blocked crossings uptown and, more especially at this particular time, will create some employment, as well as encourage other firms and industries to proceed with an expansion program.

The South End Business Men and other interested citizens said they will ask the Council today for specific reasons why the expansion is not desirable, and will ask for public statements as to why the agreement has not been signed and the project encouraged.

Insurance Manager Honored

Herbert J. McFarland, 612 Washington Street, is congratulated by Charles E. Phillips, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, Washington, D. C. (left) on the former's recent honor in becoming a charter member of the 1951 President's Merit Club for Staff Managers of the firm. McFarland, associate manager of the local branch of the company, gained the recognition for outstanding achievements during the past year. The local manager entered the insurance service as an agent in 1939 at Bellaire, Ohio, and was promoted to manager and transferred to Cumberland April 16, 1945. A veteran of World War II, McFarland served with the 29th Infantry Division in Germany and was wounded in action. He is senior vice commander for the Department of Maryland, Military Order of Purple Heart and Commander of Mountain Chapter No. 166, here. He also is aide de camp to the National Commander of the organization.

Chemical Treatment Unit To Improve City Water Supply

Construction of a new chemical treatment unit at Lake Gordon to provide rigid quality control over Cumberland's water supply is nearing completion.

Cost of the project involving renovation of the old shop office building is estimated at about $12,000.

All work is being done by personnel of the Evitts Creek Water Company, according to George M. Hitchcock, superintendent.

The building will house four one-ton chlorine and two half-ton ammonia containers, equipment for dispensing alum by the weight system and soda ash, lime and black alum by the batch system.

The modern installation, Hitchcock said, will allow better control of the addition of chemicals by housing all equipment in one building.

Pre-chlorination of water, part of the new installation, will improve the taste of water by killing much of the algae before raw water reaches the filter beds.

Hitchcock said two large motorized rafts have been built to house equipment for broadcasting copper sulphate on the beaches of Lake Koon and Lake Gordon.

The chemical, he added, will materially reduce the growth of algae along the shore line.

In addition to the pre-chlorination treatment, sufficient chlorine will be added between the filters and the clear well to maintain the five parts of chlorine to a million parts of water required by the Boards of Health of Maryland and Pennsylvania, he explained.

Officials said about seven tests must be taken each day to maintain chemical controls of the water system.

Plane Wreckage Found; Pilot Is Dead, One Hurt

SOMERSET, Pa., May 8 (AP) — Surveyors found the wreckage of a small cabin plane atop the Allegheny Mountain near the Pennsylvania Turnpike today with the pilot dead and an occupant in critical condition.

The survivor identified himself as Richard G. Adair, 23, of Danville, Ill. Suffering from exposure and two broken legs, he told rescuers the plane crashed into the mountain side last Saturday.

Adair identified the dead pilot as George Seymour, also of Danville, Ill. He said they were en route from Columbus, Ohio, to Baltimore. Adair is also known as Ike Thornsborough, a son of M. Rose Thornsborough, Danville.

State police said they apparently became lost in a fog while following the turnpike eastward.

Surveyors located the dead pilot and the injured man during a timber survey. Adair heard the surveyors calling to each other and yelled for help.

"It all happened so fast. We crashed into the trees and then into the mountain side."

He said he crawled about 150 yards from the wreckage.

"I kept hearing the roar of trucks and autos from all sides of the mountain," said Adair, "but couldn't reach any vantage point to yell for help."

Scout Executive To Visit Local Units Next Week

James H. Gelwicks, deputy regional executive for Region Three, Boy Scouts of America, Philadelphia, will spend the week of May 14 in Potomac Council district on organizational work, Dr. E. E. Church, Keyser, council president, announced.

Gelwicks will be guest speaker at a number of service club meetings throughout the council during the week, President Church said. He also will conduct training courses for Den Mothers in the afternoons.

The scout executive has had long and varied experience in Scouting, serving as scout and scoutmaster for 20 years. He became assistant scout executive at Sandusky, Ohio and served as scout executive at Richmond, Ind., and Madison, Wisc., before becoming regional deputy of Region Eight at Kansas City. Prior to joining Region Three staff he was director of training for the St. Louis, Mo., scout council.

The regular executive meeting of the local council normally scheduled for last night has been postponed until next Tuesday to combine with Gelwicks' visit, Church said.

Coincidently the two drunken driving charges were the first on the docket of each Trial Magistrate, court officials noted.

SRC To Request Conference Here On Bridge Job

Several Agencies To Attend Meeting

The State Roads Commission of Maryland will arrange a meeting here in the near future to discuss plans for the proposed relocation of Blue Bridge.

In a letter to Mayor Thomas S. Post, Russell H. McCain, SRC chairman, said the proposal has been referred to the department's engineering department with the request that a meeting be arranged in Cumberland, to be attended by representatives of various participating agencies.

McCain added that the SRC will try to arrange the conference as soon as possible.

Considerable discussions have been held with the Maryland State Roads Commission, the West Virginia State Roads Commission and the Corps of Engineers on the plan.

At present, an Army Engineers survey crew is working in Cumberland, securing data which would be needed in the relocation of the dam across the Potomac here and the subsequent changes in the Blue Bridge. The crew will also compile data for channel work.

This work was slated for the fourth phase of the Cumberland-Ridgeley Flood Control Project.

The relocation of the dam would require raising the present bridge several feet and the plan under consideration calls for the use of the dam as the substructure of a new modern bridge across the Potomac here.

The final phases of the flood control project would include the removal of the present dam, construction of a new dam and channel and levee work.

Resident Being Held On Entering Attempt

Ralph Leo Whorton Jr., 941 Gay Street, is being held in city jail pending a hearing at the State's Attorney's Office on a charge of an attempt to break into the Cumberland Motor Express Company Monday night to steal whisky. Another suspect is being sought by the police.

Patrolman Joseph H. Stitcher said the entry attempt was reported to him at 11:45 p. m. He and Patrolman C. W. Thompson split up to canvass the area and later Stitcher saw Whorton running across Third Street.

After Whorton climbed a fence and continued to flee, Officer Stitcher called out a halt warning before he fired a shot. Shortly afterwards the patrolman saw the youth near Springdale and Third Streets and told him to stop. Whorton obeyed the order.

Meanwhile, Officer Thompson was occupied pursuing the other suspect. He also fired a shot which ricocheted through a window. No one was hurt.

Tulsa Concert Is Last Program For This Season

Tonight's Event At Fort Hill High

Tonight's concert by the University of Tulsa Radio-Concert Chorus, Tulsa, Okla., in the Fort Hill High School auditorium at 8:30 o'clock will be the ninth and last program sponsored by the Cumberland Choral Society for the current season.

Jack Platt, who directs the Cumberland Choral Society, yesterday recalled the previous eight programs that have been presented since last fall.

In the fall, the society's members sang Elijah and the Messiah. Then, in January, Virgil Fox, nationally-famed organist, presented a concert in the Centre Street Methodist Church.

Cornelia Stabler, monologist, was here in February and Claudia Pinza sang a program in March. The society also presented an all-Gershwin program, a Palm Sunday concert and another concert in Westernport.

The chorus which will appear here tonight is considered one of the outstanding musical units of its kind in the country. Only Sunday, the singers presented a broadcast from New York City.

Director of the chorus is Arthur D. Hestwood, a former member of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. Hestwood is director of choral music in the College of Fine Arts at the University of Tulsa. His chorus sings much in the pattern of Waring's aggregation.

The chorus, which numbers 20 girls and 21 boys, sings a repertoire that includes classical, sacred, popular and novelty selections.

Today is the second of three days that the UT group is appearing in the Tri-State area. Last night, Hestwood's singers were at the Bedford (Pa.) High School. Tomorrow they will entertain student bodies at Allegany High School, Beall High School and Frostburg State Teachers College.

No admission will be charged at tonight's concert but an offering will be collected.

$25,000 Suit Is Settled

A $25,000 damage suit by a Cumberland man for the loss of the sight of his left eye has been settled out of Garrett County Circuit Court, where it had been docketed for trial yesterday.

Edward J. Ryan, attorney for Sensabaugh, said that the settlement was "very substantial," but declined to mention a specific figure. The settlement was reached Monday afternoon.

Defendant in the suit was the Union Fire Brick Company which is located at Jennings in Garrett County.

Sensabaugh, while working as a driver for the G. C. Sensabaugh, Inc., firm here, delivered machinery by truck to the Union Fire Brick Company. While an employe of the Union Fire Brick Company was unloading the machinery he struck Sensabaugh in the left eye, causing the loss of sight, Ryan said. This occurred March 22, 1949.

The suit was filed in Garrett County Circuit Court by Sensabaugh and the National Surety Company, which had paid compensation to the injured.

The Union Fire Brick Company was represented by Attorney W. Earle Cobey.

Two Brothers Get Verdicts

Two Frosbturg brothers won verdicts totaling $750 from a Garrett County Circuit Court jury in suits they filed against a former Frostburg contractor.

John W. Knieriem received a $400 verdicts and William C. Knieriem was given a $350 verdict Monday afternoon.

The brothers sued Howard Plummer, contending that in constructing houses for them in 1947 he had installed the furnaces improperly. They alleged that the temperature in their homes during the cold winter months never got above 55 degrees.

The suits were consolidated for a single trial Monday. The brothers were represented by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and Walter W. Dawson. Plummer, who now operates a movie projector in a Frostburg theater, was represented by Attorneys W. Earle Cobey and E. Ray Jones.

Originally filed in Allegany County Circuit Court, the suits subsequently were removed to the court in Oakland.

Fatal Mishaps, Property Loss Given In State Police Report

State Police report a total of 454 fatal accidents and $4,199,520 in property damages occuring in Maryland in 1950. The number of property damage accidents last year was 46,536 as compared to a figure of 28,547 in 1946. In the past four years the total has been steadily increasing.

Three hundred and six of the highway fatalities were in violation of state law while 148 were not. Three hundred and three drivers in fatal accidents were in violation and 249 were listed as not.

Charges of speeding led the way in last year's highway mishaps with a total of 138. Miscellaneous violations such as following too closely numbered 89 while death drivers who were definitely drinking totaled 26. A similar number of accidents occured in no right of way and the number of road hogs was set at 12.

In 1950 12 drivers disregarded highway signs or signals and in three instances the driver would not yield to pedestrians. A total of 46,536 automobiles were taken to garages for repair work as a result of 26,247 accidents last year, an average of 128 per day.

Bowley Child Is Drowned Near Franklin

Three-Year-Old Boy Falls Into Georges Creek Near His Home

William Michael Bowley, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bowley, Brophytown, Franklin, Md. drowned yesterday afternoon in George's Creek about one-half mile from his home. The body was recovered by James Ray and "Bobby" Jones, Franklin, at 4:15 p. m.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said last night that death was caused by accidental drowning.

The child, who would have been three on July 10, was last seen with playmates around noon. He had gone from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Wilson T. Keller, with whom he resided for the past month, to play with his cousins.

The child was fascinated by buses, according to neighbors, and since children daily cross the bridge to catch their school bus, it is believed the child wandered across the bridge to the bus stop. Neighbors presume the child fell into the water while crossing to the other side.

Since the child had a liking for buses it is presumed he wandered near the creek and fell from a swinging bridge into the water.

The child's grandmother became alarmed when he did not return home and notified Westernport firemen and police at 3:30 p. m. An extensive search by Rev. G. Stanley Schwind, district committeeman of Boy Scouts, Harold Raines, scoutmaster at Franklin and a party of 25 scouts was organized.

At 4:15 p. m. the child's body was found in about a foot of water lying on its back, lodged against a crate, with several bruise marks about the face. The creek at the point is about 40 feet wide.

The resuscitator of the Luke plant of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company was sent for, but it was of no avail. Dr. James H. Wolverton, Jr., pronounced the child dead. Trooper Timothy M. Gilmore, Maryland State Police, Deputy Sheriff Edgar M. Lewis, and Westernport Police investigated.

Besides its parents, the child is survived by one brother, Edward Paul Bowley, ten-months old. The mother is the former Betty Keller. The father is a World War II veteran and served in the U. S. Navy. He is now employed as a civilian worker at the Naval Ordnance, Washington, D. C. His wife and two children had been residing at the home of the grandmother for the past month.

The body is at Boal's Funeral Home, Westernport.

MARSHALL DEFENDS WAR POLICY

Reds Give Ground All Along Warfront

ROKs Probe Enemy Lines Near Kaesong

U. N. Patrols Again Enter Chunchon

TOKYO, Wednesday, May 9 (AP)—Red forces fell back today all along the Korean warfront.

Hard-fighting South Korean troops pushed them back in the west and east. The Reds withdrew ahead of far-ranging Allied patrols in the center.

Censorship would not permit pinpointing positions of the limited Allied attacks.

Northwest of Seoul, South Koreans cross the Han River from Kimpo peninsula and probed Red lines south of Kaesong. That city is 35 miles northwest of Seoul and within two miles of the 38th parallel.

Another South Korean column drove north from Seoul.

A dispatch from Korean headquarters of the U. S. Eighth Army by AP Correspondent Robert Eunson reported the actions. But mileages were deleted.

The purpose of the push north of Kimpo peninsula was to guard against any Red move to slip down that way and encircle Seoul from the rear.

The Reds fought back against the South Koreans along the Seoul-Munsan road, using mortars, anti-tank guns and automatic weapons.

There were several brisk actions in the sector (five words deleted) northwest of the capital along the road to Munsan, Eunson reported.

"West of the Road, Allied units pushed north and were fighting a battle with North Korean Reds (three words deleted) south of Munsan," he said.

Beyond Uijongbu, 11 miles north of Seoul, Allied engineers cleared a mine field under fire of a Red company hiding in nearby hills.

On the central front, Allied patrols entered Chunchon for the second straight day Tuesday without finding any Reds. Cunchon, a former Red stronghold, is 45 miles northeast of Seoul and eight miles south of the 38th parallel.

"East of this important road junction town, however, an Allied patrol was ambushed and forced to withdraw," Eunson reported.

Around Kapyong, between Chunchon and Seoul, Allied and Red units fought three brief skirmishes.

Stiff fighting was reported in the vicinity of Inje, a town 75 miles northeast of Seoul and four miles north of the 38th parallel.

The enemy lines seemed to be giving on the extreme eastern tip, Eunson said, but holding fairly firm directly east of Inje.

Nearly half the ground lost when the Communists launched their ill-fated April 22 offensive has been regained along the 100-mile wide battlefront.

Pennsylvania Railroad Freight Fright

Crumpled wreckage of 47 cars of a derailed 143-car freight train blocks the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad at New Brunswick, N. J. The long freight jumped the tracks yesterday and piled up in a splintered, tangled mess of wheels, wood and steel. Police said no one was injured.

Moran Is Found Guilty Of Lying To Crime Probe

O'Dwyer's Friend To Be Sentenced Friday

NEW YORK, May 8. (AP)—Democratic Politician James J. Moran, an old friend of ex-Mayor William O'Dwyer, was convicted today of lying to the Kefauver Senate Crime Committee about his relations with a Brooklyn racketeer.

A jury of seven women and five men found him guilty of perjury after deliberating about an hour and a half.

"I have nothing to say," Moran told newsmen angrily after the verdict.

Appeal Is Likely

His attorney said the decision probably will be appealed.

Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey set Friday for sentencing. The maximum penalty is five years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Moran was given his freedom until Friday under the same $25,000 bond he posted originally.

His four-day trial was the first to grow out of the dramatic hearings here last March of the Kefauver committee.

Moran was convicted of lying when he swore to the committee he met Brooklyn Numbers Racketeer Louis Weber no more than half a dozen times during Moran's heyday as a pet of the O'Dwyer administration.

Quick Comedown

The government claimed Moran met Weber more than 100 times, then lied to the Senate committee to help cover up a "monstrous alliance between crime and politics."

It was a quick comedown for the 49-year-old Moran. One of O'Dwyer's last acts last summer before leaving City Hall to become ambassador to Mexico was to give his long-time aide a cushy $15,000 a year lifetime post as city water commissioner.

Moran was ousted from this post after the Kefauver hearings by O'Dwyer's successor, Mayor Vincent Impellitteri.

Panama To Choose

PANAMA, Panama, May 8 (AP)—President Arnulfo Arias announced tonight he would call a national plebiscite tomorrow to permit the people to choose, by voting, between the 1946 constitution he abolished last night and the 1941 charter which he substituted.

The announcement was made by the President in a broadcast from the presidential palace.

Arias' speech climaxed a day of tension, heightened by rumor and counter-rumor.

Defense Chief Is Convinced Russians Have Atom Bomb

WASHINGTON, May 8. (AP)—Defense Secretary Marshall said today he is convinced the Russains have the atomic bomb.

But whether they have scaled the scientific mountain that stands between "having" the bomb and developing it into a practical weapon of war is another question, he indicated to the Senate's Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees.

The question was raised by Sen. Bridges (R-NH) during Marshall's interrogation on Korea policy. The Secretary's answer was a guarded one, and consequently subject to interpretation.

"They have the bomb, I am quite convinced," Marshall stated. "I couldn't even give you an estimate if I had the information as to when it might be available for use against us.

"I assume it will be a tedious and difficult development because I think in such matters we go much more rapidly than they would, and it's been a long tedious business with us x x x."

Mayor D'Alesandro Leads Democrats To New Shutout Victory At Baltimore Polls

BALTIMORE, May 8 (AP)—Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro led Baltimore's Democrats to another shutout victory in the city's election today. A Republican hasn't been elected to a municipal post since 1943.

D'Alesandro was returned to his second four-year term by a two-to-one margin over his closest rival, Republican Joseph L. Carter, close friend of Republican Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin.

Democrat C. Markland Kelly, outgoing president of the City Council who ran for mayor as an independent, was a poor third.

J. Neil McCardell easily won re-election as city comptroller, and Arthur D. Price defeated two others for City Council president.

The vote was heavy, with an estimated 60 per cent of the registered voters—predominately Democrats—going to the polls. The weather was ideal—sunny skies and the temperature in the low 70s.

With all of the 507 polling places reported, D'Alesandro, a former congressman, had 112,934 votes to 61,750 for Carter and 23,327 for Kelly.

Price had 89,181 to 64,279 for Danial E. Klein, Republican, and 24,227 for George Sellmayer, Democrat who ran as an independent. Sellmayer was City Council president from 1943 to 1947.

The vote for city comptroller was McCardell 106,140, Republican Harry D. James 52,404, independent Chester W. Tawney 13,177, and Milton Seif, Progressive, 2,556.

D'Alesandro kept his campaign on strictly local issues, stressing his record as a municipal administrator.

Carter and Kelly, however, injected national issues into the race. Carter had the active support of Gov. McKeldin, who argued that D'Alesandro was only priming himself to run for the U. S. Senate seat now held by Sen. Herbert R. O'Conor (D-Md) in 1952.

Spanish Troops Halt Disorders

PAMPLONA, Spain, May 8 (AP)—Civil guardsmen fired tommy guns into the air tonight to halt demonstrations of strikers in Pamlona.

Many persons was injured by blows from police nightsticks during the sporadic fighting in many parts of the city. The battling climaxed a general strike in protest against the rising cost of living.

(In Madrid, there were reliable reports that troops had been sent to Bilbao in preparation for possible disorders there.)

The strike was still continuing at about 8 o'clock tonight. All theatres, movies, cafes were closed and the transport service was halted.

There was no indication whether it would go on tomorrow in defiance of Civil Governor Luis Vaerlo Bermejo's threat that those still away from their jobs would be fired.

About 30,000 workers are involved in the general walkout. Angry crowds stoned the food ration office earlier in the day.

Civil and armed guards patrolled the streets.

Witnesses said that, contrary to the bloody incidents in Barcelona's general strike last March, the police were careful to fire into the air.

"Mac's" Dogwood "Inspection" Trip Sets Off Rumors

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur went on an inspection tour today—to look over some blossoming dogwood.

His unannunced trip to Connecticut led to a lot of speculation. Some people thought he was house-hunting. Others suggested it was a business trip.

Upon MacArthur's return, however, his aide, Maj. Courtney Whitney, said the ousted Far Eastern commander read about Connecticut's spring dogwood and decided to "inspect it."

"Very lovely," Whitney pronounced it on behalf of MacArthur.

"There's no truth to it at all," said Whitney of a report that MacArthur had leased a 20-room mansion and estate on Contentment Island, off Darien, Conn.

UMW Quits Proposed Manpower Committee

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—John L. Lewis' representative today quit the last remaining government agency in which the United Mine Workers had a seat.

John Owens, UMW secretary treasurer, sent the following telegram to Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson, quitting the proposed manpower advisory committee working with Wilson and Secretary of Labor Tobin:

"The representative of the United Mine Workers has been ignored in selection of all other committees. I cannot see any reason why I should serve on the labor management committee."

Gen. M'Arthur's Plane Flying Back To Japan

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's four-engined personal plane, which he released yesterday for its return to the military services, took off late today for the trip back to Japan.

It had been renamed "Scap" and presumably will go to Gen. Matthew R. Ridgway, MacArthur's successor as supreme commander in the Pacific. It was named "Bataan" for MacArthur's trip home.

U. S. Turns Down Soviet Proposal For Jap Treaty

State Dept. Says USSR Seeks "Double Veto"

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States accused Russia today of trying to "stall" preparations for an early Japanese peace treaty and brusquely rejected a Soviet proposal to turn the task over to a Pacific big four.

Moscow advanced the proposal yesterday, and included Communist China along with Russia, the U. S. and Britain as the four powers which should lay down the terms for a World War II settlement with Japan.

The State Department brushed the idea aside with this comment: "It is a mockery to pretend that to negotiate a Japanese peace under these conditions would actually produce peace."

Moscow Seeks "Double Veto"

What Moscow is seeking, the department charged, is a "double veto" by including Communist China among the Big Four.

The State Department made plain that the United States intends to go ahead with moves now in progress with 14 other non-Communist countries to complete the Japanese settlement, possibly this summer.

The Soviet proposal, as it was put forward in this late stage of the negotiations, dimmed the few remaining hopes of American officials that Russia might go along with the settlement and not insist on the "veto" which has blocked peace with Germany and Austria.

Some hopes had been retained even though Russia two months ago broke off, without explanation, the discussions which Ambassador John Foster Dulles had been carrying on at Lake Success with Russia's Jacob Malik.

"Periodic" Proposal

The American statement was read to newsmen by Press Officer Michael J. McDermott shortly after the arrival from Moscow of the note handed yesterday to U. S. Ambassador Alan G. Kirk.

"The Soviet proposal that the Japanese peace treaty be prepared by a council of foreign ministers composed of representatives of the Soviet Union, Communist China, the United Kingdom and the United States is a proposal which the Soviet Union makes periodically whenever it wants to stall the conclusion of a Japanese peace. It has always been rejected and will be again," the statement said.

Super Liner Will Be Launched June 23

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The new luxury liner United States, largest and fastest passenger ship ever built in this country, will be launched on June 23 at Newport News, Va., it was announcd today.

The 51,500-ton ship is scheduled to enter the United States Lines' North Atlantic service in the summer of 1952.

The vessel is 980 feet long, with a speed in excess of 30 knots, and will have accommodations for 2,000 passengers. It will carry a crew of 1,000.

Under the national defense program, the liner is designed for use as a troop carrier in time of emergency. It can be fitted to accommodate 14,000 men, or almost a full division

U. N. Orders Israel, Syria To Cease Fire

Both Sides Accept Council Directive

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., May 8 (AP)—The United Nations Security Council tonight ordered an immediate cease-fire in the fighting along the Syrian-Israeli border.

The vote was 10 to 0, with Russia abstaining.

The problem was complicated, however, by Syrian denials that Syrian troops were involved in the armed clashes. Syria's Faris El Khoury said that although his government was not directly concerned in the fighting it accepted the cease-fire.

Abba S. Eban, Israeli delegate, contended regular Syrian forces were responsible for repeated attacks against Israel. He presented what he called conclusive proof of this—reports that Syrian weapons, clothing and other objects had been found in Israeli territory where the fighting took place.

Israel Promises To Obey

Israel promised to obey the cease-fire order but Eban demanded that the demilitarized zone should not serve as a base for attacks on Israel. "We've lost our taste for unilateral cease-fires," he said.

The Israeli and Syrian representatives charged each other's country with aggression in the fighting that has grown up out of an Israeli attempt to drain Lake Huleh, a swamp area in the Jordan River basin.

Eban and Khoury sat at the council table as invited guests, along with Maj. Gen. William E. Riley, U. S. Marine Corps, who is the U.N. chief of staff for the Palestine truce agreement machinery set up in 1948.

Russia's Jacob Malik explained that he abstained in the newest Palestine peace move because the cease-fire resolution referred to other Security Council resolutions on which Russia had never taken a stand.

Four Nations Sponsor Move

The U. S., Britain, France and Turkey joined in sponsoring the cease-fire resolution. Both Israel and Syria proposed amendments calling for withdrawal of any military or military-like forces in the demilitarized zone.

The council, however, adopted the original resolution and France's Francis Lacoste said it was up to the mixed armistice commission, under Riley, to work out the problem of withdrawing forces and caring for civilians.

Iran Reds Make Seven Demands

TEHRAN, Iran, May 8 (AP) — An emboldened Tudeh (Communist) Party today made seven demands on Premier Mohammed Mossadegh that included expulsion of the 25-man U. S. military mission to Iran.

The other six demands, contained in an open letter to the Premier, were:

1. Legalization of the Tudeh Party, outlawed since the attempted assassination of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi in February, 1949.
2. Recognition of Red China.
3. Rejection of foreign arms aid.
4. Release of political prisoners.
5. An end to martial law in the southern oil fields.
6. Nationalization of the Behrein oil fields, where the American-owned Bahrein Petroleum Company is producing 10,000,000 barrels of oil a year.

McCarthy Charges Acheson Backs Suspended Scientist

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson today of trying to get the Navy to reinstate a suspended scientist who McCarthy said was a "Communist agent."

McCarthy told the Senate "tremendous pressure" is being applied to restore Stephen Brunauer to his job in naval explosives work and the State Department is exerting the principal influence.

Even so, he said, "the Acheson group" concedes that Brunauer "is dangerous and he is involved in espionage work."

Brunauer was suspended by the Navy April 10 as a "security risk." At the same time the State Department suspended the scientist's wife, Mrs. Esther Brunauer, explaining the action was taken because of the Navy's move against her husband.

At the time of his suspension, Brunauer said in a statement "I am a completely loyal American who never violated any security regulations."

Mrs. Brunauer was named by McCarthy last year in his charges of Communist influence in the State Department.

Elevator Strike Strands Gotham Office Workers

NEW YORK, May 8 (AP)—The people who man New York's towering business skyscrapers went on strike today, stranding thousands of office workers high above Manhattan.

With elevators out of service, lunch hour throngs trudged down and back many flights of stairs. Some, however, just sat the whole thing out in their offices.

About 100 office buildings were affected at the height of the walkout. There are about 500 normally tended by the striking unions.

By mid-afternoon, service was resumed in all but about 30 buildings as wage and welfare demands were settled.

About 500 elevator operators, porters, janitors and other service employes were involved. They belong to the AFL Building Service Workers Union.

Sweeping Tariff Concessions Are Given 17 Nations

Reduced Duties Begin Taking Effect June 6

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States has granted sweeping new tariff concessions to 17 western countries in another major move to expand world commerce.

Reduced duties covering $419,271,000 in foreign shipments to the United States will start going into effect June 6 under the new international agreements.

At the same time, existing low rates will be maintained on $58,305,000 in foreign imports.

In return, foreign governments have agreed to cut tariffs or keep from hiking rates on $1,157,000,000 of American products.

This country reduced its levies on many articles ranging from metals in short supply here to certain foods. It won concessions for sale abroad of many American farm products, chemicals and machinery among other things.

Negotiated In England

The new agreements, announced today by the State Department, were negotiated during a seven-month tariff conference at Torquay, England, which ended April 21.

Thirty-four nations, accounting for 80 per cent of world commerce, attended the meeting. It marked the third time that western countries have banded together to reduce trade barriers since World War Two ended.

In announcing the reciprocal concessions, the State Department hailed them as "a very substantial advance in the field of international trade relations and the relaxation of unnecessary restrictions on world commerce."

Western Germany and Canada won the biggest concessions from the United States and in turn granted the most substantial reductions to American products.

Germany Tops Concession List

Western Germany was included for the first time in such tariff-cutting agreements.

A 474-page "analysis" made available by the State Department showed that Germany granted more than half of the concessions the United States picked up at the Torquay meeting — affecting $557,594,000 of American exports.

Canada ranked next in importance, promising lower duties on $290,049,000 of American products.

M'Arthur Plan 'Adds To Risk' Of USSR Entry

Losses May Force China To Negotiate

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Marshall gravely warned today that Russia may enter the Korean war without notice but he declared this threat would be far greater if the nation follows the war plans proposed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

For the second day, the 70-year-old Secretary urged that this country not take the added risk of open conflict with Russia by stepping up the war against China.

He said the Soviets have massed strong ground and air forces in the Far East and their entry into the Korea struggle would "be a very serious thing."

With this warning, Marshall sharply took issue with MacArthur who testified last week he did not believe the bombing of China would draw the Russians into the conflict—or that the Russians could wage much of a war in the far east.

At the same time, Marshall voiced concern that MacArthur's remarks about thousands of casualties in a bloody Korean "stalmate" may seriously damage the morale of the United Nations' combat troops.

He told the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees—looking into the causes of the MacArthur ouster—that there is the "very real possibility" of Russia's entry into the Korean war.

Decision Us To Few Men

"Like all other matters pertaining to the Soviet government," he said, "the decision is of a few men and can be an instant decision whenever they choose to make it.

"They may make it without any reference to a specific event and again they may find themselves imperiled x x x and therefore take action to reduce that peril."

He concluded, also that U. S. policy of building up defenses in Europe may provoke a war with Russia. But he insisted the risk must be taken because this country has "no choice whatever there."

Marshall declared administration policy in Asia may seem costly and a stalmate in Korea may appear the only end. But he added the cost cannot be compared to all "to what happens if we get involved in what you might call an atomic war."

MacArthur has challenged the administration policy and called stronger measures against the Red Chinese—bombing, a blockade and the use of Chinese Nationalist troops. He expressed firm belief this could bring a quick end to the Korean conflict.

No Quick Solution

But Marshall pictured Korea as only part of a world struggle with Communism. He said:

"There can be, I think, no quick and decisive solution to this global struggle short of resorting to another world war. The cost of such a conflict is beyond calculation.

"It is, therefore, our policy to contain Communist aggression in different fashions in different areas without desorting to total war, if that be possible to avoid. x x x

"Korea is only the latest challenger in this long, hard, continuing world-wide struggle."

Marshall contended the best way to win the Korean war is to shatter the morale of Chinese Red armies with "terrific casualties" on the battlefield.

Government May Up Wage Ceiling

WASHINGTON, May 8 (INS)—The government indicated tonight that it may push its 10 per cent wage ceiling upward as President Truman's request for tighter economic controls ran into determined opposition before the House Banking Committee.

These developments came as cattle receipts in major midwestern markets fell off sharply for the second straight day and stockyard officials attributed the slump to "holdback" by cattlemen in protest against a beef price rollback set for May 20.

Chairman Cooley (D) N. C., of the House Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, forecast that Congress might ban further ceiling on farm products if Price Administrator DiSalle's beef price order fails to function properly.

Federal wage officials said the formula holding pay hikes to ten per cent will be reviewed when the Labor Department announces its April 15 cost-of-living index later this month.

It was indicated that the ceiling will be changed to compensate for living increases since the curb was adopted last February.

Rep. John Kee, Of West Va., Dies Of Heart Seizure

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—Rep. John Kee (D-WVa), 76, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died of a heart seizure today.

Kee collapsed while presiding over a closed-door session of his committee this forenoon. He died a few minutes later.

The West Virginia legislator, a veteran of 18 years in Congress, had been suffering from a heart condition for several years and only recently returned to Capitol Hill from a siege in the Bethesda, Md., naval hospital.

Kee is the third House member to die during the 82nd Congress. The others were Reps. John Sullivan (D-Mo) and Frank Buchanan (D-Pa). His death leaves two vacancies in the House.

Kee became chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee in March, 1949, following the death of Rep. Sol. Bloom (D-NY). Like Kee, Bloom also collapsed at a committee meeting. He died several days later.

Under the seniority system, Rep. Richards (D-SC) is expected to succeed to the chairmanship. As ranking Democratic member of the committee, he has been acting chairman during most of this session of Congress while Kee was unable to attend.

Richards told the House that Kee was stricken just after the Foreign Affairs Committee had approved the so-called "Soviet friendship" resolution—an expression of friendship and goodwill by the American people toward the people of Soviet Russia. A similar resolution has already passed the Senate.

"He turned to me and said, 'Dick, will you take the chair a few minutes?'" Richards said. "He died with his boots on."

LAWMAKER DIES—Rep. John Kee (above), West Virginia Democrat and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died of a heart seizure yesterday at Washington. He was 76.

M'Arthur Plan

Without mentioning MacArthur by name, Marshall said the deposed General had in effect called U. N. casualties in Korea "without justified purposes."

The Secretary pleaded for a procedure in the Asia policy hearing by the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees "that does not destroy us in the field by serious reaction in the way of morale."

Marshall said yesterday he did not think the MacArthur program would bring victory. And he argued today: "The feeling has been that an extension of the present war, under the terms proposed by Gen. MacArthur, would not only hazard the development of a very much enlarged and probably a world war, but would not lead to a quick decision.

Cites Berlin Blockage

As did MacArthur, Marshall testified behind closed doors and a censored version of his remarks was made public.

MacArthur, whose disagreement with U. S. Asia policy led to his dismissal, contended the present course in Korea can lead only to a "bloody stalmate" costing thousands of American lives.

Marshall replied to this argument by saying the Berlin blockade which lasted for 15 months appeared to be a stalemate and some people were willing to risk war at that time by smashing through the blockade.

"There were times," he said, "when the fight for Berlin also looked like a stalemate, but we kept our heads and persevered and in the end won a notable victory." Marshall was secretary of state during this period.

He also recalled there were those who were impatient over U. S. policy in Greece and called it a "hopeless adventure"—a waste of military and economic aid.

"It is true that our rescue of Greece (from the Communists) was costly in comparison to the stakes involved," he added. "But it paid off x x x."

He said he believed Yugoslavia would not have broken with the Kremlin had the Communists been able to dominate Greece.

Chair Ends Life Of Willie McGee

LAUREL, Miss., May 8 (AP)—Willie McGee was executed today.

But supporters still claimed the 37-year-old negro was innocent of the rape of a white woman for which he died after five and a half years of battling.

One long charge of electricity ended his life at 12:05 a. m. (CST) this morning. He was pronounced dead officially five minutes later.

His attorneys fought to the last minute to save the short, bushy-haired negro from Mississippi's portable electric chair. But 11th hour appeals last night to Gov. Fielding L. Wright, the U. S. District Court, the U. S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, the U. S. Supreme Court and President Truman failed.

In San Francisco, Harry Bridges, longshore leader, said McGee's execution "was a lynching of an American solely because of the color of his skin."

McGee's attorneys contended in court that no white man has ever been executed in Mississippi for rape. They said he was innocent, and convicted on perjured testimony without having an opportunity to have his entire story told to a jury.

Bettors Who Lose May Sue Bookies Under Florida Law

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 8 (AP)—An act designed to discourage illegal bookmaking by permitting an unlucky bettor to sue to recover his losses became a Florida law today.

The new law, one of a series of measures proposed by an interim Senate crime committee, provides that anyone losing at illicit gambling may sue the winner, within 90 days, to recover the losses.

The suits would be doubly costly to the bookies, casino operators and other winners. In addition to having to repay the loser they would have to pay the state an equal amount.

NSLI Dividend Rate 50 Cents Per $1,000

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP) — Veterans and servicemen under age 40 with National Service Life Insurance term policies reportedly are being paid a dividend of 50 cents per month per $1,000 of insurance.

Officials familiar with the payment plan said this date is being used to compute amounts for about half the 8,200,000 policies drawing the current refund. It is five cents less than that for all type policies in the first special NSLI dividend. Maximum payment for this group is $180.

Enlisted Reservists Won't Be Called

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The Army said today it will not order any enlisted member of a reserve unit into active service if his enlistment has less than a year to run.

This provision applies immediately to enlisted reservists whether or not they have received orders to report for duty.

Enlisted members of organized reserve units sign up for three years. The Army recently announced a similar provisions for reserves who are called up as individuals.

Truman Celebrates His 67th Birthday

WASHINGTON, May 8. (INS)—President Truman marked his 67th birthday today with a normal round of work at his White House desk.

A small family celebration, however, was to be held at Blair House tonight with daughter Margaret down from New York to help the Chief executive cut a cake bearing only 21 candles.

Friends and aides remembered the day, which is also the sixth anniversary of VE day, with a large bouquet of roses, a gavel made of the original wood in the White House and other gifts including an ancient Hebrew candelabra from Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

Fears Of War Overshadow Anniversary Of V-E Day

[By The Associated Press]

The European phase of World War II ended six years ago yesterday. Concern over the possibility of a World War III overshadowed observance of the anniversary in the Western world. In the Communist sphere, the Soviet army drew its usual praise.

Four men who met in a little red school house at Reims, the supreme headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, signed the document by which a beaten Germany surrendered unconditionally.

They were Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, German army chief of staff; U. S. Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's chief of staff; French Gen. Francois Sevez, and Soviet Maj. Gen. Ivan Susloparov.

Now Jodl is dead, hanged at Nuernberg for war crimes.

Smith is facing a new foe—aggressive Communism—as director of the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Sevez is dead, the victim of a hunting accident.

Susloparov is—who outside the Kremlin knows?

Only after the surrender did Eisenhower receive Jodl. That was to demand coldly an assurance that Jodl understood the terms.

Eisenhower spent the anniversary yesterday in a chilling rain inspecting Belgian military air fields in his new job as commander in chief of Atlantic alliance defense forces.

And, six years after the surrender, West German President Theodore Heuss appealed to all nations to repatriate their German prisoners of war "as a matter of simple humanity."

Washington County Teachers Ask Increase

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 8 (AP)—A delegation of Washington County teachers today asked the county commissioners for higher pay.

Superintendent of Schools William M. Brish, speaking for the delegation, told the commissioners it has been hard to get teachers to sign contracts for next year since Gov. McKeldin vetoed the $300 annual increase, passed by the General Assembly.

Brish reported that six Washington County teachers sumbitted their resignations last week and he expects at least two more this week.

The six who quit, he said, said they were going to other counties where the pay scales are higher. Brish reported that they did not want to leave but were forced to by higher living costs.

Two Towns Wrecked By El Salvador Quake

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvadore, May 8 (AP) — Two towns in southeastern El Salvador were scenes of desolation and death today following a series of earthquakes which killed about 1,000 persons and injured 4,000.

(A dispatch from neighboring Guatemala said the Salvadorian government intended to put the torch to the ruins to prevent spread of typhoid and other diseases already prevalent.)

Imbo Volcano, five miles south of Jucuapa, erupted steam and hot spray today following a series of earthquake shocks.

Jucuapa and Chinameca, with a combined population of about 29,000 were virtually destroyed. They were described as scenes of desolation and death.

Celanese brought $21,000,000 into the Tri-State area in 1950

Out from the Amcelle plant of Celanese go shipments of acetate yarn, dyed goods and cellulose acetate flake. Back comes money. In 1950, nearly $21,000,000 was paid out in the Tri-State area by Celanese.

This is the way these dollars were paid out:

Wages and Salaries	$17,067,512.00
Employee Welfare	353,368.00
Coal Purchases	1,514,500.00
Gas, Water, Electricity & Telephones	1,180,816.00
County Taxes	319,850.00
Local Charities and Donations	19,275.00
Miscellaneous Purchases, such as paper, lumber, hardware, gasoline, tires and foodstuffs	435,000.00
TOTAL	$20,890,321.00

The largest item, $17,067,512 for wages and salaries, is of great importance to the business and commercial life of the Tri-State area. Most of it is spent in this area and helps to provide jobs in local industries, stores, and service establishments.

Some of it goes into banks as savings, where it helps finance worthwhile projects for local businesses and individuals. Some goes as taxes for the upkeep of schools, roads, law enforcement agencies, and other public benefits. And some, of course, goes to support churches. In addition, $353,368.00 was paid for hospital and medical services for employees and their families covered by Celanese Group Insurance program.

Celanese, too, believes in buying at home when practicable, as the large expenditure for local purchases indicates. Also, the company is one of the largest taxpayers in Allegany County, and one of the best customers of the public utility companies. These expenditures provide jobs for many people.

Most of the Celanese employees at Amcelle realize that the surest way to keep this money flowing into the area is to produce quality materials at prices people are able and willing to pay. Tri-State area citizens can help, too, by knowing and boosting Celanese and its products.

HOUSEWARES — FOURTH FLOOR

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

Entertaining A Four-Year-Old

WE'D BEEN TALKING fondly about the possibility of grandchildren when we met a youngster on the East Hampton beach last summer who had all the charm of Jimmy Stewart and all the courage of Eddie Rickenbacker. He was three. We swam together, and he wasn't afraid of the waves. When the other kids shied from barking dogs, he walked boldly up to them.

"Why don't you let me adopt John?" I said to his mother one day. She had been a nurse in the war.

"Then what would we do?" she asked.

"Well, you have two more," I hinted.

So we compromised, and he came up to the farm to visit us for four days recently. I thought all I had to do was to put on his overalls, and he would follow me around and admire me. He hadn't been in the house ten minutes, and I had barely turned my back when he began to spin all the knobs on the television set which caused considerable confusion on the screen like a chameleon trying to make good on plaid. Incidentally we had to hire an expert to come to unscramble it. We still get effects that look like ocean waves instead of images.

John and I went down to the barn where he was most enthusiastic about all the animals, except he must have read his picture book wrong or somewhere had gotten the idea you milked a horse. I pulled him out from under the animal's legs before he got his brains kicked out and restrained him from going to work on the cows during their rest period.

Always friendly and brave for a four-year-old which he now is, I took him along to the village when I went to call on a sick neighbor. We stopped at the drugstore, and he demanded a strawberry ice cream cone which I immediately got him, although his mother had told us never to feed him between meals. It kept him occupied for about half an hour.

At six the next morning I heard a knock on my door, and there was John in his pajamas wide awake and ready for business. He crawled into bed with me, a comfortable cozy companion, and began to pet a poodle which had moved up into the party, too. At quarter after six, the dog began to gulp, and I chased her off just before she was sick at her stomach. By half past, I gave in and got up for the day. It proved to be a pretty long one, too.

John was an inventive and inquisitive little cuss. Shortly after breakfast, I turned him out with a couple of dogs to get some country air and to give me some peace and a chance to read the Sunday papers. After a half hour, things seemed to be pretty quiet, so I went out to check and soon realized the reason for the silence. My friend had found the pipe through which oil is poured into the tank for the furnace. There was a ring with a padlock on it, but it had not been snapped shut. What good is an unlocked lock? John had taken it out, lifted the lid, and was walking to the driveway picking up handfuls of gravel and sand which he was pouring down the opening. I don't know how many loads he had transplanted before I stopped him. The furnace expert said he wouldn't be able to tell for sure what the result would be until next winter, a fine time to find out. Between innings he would ring all the bells he could find in the house and blow the horn of any idle automobile.

Before he went to bed that night, I said to him,

"Now you came in and woke me up this morning. Tomorrow it's my turn, so wait for me."

By seven, I had heard nothing from my guest, and went into his room where I found him on top of the bed, stark naked. It seems he had had a slight accident due to the delay, but the little fellow had stuck faithfully to my instructions.

The next day his mother and father came to get him, and we told them how good their son had been and what a model guest. At that, he is a fine little fellow, and probably a whole lot better than I was at his age or perhaps even now. My mother used to say I was a sour baby—whatever that means, but I suspect it is no compliment. At this writing, I am not so sure about grandchildren, although after my workout with John, I think I could take them in my stride.

Future British Generals Train For Science War

By GLENN WILLIAMS

SHRIVENHAM, England — (AP) — The British army has decided scientific war is here to stay. It is assigning its brightest young future generals for special scientific training here.

The Military College of Science was established here in 1946. Its doings were kept dark for five years, but recently a small party of correspondents was conducted through it.

About 150 men a year enter the college. The courses are tough. About 20 per cent of the officers flunk out before they're finished.

The young officers learn the scientific principles of weapons, including atom bombs, rockets and radar.

Gen. W. J. Eldridge, who commands the college, told the correspondents "the college endeavors to educate its men for their work up to 15 or 20 years ahead."

"From the army point of view, the technical officer is the go-between the soldier-user and the armament engineers and scientists," Gen. Eldridge said. "It is vitally important for him to be able to meet the scientists on their own ground."

The college concentrates on scientific principles, rather than on detailed application of science to particular weapons. The weapons themselves may become quickly outmoded but the scientific principles still hold true and the officer who understands them can keep up with the advance of weapons.

The college has two divisions.

Half its students are young subalterns fresh from Sandhurst Military Academy which does not provide the same sort of engineering and scientific training as West Point.

The rest are volunteers from the technical branches of the British army. Their job is to link the arms scientist and engineer with the needs and uses of the army.

The young officers from Sandhurst get engineering training equivalent to a scientific degree from London University.

The volunteers from the technical staff must have scientific qualifications from university training and pick one of three branches for further intensive study: Weapons, fighting vehicles and fire direction.

Weapons include such things as rockets and guided missiles; fighting vehicles study is heavily concentrated on tanks; fire direction takes in radio, radar and communications.

Subjects taught include mathematics, ballistics, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, mechanical engineering and machine designing, guns, rocket motors, electrical engineering, the use of computing machines and radar.

Officers from dominion armies also attend the technical staff courses. Canada has sent 35 officers and Australia 15 since the war. The only non-commonwealth which has sent officers here is the United States. Three Americans have taken the technical staff course. None is there now.

The college began in 1850 as a course of special studies for a handful of artillery officers.

It reached its present stage of high development in 1946 when it was moved to Shrivenham. The buildings—a big spread of dormitory like structures spreading farther than a big college campus—were erected for barracks in the 1930's.

The first American carpet mill was started in 1791 in Philadelphia.

uerto Rican Is Over Eight et Tall And Still Growing

W YORK—(INS)—An eight 2 inch tall Puerto Rican giant to New York this week, and esence in the big town brought gasps than Gulliver did among Lilliputians.

e giant's name is Felipe Birrier. only 22 years old and still ng. He's well built, weighs 275 and has one of those youthful waistlines, only 44 inches around.

Physicians say his abnormal growth is a result of a glandular condition, and that he will continue to soar until he reaches the age of 30 or 35.

They say he eventually will stop somewhere around 10 feet.

Felipe's parents, three sisters and two brothers in Puerto Rico are normal sized. He was too until he was 15—then the clouds started to descend about his head.

Like Gulliver, Felipe collects crowds as he wanders about the big town. Because of that, he doesn't like to go out on the streets. He's shy and blushes quickly when girls look at him.

He came from Puerto Rico with his manager, Luis Ramirez, hoping to land a job with a circus or at an amusement park. A Puerto Rican theater in the Bronx signed him up for a short engagement on first sight.

His suits, naturally, are extra, extra, extra, extra long. His shoes cost $75 a pair and are size 18J.

Felipe is staying with friends in Upper Manhattan. They're glad he landed a job so quickly. Their reason? Just look at Felipe's breakfast menu:

17 pork chops, two dozen eggs, two quarts of milk and two loaves of bread.

A form of football was played by the ancient Greeks and Romans.

UN Responsibility

The proposal that the responsibility for major decisions of military policy in Korea should be taken over by the United Nations General Assembly has been advanced by the American Association for the United Nations. This is a private organization which has no official connection with the international body or the American government. As things are now, although the war in Korea is officially a United Nations action the General Assembly takes no immediate responsibility toward it except for the general sanction and certain restraints, chiefly that against violation of Chinese territory, which have not been formally ratified.

By default the responsibility for actual military direction falls on the United States. This is undesirable both for America and for the UN. It is unjust that American officials should carry this great responsibility alone. It is not good for the United Nations that the Assembly is content to be a figurehead in this important enterprise, and the fact that the show in Korea is being run from Washington adds to the differences and tensions among the great powers.

At present, however, it is idle to dream that the General Assembly might take over. The initiative in Korea was taken by the United States because it seemed clear that the Assembly would not do anything effective about Korea without such leadership, and because the Assembly had no military forces at its disposal. These conditions have not changed very much. Strengthening of the United Nations, so that the Assembly could assume real command in Korea, would be to the advantage of all. But the strength must be created before it can be used.

Farm Labor Recruits

Everybody admits that something must be done about the hundreds of thousands of Mexican "wetbacks" who cross the border illegally and take jobs on farms in our Western and Southwestern states. Often if not usually they get wages well below U.S. standards and live under wretched conditions. On the one hand they are accused of competing unfairly with regular U.S. farm labor, on the other hand they are credited with harvesting crops that would otherwise go to waste because of shortage in other farm labor.

This week the Senate is scheduled to take action on the bill of Senator Ellender (D., La.) to facilitate and regularize the entry of Mexican farm workers actually needed in this country. A somewhat similar bill has been approved by the House Agriculture Committee.

Under a 1949 agreement with Mexico, 67,421 Mexican workers were imported in 1950 and 106,845 in 1949 (including 87,220 wetbacks legalized). About 30,000 of the 1950 legal entrants went to Texas, 13,000 to New Mexico, 9,500 to Arkansas, 9,000 to California. These totals do not include all of the workers held under contract from a previous year.

This sectional problem is part of the national problem of fewer farm workers at a time when greater farm production is being urged to meet defense requirements. The Agriculture Department says that six per cent more man-days are needed on farms this year than were used last year, the National Grange reports that half a million fewer farm workers are available.

The farmer is faced not only with difficulty in finding workers but also with paying higher wages for those he can get. On April 1 the composite hourly rate for farm labor over the country as a whole was 13 per cent higher than a year before. Under these circumstances the Government has a real job on its hands in trying to increase total farm production.

No Benefit In Exercise

The middle-aged man who sees no point in taking daily exercise, not even to the extent of an occasional golf game, but prefers to spend his leisure time in an easy chair, will derive satisfaction from the results of an interesting experiment conducted by the University of Minnesota and intended primarily to garner information on heart disease.

More than 300 men volunteered as guinea pigs for the experiment. They included fats and leans—all middle-aged business and professional men.

Put through all sorts of physical activities, even to running on a treadmill, they were given 56 different physical tests, including blood pressure, pulse rate and heart action. The big, strong, athletic type was found to be in no better physical condition than those whose only exercise consisted in walking to their automobiles.

Nor did the fat boy show up too badly, although it was suggested that he should be a bit more careful to have his heart examined occasionally because of his weight.

The late Chauncey Depew, who lived to a ripe old age, said the only exercise he took was acting as pallbearer for his golf-playing friends. According to the doctors who conducted the Minnesota tests, Old Sedentary Sam showed up just as well as did those who spent their leisure on the golf course or in a gymnasium. Exercise, they assert, does not make men healthy.

Fore!

Golfing enthusiasts greet spring with as much zest as the poet seeking inspiration. The real dyed-in-the-wool golfer hasn't been idle during the months when snow and ice covered the fairways. He has been practicing his putting on the living room rug and swinging his driver to the great danger of his wife's favorite vase.

Every spring the golfer feels a surge of new hope. Things will be different this year, he feels sure. Those putts that lipped the cup and rolled out last year will go in easily this season and the sand traps will not be so deep. Man is by nature an optimist.

One does not need to be gifted with psychic powers to predict that before long the golfer's optimism will dwindle. He will become convinced again that he takes his clubs out of the bag to do penance for his earthly sins. The sand trap on the fourth hole will once more grow to the proportions of the Grand Canyon, and golf clubs will lie where their owners broke them in anger at the perversity which makes them strike the ball in the wrong manner.

But regardless of what he suffers from the hot summer suns, the scheming of nature and the manufacturers of his equipment, the golfer is out again in the spring, convinced that "This year everything will be different."

How To Keep Well

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Restoration Of Breathing

THE HEART may beat for many minutes after respiration ceases. This is the reason why life-saving procedures are started whenever an individual suddenly stops breathing, turns blue, and appears to be dead (asphyxia). But the old ticker will not go on forever and unless resuscitation is instituted promptly, its beating becomes weaker and weaker and within a short time stops entirely.

Resuscitation is a procedure all of us should know. There are more than eight methods of artificial respiration and in addition various forms of inhalers are available through which oxygen or a mixture of this gas and carbon dioxide is administered. Oxygen accelerates recovery but something else is needed to encourage air and gases to enter and leave the lungs.

• — • — •

Most of us associate artificial respiration with drowning but breathing stops in other accidents and diseases. Such mishaps include electric shock, gas, carbon monoxide fumes, smoke, poisoning, head injuries, and occasionally during anesthetization. At any rate, these are reasons enough why every one should learn the procedure. Time is an important element and if it were necessary to wait for the physician or pulmotor squad, or to drive the victim two miles to a hospital, the majority of sufferers would not survive.

The Schafer prone pressure method is one of the oldest and best known. It is taught by the Red Cross and almost every Boy Scout has been instructed in its use. The Eve method is a more modern rendition of the old "barrel roll"; the subject is placed on a teeter-totter which is raised and lowered in rhythm. The Nielsen method is popular in Scandinavian countries and consists in raising and lowering the arms, which forces ventilation of the lungs. In the Emerson procedure the hips are raised four inches off the ground and lowered while the individual is in a prone position.

• — • — •

The most recent maneuver to be introduced is a combination of the Schafer and Emerson methods. It has the disadvantage of being more difficult but, according to Dr. Archer S. Gordon and associates, is most effective. The operator lifts or turns the hips of that patient at least 12 times a minute and each lift is alternated with the push on the chest of the prone pressure maneuver. It is tiring but after the first crucial minutes the hip movement is done less often; after every third or fourth push on the chest will be sufficient. A variation is to kneel astride the victim, push on the chest, and then grasp at the distant hip and roll it over onto the rescuer's knee and back again. Ventilation of the lungs then proceeds as well as in normal breathing.

(Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet giving details on various methods of artificial respiration.)

REPLY

Usually not, if it is transient. If it persists, the symptoms may indicate kidney disease. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on albuminuria.

NOTCHED TEETH

V. T. writes :What are Hutchinson's teeth?

Notched, peg shaped incisors that occur in congenital syphilis. They were first described by Sir Jonathan Hutchinson in 1861. His name is associated with many other eponyms because he was a good observer and wrote down everything he saw.

MUMPS

Mrs. D. writes: My boys, aged 1½ to 12, now have the mumps. My neighbors tell me the children may become sterile because of the disease. Is this possible?

REPLY

Your neighbors are certainly encouraging. Sterility as a complication of mumps is rare before puberty.

• • •

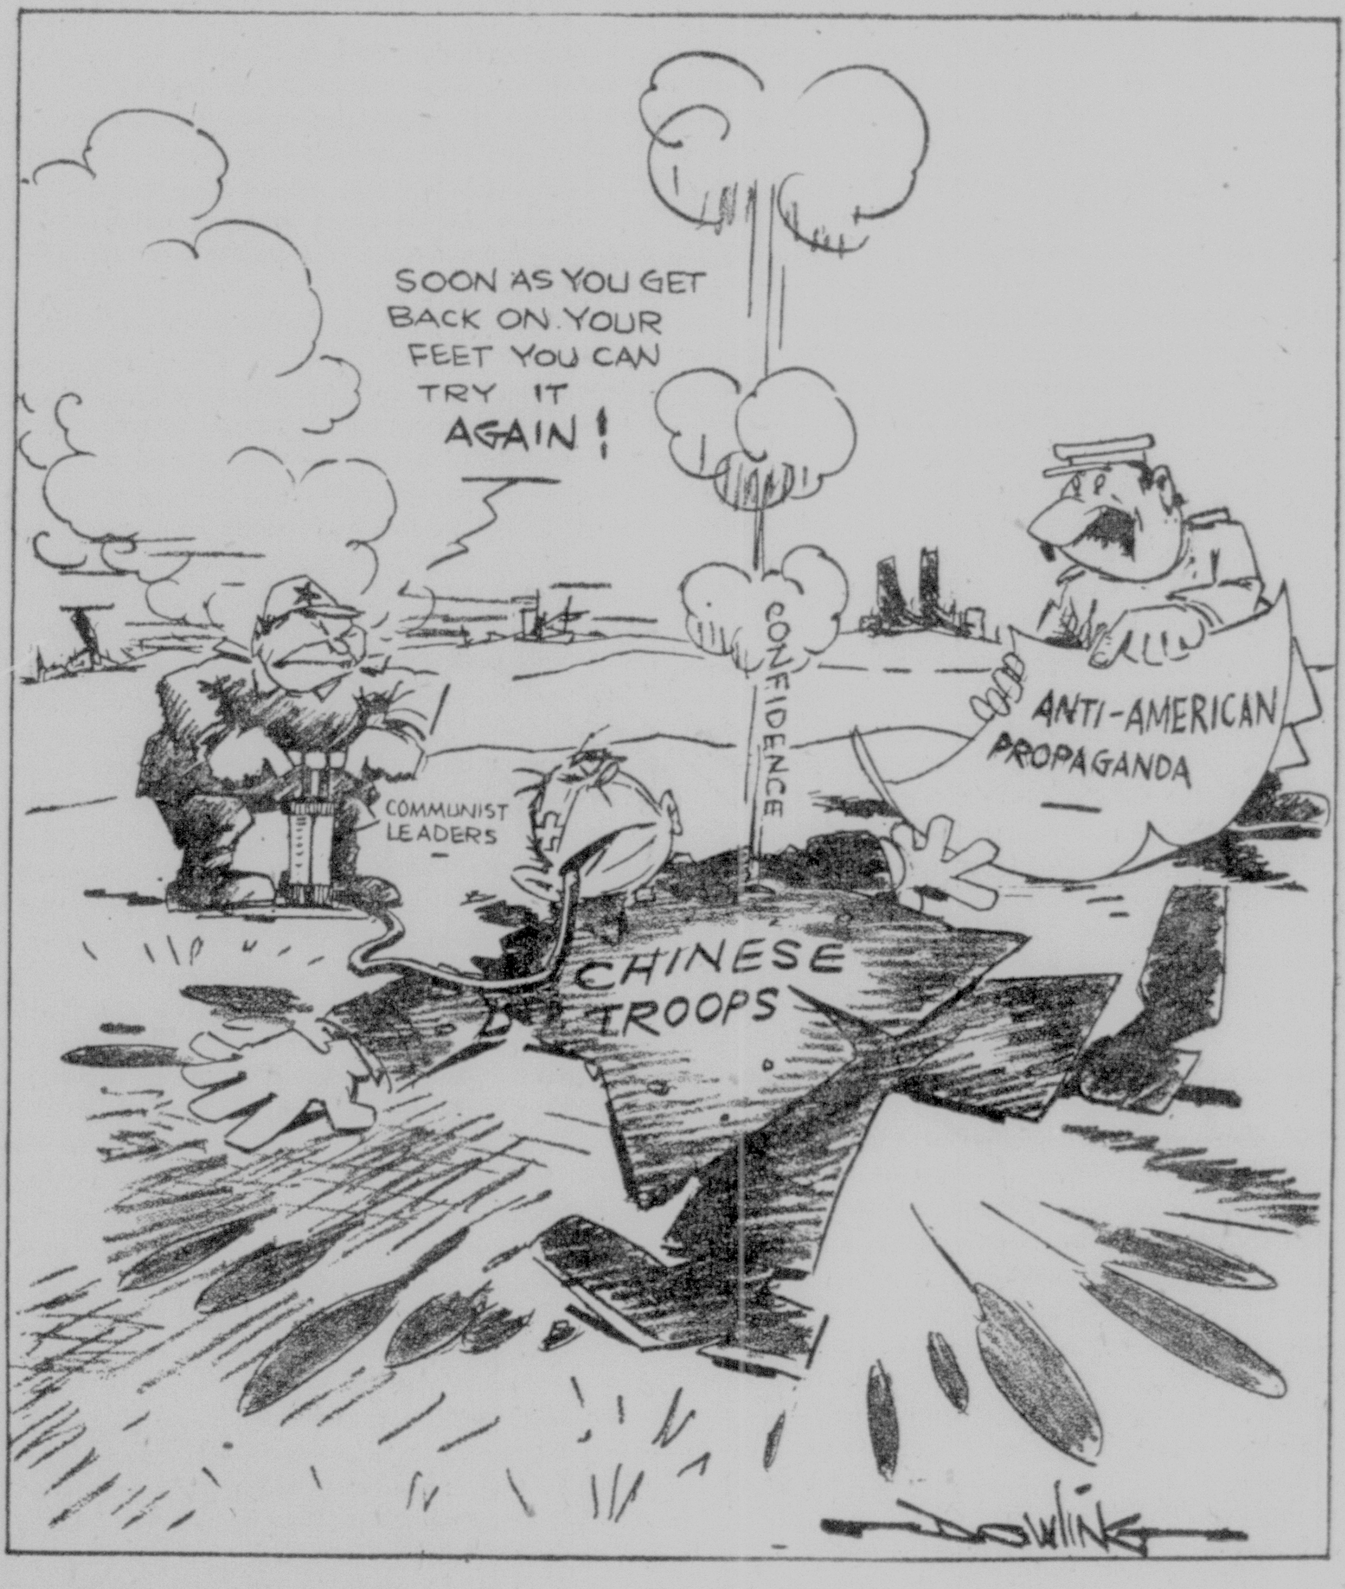
SUGGESTION

L. B. writes: When a physician discovers that a patient has diabetes, why does he assume a defeatist attitude rather than try to rehabilitate the pancreas? When my doctor found I had the disease he told me there is no cure but I felt he ought to have tried pancreatic stimulation. Is there any merit to my argument?

REPLY

The physician is not taking a defeatist attitude when he states there is no cure; he does not wish to raise false hopes. Furthermore, he encourages the victim by urging him to take care of himself with diet and insulin, if needed. The pancreas is stimulated easily by the administration of sugar but the gland does not have enough insulin to handle the sugar. The situation [illegible] saying. You can't squeeze blood out of a turnip.

First Drive Of The Spring Offensive



DREW PEARSON on—

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Princess Rita Relaxes At Rustic Retreat; Pearson Farm Loses Face When Water Fails; Crisis Settles Family Well-Digging Argument

WASHINGTON—While the most glamorous man in the U.S.A. was in Washington testifying before the Senate, the most glamorous gal in the U.S.A. was also near Washington, though she kept a long way from the Senate.

Though newspaper headlines played up reports that Rita Hayworth was in Reno preparing to shed her title of princess, actually she was spending a few days on the Pearson farm in Maryland where she seemed more interested in 47 queens of the dairy barn, a couple of horses, and our prize Holstein bulls, "Harry S. Truman" and "Prediction No. 1" than in the nearby MacArthur show in the Senate.

After trying to cover the latter show, I got out to the farm late one afternoon to find a much more difficult problem staring me stark in the face.

Up until that point, things apparently had gone well. The farm hands had taken the presence of visiting royalty and Hollywood glamor in their stride. The dairyman's children did not even ask Miss Hayworth for an autograph, nor did our conscientious colored helper, Harry Clipper, a plate-passing deacon at the Seneca Baptist Church, ask for a contribution. Nobody was thrown by the horses, Harry Truman did not break down the fence as he usually does on the slightest excuse; while the dogwood, the tulips, and the iris put on a glamor show rivaling anything in Hollywood.

No Bath For Rita

However, I could see the minute I got out of my car and greeted Mrs. P that all was not well. Mrs. P had that steely glint in her eye which I had not seen for a long, long time—in fact, not since the hogs got loose and made mincemeat out of her deck tennis court.

"The water," said Mrs. P, "is off. Just how is Rita going to take a bath?"

"Have you called Leon Lowery?" I asked, referring to our neighbor who can fix anything from my grandson's nursing bottle to the twine-knotter on a new Holland pickup hay-bailer.

"Leon is busy and won't come," replied the little woman.

"I'm sure if you told him that Rita Hayworth needed a bath he'd come in a minute," I suggested.

"It isn't only a bath," reminded Mrs. P, who had been faced with the drought all day. "How do we wash the dishes? And what do we drink?"

"Well, we could try gin." But the crack didn't go over at all big.

"Maybe your cows would like gin, too?" shot back Mrs. P, aiming at a weak spot. "If you're not worried about baths for Rita and the Jackson Leighters and all the dirty dishes, at least I know you'll worry about your cows."

This, I confess, made me think twice. Because when cows get no water to drink, they give less milk, and when they give less milk my score goes down; and I have been aiming for a milk score that would beat Carroll Morgan's, who taunts me with his high score every time we meet.

Finally, I got Leon Lowery on the telephone. He had ordered an extra part for the pump a month ago, but Jake Snyder of Farmers Supply had forgotten to order it. So the pump couldn't get fixed that night, Rita couldn't get a bath, the dishes couldn't get washed, I couldn't shave in the morning, and my cows would get a lower score than Carroll Morgan's.

"Maybe Rita could do without a bath," I suggested hopefully. "I'll bet when she was a kid back in Brooklyn she even argued with her mother that she didn't want to bathe at all."

"Yes, but what about your cows?" reminded Mrs. P.

"Well, that's different," I admitted.

"And we can't flush the toilets."

"But we can use the Byrd house," I argued, referring to the Chic Sales job up near the dairy barn. "Anyway, your and my ancestors, and even Rita's, never had any toilets to flush. Why should we be so snobbish?"

Lizards In The Pipe

"Furthermore," I argued, I confess a little desperately, "look at New York City and all the trouble they had about water. We're not the only ones who have problems. Or take Los Angeles. Mayor Bowron out there is always making my daughter quit watering her lawn.

"Furthermore," say I, "I would like to quote an issue of a noted column—The Washington Merry-Go-Round—which recently said, 'A calamity worse than the atom bomb is being studied by scientists—the increasing shortage of water in the United States.'

"You and Rita will just have to get ready for the ultimate future," I concluded, "and the fact that our pump broke down is just good practice for the days that lie ahead."

However, it didn't do any good. By this time I had a strong suspicion where the argument was heading. There has long been a difference of opinion inside the Pearson family about the relative merits of water from a spring and water from a well. Miss Hayworth, as far as I could see, was not really perturbed about her bath. I imagine there were a good many days traveling through Africa with Prince Ali Khan that she never got a bath at all, and I gathered this was not the grounds for their impending divorce. So I had sort of an inkling of what was coming.

"Don't you think," said Mrs. P, changing to her most dulcet tones, "that what we really need is a well all our own—a well that we don't have to share with your 47 thirsty cows and the farm families? After all, a well would be so much better than a spring, with all those lizards always crawling into the pipe. I think you should call up a well-digger and get started tomorrow. After all, you're always building some silo or other that doesn't do any good except stick up in the air and spoil the scenery."

"But how is Jackson Leighter going to reduce if he doesn't help me fill the silo?" say I, referring to my well-padded radio agent, who, with Mrs. Leighter, has been traveling with Rita.

However, I saw it was no use. Rita Hayworth is a charming gal and a swell sport. She didn't mind the water shortage at all. But she has done me a great disfavor. Thanks to her, I have been euchred into drilling a well.

However, though Mrs. P doesn't know it yet, I am going to connect the well to the cow barn. I just can't afford to let my milk score drop.

Firm Cooperation

By MARK SULLIVAN

THERE is an American condition, a prevailing emotion and judgment on the part of our people, which the British government and people need to understand and take account of, in the interest of all-round helpfulness.

The American people regard China, under its present Communist government, as an enemy. It is making war on us, daily our soldiers die under its attacks. The war it is making on us is, from the American point of view, unprovoked and wanton. We had made no attack on China, had scrupulously refrained from intrusion on Chinese territory.

In this condition our people have been surprised and disquieted by actions and attitudes the British have taken within a period of a few weeks past. The British have suggested to our State Department that in the conference about to be held to complete a peace settlement for Japan, Communist China should be given some status, at the least a right to be present.

Replied Firmly

To this suggestion our State Department, speaking presumably its own view and most certainly the view of the American people, replied firmly. In effect it pointed out that we do not recognize the Communist government of China the "Peking regime," that we recognize the Nationalist government under Chiang Kai-shek. Firmly our State Department said the United States "has not and does not contemplate discussion with the Peking regime regarding the Japanese peace settlement."

Soon after the Communist government of China had established itself, Britain recognized it. Later and up to the present time the British have urged that the Communist government of China be admitted to the United Nations. Taking notice of this our State Department a few weeks ago spoke clearly: "The United States has vigorously opposed the admission of the Peking regime to the United Nations. We shall continue to follow that policy."

A few weeks ago Britain suggested to our State Department that the island of Formosa should ultimately be given to Communist China. For this notion, there was some slight technical justification. In a conference of Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang Kai-shek at Cairo in 1943 it had been agreed that Formosa, long in possession of Japan, should be given to China. But the China of that time was the China that was our ally in the war under the Nationalist government of Chiang-Kai-shek. Britain's recent suggestion that Formosa go to Communist China was rejected by our State Department.

Had Unfortunate Effect

The recent suggestions from Britain, having an apparent spirit of softness toward Communist China, had an unfortunate effect in America in several respects. Our people, firmly resisting the aggression of Communist China in Korea, and regarding Communist China as an enemy, wondered whether Britain felt as strongly as we. The British suggestions embarrassed our State Department, for it was under accusation of having been soft itself when the Communists were in process of taking over China.

The British have now acceded to our State Department's rejection of its recent suggestions, and these can be regarded as having had the status of suggestions. The whole picture of the relations between Britain and the United States can now be seen as it fundamentally is. That relation is one of firm cooperation in the defense of the non-Communist world against aggression on a global scale by Russian communism. All the plans for conduct of this resistance rely upon Britain as an indispensible buttress. Effective resistance by us globally by air or sea would depend upon use of bases that are in the control of Britain.

Washington understands this fully. It understands also the willingness of Britain to cooperate in this and other respects.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON. — Secretary Marshall's testimony is in many respects even more sensational than that of General MacArthur.

For it tells the American people for the first time that they have completely lost their independence of miliary action in the midst of a war in which 350,000 American boys are engaged.

It tells that decisions made by the President, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are vetoed in secret by other governments without an opportunity for the public opinion of the United States or of the world to be apprised of the facts.

It tells that, although the United States has contributed the bulk of the troops in Korea, the 13 governments which have contributed token forces decided to deny us the right to apply the military doctrine of pursuing the enemy—known as "hot pursuit."

It tells that the United Nations has appointed the United States as agent to conduct the military operations but that the agent cannot perform those military operations without continuously obtaining the consent of these allies.

It tells that the United States, though conscious of the importance of an economic blockade to stop strategic materials and munitions from getting to the enemy, has not succeeded in persuading the principal UN countries now involved in that trade to stop it, even though 10 months of war in Korea have elapsed.

It tells that all these troubles and frictions between the United States and its allies were never communicated to General MacArthur except in the vaguest terms.

It tells, by implication, that the famous 13-nation declaration which was supposed to bring about a negotiation of a "cease fire" was never sent to General MacArthur and that only a brief message saying such announcement was planned went to him on March 20 last.

It tells that the United States Government at present opposes the entry of Red China into the UN and opposes turning Formosa over to Communist China but that the United States Government is nevertheless willing to discuss these subjects as matters for negotiation with the Red Chinese when they agree to a "cease fire."

It tells that the United States will adhere to that policy but it doesn't tell whether the United States will use its veto to turn down such a reward for aggression or will merely bow to the will of the UN countries eventually, as it has done on some of the military measures proposed to the UN.

It tells that General MacArthur carried out his military instructions as Far East commander and did not violate any military orders but that his public statements—his letters answering a member of Congress, Representative Martin, and his interviews answering questions that were asked by the press concerning military operations—were distasteful to the President and his advisers and really caused his dismissal.

It tells that only four men sat in with President Truman and recommended summary dismissal of General MacArthur—Messrs. Acheson, Harriman, Bradley and Marshall.

It tells that the Joint Chiefs favored a replacement but did not have anything to do with the form of dismissal. It doesn't tell whether the Joint Chiefs were told that the President was displeased with MacArthur's statements and was considering a change in command.

It tells that the summary dismissal was decided upon suddenly as a means of preventing General MacArthur from making any further statements to the press and from developing a sort of "cumulative affair" of publicity. This has since come about anyway with probably more cumulative statements and hearings than anybody ever imagined.

It tells that the Secretary of Debelieve the enemy can be driven out believe the enemy can b driven out of Korea but he hopes they will withdraw after their offensives fail. He doesn't think bombardment on Manchurian bases will chase them out, either, though he concedes that diversionary operations such as a blockade and other military efforts in Southeast Asia may cause them to tire of their effort to stay in Korea.

It tells that in a moment of great crisis — when MacArthur's troops were being pushed back last December after Red China entered the war—the UN allies became frightened and began to limit the operations of the UN troops, especially in fighting back in the air.

It tells that instructions went to General MacArthur forbidding him to bomb even two big distributing centers in North Korea which were 35 miles below the northern border of the country and well within Korea itself.

It tells that, despite General MacArthur's titles as supreme commander in Japan and UN commander and commander-in-chief of Far Eastern forces, Secretary Marshall regarded General MacArthur as just another "local theatre commander," without the latitude of expression to comment on military events that Eisenhower had or Nimitz had or MacArthur himself had during the last war, and without even the right to engage in psychological warfare in his own theatre of action because it might offend UN allies.

There are many more things revealed, the significance of which will become apparent as the hearings continue. But none is more vital than the revelation that America although contributing the bulk of the military forces and the supplies, has surrendered her independence of action and her leadership and has abandoned 350,000 American boys to the whim of foreign cabinets.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The China Story

THIS is a good time to read Freda Utley's "The China Story," a new book which sets out to establish by facts how the United States lost 400,000,000 allies. Freda Utley knows the Far East and has written competently concerning it. She states her conclusions:

"One thing is certain. Communist conquest of a large part of the world since the defeat of Germany and Japan, and the threat of even greater conquests, was not unavoidable. In the first part of this book, I shall show how what we did—and what we failed to do—in the Far East led us straight down the path to war in Korea."

This is a bare-to-the-bone, fact upon fact account of how the United States, by error and lack of understanding, not only gave China to Soviet Russia but brought the Korean War upon us. In view of the increasing velocity of the quarrel over facts between General Douglas MacArthur and President Truman, it will be advantageous to check what appears among the controversial writers on the subject against Miss Utley's summary of events.

Any understanding of the Far Eastern situation, no matter where one's partisanship lies, must go back to Yalta, the Far Eastern terms of which Miss Utley summarizes as follows:

"1. The 'lease' of Port Arthur to Russia as a naval base;

"2. The 'internationalization' of Dairen with 'pre-eminent rights' for the Soviet Union in this largest of China's northeastern ports;

"3. The 'joint operation' of the Manchurian railways by China and Russia, with the 'pre-eminent interests' of the Soviet Union safeguarded."

It was in pursuit of the Yalta terms that General Marshall was sent to China to manage, cajole, arrange or force Chiang Kai-shek to conform to this agreement to which neither he nor China was a party. A memorandum by Secretary of State James Byrnes (1945) on this subject stated:

"Pending the outcome of General Marshall's discussions with Chinese leaders in Chungking . . . Further transportation of Chinese troops to North China, except as North China ports may be necessary for the movement of troops and supplies into Manchuria, will be held in abeyance."

In other words, sanctions were imposed upon our ally and friend, Nationalist China, in the interest of Soviet Russia. This appeasement has already resulted in the death of more than 10,500 Americans and more than 62,000 casualties.

General Marshall has never understood either China or communism. Apparently he could not, even in 1947, grasp the nature of Russian imperialism nor the extent of international Marxism. He seemed to be astonished that Chiang Kai-shek would not form an alliance with the Communists and, as Miss Utley says, he accepted the Marxist definition of a reactionary. This is what General Marshall declared on January 7, 1947:

"On the side of the national government, which is in effect the Kuomintang, there is a dominant group of reactionaries who have been opposed, in my opinion, to almost every effort I have made to influence the formation of genuine coalition government . . . They were quite frank in publicly stating that their belief that cooperation by the Chinese Communist party in the government was inconceivable and that only a policy of force could settle the issue."

Miss Utley is a former Communist who has devoted much of her life, at great personal sacrifice, to undo the evils of this party. She says of herself:

"I first met Owen Lattimore in April 1936 in Moscow, where I had been living for nearly six years as the wife of a Russian (a Soviet citizen but not a member of the Communist party). I was employed as a research worker in the Pacific Ocean section of the Institute of World Economy and Politics. This institute had become the Russian branch of the Institute of Pacific Relations a year or so earlier when the Kremlin switched over to the 'popular front' policy, and the Communist Academy (of which the institute formed a part) was rechristened Academy of Sciences. For the benefit of the visiting Americans, a room had been taken in another part of the town and a notice put up saying 'Soviet Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations.' It was here that E. C. Carter, president of the American Institute, and Owen Lattimore were first received by the leading Communists at the Institute. As I had left the Communist party years earlier, I could not attend their private meetings.."

NEW, NEWER, NEWEST

FASHION

Black's back for the beach . . . Swim suits sparked with colored beads, embroidered with seashells or pearls . . . Nothing, but nothing, for hats . . . Hedda "Hatter" Hopper seeing "The King and I" under a veil showered with pink blossoms and crystal dewdrops . . . With her, Mrs. Robert McCormick, who had just seen the Colonel off for Chicago. . . . Ever-feminine, grey-haired Maryland McCormick in a theatre chapeau of black horsehair scattered with moonstones.

FOOD

A New York restaurant now invites you to "order by photograph" . . . How do they do it? Well, Keene's Chop House has several stereopticon viewers with built-in light sources. The waiter brings you a collection of colored slides showing mouth-watering "views" of tasty dishes on their menu . . . They say it makes customers even hungrier to see what they're going to eat.

Researchers of the Bureau of the United States Dairy Association have found that ice cream is more flavorsome and whips easier when butter milk is used rather than cream . . . Now it's buttermilk ice cream!

Refrigeration may be a thing of the past in a few years. By destroying the basteria which make food decay, two scientists have been able to keep food fresh indefinitely without refrigeration. In the future you'll take from the kitchen shelf a transparent-wrapped steak or filet of flounder which you bought two or three years ago! . . . On the same shelf you have cartons of vegetables, eggs, fruits—everything in the way of ordinary perishable foods—just stacked up the way you'd store sugar or cereals . . . Yet the foods have been on your shelf at room temperature for months or years . . . And they stay fresh and tasty as the day you bought them . . . In a N. Y. laboratory, foods have been shot with a monumental bombardment (the same atomic bullets that bring pictures to your television screen) and every micro-organism that makes food decay has been destroyed, but the food itself not injured or changed.

Other perishables, such as year-old cut flowers, fresh as the moment they were plucked, vaccines, hormones, and even blood plasma that have been lying around for a year can be used at a moment's notice!

Inventors of this Buck Rogers enterprise, Dr. Arno Brasch and Dr. Wolfgang Huber, will begin "sterilizing" edibles for a large food processor in a few months.

Similar to ones sold at the track (as much for souvenirs as drinks made of aluminum, filled with julep costing around a dollar.

WHAT-NOT

On two sides of a single, long-playing disc you can now hear General MacArthur's historic address to Congress (36 minutes.)

QUIPS

A man working for a bureaucrat was talking to a friend who had applied for a job. "Tell me," said the applicant, "what sort of a guy is the boss?"

"Full of quirks and twists!" said the government worker.

"You mean he's going to psychiatrists?"

"No—but after a couple of weeks you will!"

Other night at the Washington Real Estate Board's dinner, Rep Charlie Bennett of Florida duelled with Senator Nixon from California. . . . Over the respective merits of their home states.

"We had gone deep sea fishing in Florida and Nixon got a bite," related Bennett. "He reeled it in and there was a mermaid on the end of his line—mermaids are rare, even for Florida. Well, he took a long, searching look at her and threw her back in. I asked him why he did that, and Nixon said, 'I just figured there wasn't enough woman there to love—nor enough fish to eat!'"

Arm symmetry is a beauty attribute easily attained. Here are corrections for both heavy and thin arms.

SECRETS OF CHARM

by JOHN ROBERT POWERS

MANY A TEENAGER looks at her thin, gangling arms with a feeling of despair . . . and many an umpteenager looks at her large flaccid arms with the same feeling. But any woman can have beautiful, symmetrical arms. No arms are hopelessly thin or irreducibly heavy.

You can easily remold your arms into graceful contours, symmetrically proportioned with firm muscle tone. An arm imperfection is one of the easiest to correct, because arms are in such constant motion, getting some kind of workout throughout your ordinary round of daily activities.

Beauty In Motion

The secret of speedy improvement lies in making every motion of your arms count. Try to use your entire arm as much as possible instead of limiting your reach to a motion from your elbow or wrist; extend your entire arm from your shoulder joint. So doing will bring all the stretching muscles into play, firming them and enhancing the appearance of both the thin and heavy arm.

Learn, also, to keep your arms relaxed when they are in motion. For a while, be conscious of whether you use them jerkily or stiffly. Think for a moment now of a ballerina's grace in arm gestures and of how relaxed her joints are as her motions flow one into another. There's a beautifier for every type of arm!

And here's another one, adaptable to both slight and weighty arms. Stand with your arms down at your sides. Swing them out to shoulder level at the sides—then let them fall back to starting position. Next, swing them forward to shoulder level, continuing upward toward the ceiling and reaching as far back as you can with your hands. Return to starting position. Make all of these motions continuous, without so much as a pause between them.

If you wish to develop your arms, perform the exercise very slowly and with resistance, as if someone were holding your arms to prevent any movement and you had to put up a good fight to get your own way.

To reduce your arms, perform the routine at great speed with all the rhythm at your command.

Fifteen times is enough for anyone at the beginning. Increase gradually to about fifty times a day. That's the way to see your arms achieve alabaster beauty.

Tomorrow: How model secrets help careers.

Girls Central Graduates Entertained By Sodality

Rev. Gustav Weigel, S. J., professor of theology at Woodstock College, was guest speaker when the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary of St. Patrick's Church entertained the graduating class of Catholic Girls Central High School Sunday in the social center.

Father Weigel told of "Life in Chile," where he taught theology for 12 years at the Catholic University of Santiago, and was dean of theology there for six years. He spent two years doing post-graduate work in Rome after his ordination in 1933.

The program also included several selections by the school Choral Club. There were 175 guests present.

"The Authority on Authorities"

PRESERVE YOUR CHANCE

THERE are some throw-in plays that are absolutely certain to succeed. Others have only a 50-50 chance because they depend on a particular defender holding some certain card or cards. In other cases, the chance of success is still lower. But if the only possibility of making your contract is to find the key cards in a favorable location, the plucky and keen declarer will attempt the play. That is, if he is brilliant enough to spot the chance for it.

When the response to the Blackwood 5-No Trump bid showed North with no kings, hope of a grand slam bid had to be abandoned. It required keen play to make the small slam, but exactly that kind was furnished by the declarer, Emanuel H. Sulkis, of Boston, prominent shoe manufacturer, who won the Mediterranean championship tournament on the maiden cruise of the great American peace ship Independence.

After the club K lead to the A, it would have appeared to most players that one trick each would have to be lost in the minor suits. But Mr. Sulkis did not see it that way. He found a path to success. To the second and third tricks he led top trumps, next cleared hearts from both his holdings in three rounds. Then he was ready for the big try. He led the club 9, hoping the trick would be won by the defender who also held the diamond K.

That is exactly what West had to do. He took it with the J, and then had an impossible choice to make. If he returned a heart or club, it could be ruffed in dummy while a diamond was discarded from the South hand. He chose instead to return the diamond 9, hoping East had the Q. But Mr. Sulkis did, and took the trick with it, thus bringing his contract into port as safely as the Good Ship Independence was steered into 22 ports on its cruise.

Mrs. Roeder Opposes More Extensions For Feldstein

The Mayor and Council refused to jump the gun on its "fencing in" order to the Feldstein Iron and Steel Metal Company Monday night but not before a member suggested a "bombing" might be a condition under which the firm could not complete the requirement.

Commissioner of Streets and Public Property Lucile W. Roeder broached the subject by noting the extension time for Abe Feldstein to fence in a junk yard property at 130 Wineow Street is up Friday, May 18.

Mrs. Roeder said she would like to see the council go on record as opposing any more extension of time for the work. Feldstein has been given two extensions totaling 60 days.

Mrs. Roeder continued that Feldstein could have started the job there weeks ago and she saw no reason to extend the time limit.

Finance Commissioner William H. Buchholtz made a motion that the council go on record against any extension time for Feldstein and Mrs. Roeder seconded. But the motion was killed by a vote of 3-2.

Mayor Thomas S. Post commented: "Before we take action we ought to see the expiration of his time. Conditions might arise whereby we wouldn't have to act on it."

"What," Mrs. Roeder asked, "kind of conditions could they be?"

The Mayor replied: "Suppose a bomb would drop on it. Did you ever think of that?"

The council also accepted the bid of $500 from Kathleen A. Stakem to operate the concession at Constitution Park.

The South Cumberland Business Men's Association was granted permission to block off South Street between First and Second Streets during its "Fun Fair" May 10-12.

A request for a donation from Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, for two mobile medical units under the civil defense program was tabled for one week but Commissioner Buchholtz said the request was worthy of consideration. Each of the units would cost $2,600.

Edward J. Ryan, attorney for Mrs. Barbara Dircks, informed the council his client has 40 acres of land adjacent to Constitution Park available for purchase. Mrs. Roeder was asked to investigate the proposition.

The Maryland State Firemen's Association was voted $75 for a full page advertisement in the state convention program.

Two bids were received and referred to Mrs. Roeder for tabulation and report. The Norton Petroleum Company bid on road oil and the Wright Richardson Company for construction of a fire escape and other work at the Girl Scout House.

Commissioner Buchholtz requested that $200 be donated to help defray cost of the Armed Forces Day ceremony May 18 and an order was directed prepared. Mayor Post was authorized to issue a proclamation on Armed Forces Day.

Rubber Workers Vote Tomorrow

Members of Local 26, United Rubber Workers Union, CIO, will cast ballots tomorrow to choose new officers.

Ballots will be cast at the conference room at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant, where the union members are employed.

Voting booths will be open from 6 to 8 a. m.; 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.; 2 to 4 p. m.; 5 to 6:30 p. m. and 10:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m.

Members of the election committee will handle the voting and the ballots will be counted Friday at the Union Hall, South Mechanic Street.

Principal post to be decided will be that of president. There are two candidates, R. C. Burkhart, the incumbent, and Ralph C. Beard, currently vice president and also a former president of the union.

Members of the election committee are Thomas Boone, L. G. Jenkins, F. E. Roninson, Joseph Schnibbe and G. M. Caruthers.

Brothers Seek Estate Share In Court Suit

A bill of complaint was docketed in Circuit Court yesterday morning by two Cumberland brothers. They seek to have a deed to a property reconveyed to them and an accounting made of all rents and profits from the property at 243-245 Virginia Avenue.

Listed as plaintiffs in the suit are Charles E. and William F. Krapf. The defendants are Clyde F. Adams, Frank H. Krapf, Florence Adams Whitefield, Roy E. Adams, Philip D. Adams, Nonda Adams Rockwell, Anna Adams Arthurs and Melvin Deal.

Claim Two-Thirds Interest

The bill of complaint states the plaintiffs, Charles E. and William F. Krapf, were left a one-third interest each in the property on Virginia Avenue. It was stated the property consisted of a three-story double brick structure.

Mary J. Krapf, grandmother of the plaintiffs, left the two men the property and the other one-third interest was left to the late Charles Krapf. This occurred November 14, 1933. It was stated in the complaint that Charles Krapf, the grandfather of the two plaintiffs, on December 18, 1934 induced them to convey the deed to the property to him for $1,000.

It was further stated that the grandfather stated the property would come back to them anyhow upon his death. The plaintiffs stated that for a number of years they had resided with their grandfather and came to look upon him almost as a father and that he had great influence over them. They also stated that they were at the time of the conveying of the deed 23 and 21 years of age respectively and unversed in business and looked upon their grandfather with trust and confidence.

Grandfather Died

The bill of complaint states that last September 8 the grandfather died and left the property to the defendants named in the complaint.

The court is asked to set aside the deed to the property which they conveyed in 1933 and also requested an accounting for all rents and profits on the property.

It was stated in the bill that the property in 1933 was very valuable and is now.

John M. Robb is attorney for the plaintiffs.

When twins were born in an Oregon Indian tribe, it was the custom to put one or both to death.

Beall Requests Flood Funds

Appearing before a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, Rep J. Glenn Beall yesterday urged that $2,400,000 be included in the budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 for the Cumberland-Ridgeley flood control project.

Rep. Beall pointed out the U. S. Engineers and the Budget Bureau have both requested the appropriation.

It was explained by the Congressman that to stop the project at this time because it is not essential to the defense effort would bring about a great hardship.

The unemployment situation in the Cumberland area was outlined by Rep. Beall, who said it might be more costly in the long run to stop the work and begin again at a later date.

Rep. Beall reported members of the group appeared impressed by his arguments.

Phone Co. Employes Hold Practice Air Raid Drill

In a brief, but effective air raid drill yesterday employes of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company demonstrated how they will protect the community's communications system and themselves during a disaster.

Both Richard E. Harman, manager, and Harry Patton, central office foreman and civil defense officer, pronounced the drill a success.

The drill lasted approximately 45 seconds, but operators at both local and long distance boards left their posts and headed in orderly single file for an exit. As they left, tele-set cords (the connecting wire for earphones) were wrapped around their waists to keep them from tripping. This same procedure is followed in a fire drill, officials said.

The practice session was planned for 8:35 a. m., a time when call traffic is one of the lightest of the day. In spite of that, when the operators left their local boards, new calls and completed calls caused the board to light up like a Christmas tree.

Despite the importance of these drills, telephone company officials are attempting to carry them off with the least inconvenience to the public as possible.

Harman said that the drills will be held from time to time. Plant workers in the field will be guided by the public warning in event of attack, Patton said.

Signals are given employes by a light-bell arrangement in 13 different parts of the building. The bell rings for an exit and again when the alarm is over.

The basement area of the building is thought to be adequate protection against atomic attack. In the No. 1 shelter room, walls are of 20-inch, reinforced concrete.

The wire-glass windows and venetian blinds at the building are also considered excellent protection against the atomic flash, according to R. C. Lord, plant wire chief.

Yesterday's drill differed from an actual raid in only one respect. All operators left the boards when the alarm sounded. In a real air raid, volunteer workers will man the boards as long as possible to keep communications intact.

Times-News Mibs Tourney Gets Underway Next Week

The first of 20 school tournaments to select the entries who will "shoot it out" for the 1951 marbles championship of Cumberland will be held Wednesday, May 16, at Corriganville. Cresaptown's champ will be determined the next day, May 17, and the LaVale champ on May 18.

With the three suburban area championships settled first, the tournaments will open in Cumberland on Monday, May 21, when school finals will be held at Gephart playground for both Gephart and Carver.

June 12 is the tentative date for the city finals, to be held on Gephart playground rings built by the City Recreation Department.

As in previous years the Times-News is sponsoring the marbles tournament and will pay the expenses of the city champ to Asbury Park, N. J. to play for the championship of the United States during the week of June 24. At Asbury Park the approximately 80 best mibsters of the nation will live like kings for the week of the National Tournament.

Cumberland is sure to have a new champion this year, as the 1949 and 1950 champion, Milton "Boy" Steward, of St. Patrick's, is over the 15-year age limit and not eligible to enter the tournament. His predecessor, however, Lowell Coates, of Columbia Street School (1948 champion) is still under 15 and eligible to play.

The complete schedule follows:

May 16—Corriganville; May 17—Cresaptown; May 18—La Vale; May 21—Gephart and Carver; May 22—St. Patrick's and LaSalle Jr. High; May 23—East Side; May 24—West Side; May 25—Columbia Street; May 28—SS. Peter and Paul and Centre Street; May 29—Mt. Royal; May 31—Humbird; June 1—Virginia Avenue; June 5—St. Mary's; June 6—Johnson Hts; June 7—Penn. Avenue.

The Allegany and Fort Hill Junior High championships will be decided in series of games prior to June 7.

Citron wood or citrus wood was the most costly furniture wood of Roman times.

Final Concert Planned Tuesday

The Cumberland Civic Symphony Orchestra will present its final concert of the season next Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. in Allegany High School auditorium.

Directed by S. Lua Syckes, the 40-piece musical group will offer the following two-hour program:

Part I—Prelude, Choral and Fugue, J. S. Bach, and Symphony No. 8 in B Minor (unfinished) Schubert; Part II—Miss Letha Dawson, 15, Mifflintown, Pa., trombone soloist; Part III—Semiranide Overture, Rossini; Ballet Egyptian, Luigini; Sleeping Beauty Waltz, Tschaikowsky, and grand march from "Aida," Verdi.

Miss Dawson, student of Richard Smith, music instructor at Lewistown, Pa., High School, will play several semi-classical selections. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Walter Smiley, of Lewistown.

Orchestra officials said her musical ton is similar to that of Tommy Dorsey, noted band-leader. She is striving to appear on a popular radio talent show.

There will be no admission charge for the spring concert but a silver offering will be collected during the intermission.

Seven Magistrates Sworn Into Office

Seven more newly appointed magistrates were sworn into office yesterday morning at the Court House by Clerk of Court Joseph E. Boden.

They are William J. Gunter, this city; Fred Crowe and James M. Carter, both of Frostburg; Thomas R. Smith, Sr., of Barton; James G. Blair, of Midland; Carl W. Shaffer, of Westernport and Melvin S. Sloan, of Lonaconing.

Howard R. Stevens, of Mt. Savage, has not yet qualified to take the oath. It is expected he will be sworn in within the next few days.

All of the new magistrates are Republicans and were appointed by Gov. McKeldin upon recommendation of the Republican State Central Committee.

Majorettes Place Second

The drum majorettes of the Allegany High School band took second place in the competition among about 75 musical units which took part in the annual Apple Blossom Festival parade at Winchester, Va., last Friday.

An estimated 125,000 persons viewed the procession in the Virginia city.

At the same time as the drum majorettes were winning second place for all classes in the parade, the band copped fourth place in the Class A high school division of 15 bands.

The majorettes were trained by Carroll Taylor, the drum major, and the prize-winning group is comprised of Ann Gellner, head majorette; Ruth Howe, Jean Haenftling, Patricia Fallen, Barbara Stark, Hulda Miller, Marcia Metz, and Janet Ridgeley.

In the Class B competition of high school bands the Morgan County band, comprised of students from Berkeley Springs and Paw Paw, W. Va., took first place honors.

Two Draft Registrants

Draft Board No. 27 will send two registrants to Martinsburg, W. Va., Monday for pre-induction physical examinations.

Officials said the men will leave Queen City Station at 6:55 a. m. (DST) and return to Cumberland the same day.

MacARTHUR —MAN OF ACTION

By FRANK KELLEY and CORNELIUS RYAN

6. "I Shall Return"

In December, 1941, at the time of Pearl Harbor, the Japanese lashed out at the Philippines. First they bombed key airfields, destroying American planes which could not be dispersed in time because of lack of radar warning networks. Nor were there enough anti-aircraft guns on hand. It was one of the early instances of too little too late.

MacArthur had 11,500 miles of Philippine coastline to defend. He could not have his troops everywhere at once and was compelled to await a Japanese invasion. It came in overwhelming numbers in northwestern Luzon and on the east coast of Luzon. They tossed more than 200,000 men at MacArthur's mixed defenders.

MacArthur, utilizing the classic defense of the Philippines that had been projected nearly 30 years before by Gen Lea, avoided the pincers operation that the Japanese had hoped to pull off against him north and south of Manila. Evacuating Manila at Christmas, he managed an orderly withdrawal into the Bataan Peninsula, jutting south into Manila Bay and covered and protected by the island fortress of Corregidor. He sent the few remaining bombers south from Clark Field to Mindanao, later to Australia.

Without decent food and medicines, the malaria-ridden, weary troops under MacArthur could do nothing but fall back southward along the Bataan Peninsula. They exacted a heavy toll of the Japanese as they did so. On half rations since mid-January of 1942, the GIs of that day went on even smaller rations by the end of March. And they began to slaughter horses and mules to improve their diet.

General Homma Replaced

MacArthur's men fought on grimly on Bataan. They staved off three big enemy attacks so well that Lieutenant-General Homma, a fast man with a whisky highball and possessor of an Oxford accent, was removed in favor of General Yamashita, who had conquered Singapore.

In February, 1942, the War Department and President Roosevelt ordered MacArthur to save his skill for the long pull. He was told to proceed to Australia and assume command of the newly designated Southwest Pacific Area. He was to hold Australia, check the foe along the Melanesian barrier, protect land, sea, and air communications with the Southwest Pacific, and maintain our slipping position in the Philippines. Quite an order.

Two 65-foot motor torpedo boats of the type MacArthur had ordered for defense of the Philippines slipped into the Corregidor dock at dusk on March 11, 1942. MacArthur, his wife, and son, with young Arthur's Chinese nurse, climbed aboard one boat. Some of the 19 staff officers who were to go with the General to Australia boarded the other boat.

Toward dawn the PTs made Mindanao. There was an agonizing three-day wait for three Flying Fortresses that had been sent north to pick up the party. Only two arrived; baggage, arms and equipment were jettisoned. All got aboard. The planes took off about midnight, March 16, and flew for about 11 hours to northern Australia.

As MacArthur's train approached Melbourne on a crisp March morning, 4,000 gathered to meet him at the station. Assorted generals and admirals in khaki, and an American guard of honor, and seven brown Filipino soldiers awaited. The train stopped. There was a wait. MacArthur stepped out, in a plain, faded khaki jacket, open at the neck and without his four stars of rank, and sharply pressed khaki trousers. There was a touch of gold on his garrison cap. In his right hand swung a bamboo swagger stick.

MacArthur stepped up to a microphone.

"I have every confidence in the ultimate success of our joint cause, but success in modern war requires something more than courage and willingness to die. It requires careful preparation . . . No general can make something from nothing. My success or failure will depend primarily upon the resources which our respective governments place at my disposal. My faith in them is complete. In any event, I shall do my best. I shall keep the soldier's faith."

"What's that?" asked a scribbling Australian reporter, who couldn't catch the last word.

"I shall keep the soldier's faith," Douglas MacArthur repeated firmly into the microphone.

MacArthur was scarcely in Australia when the Japanese opened an all-out attack on Wainwright's positions on Bataan. Bataan fell early in April.

Corregidor and its satellite island forts guarding the mouth of Manila Bay—held out for nearly a month longer, with counter-battery and anti-aircraft fire. On May 5 the Japanese, after a week of bombardment that buried some defenses under rocky landslides, came ashore. The next day the exhausted Americans surrendered honorably.

Skillful Delaying Operations

Technically, Bataan and Corregidor were defeats for MacArthur's forces. Actually, they were skillfully conducted delaying operations against an overwhelmingly superior enemy. MacArthur, Wainwright & Company exacted a heavy price from the Japanese. They tied up crack Japanese troops for nearly five months when they might have been employed elsewhere. They denied to the Japanese the use of Manila harbor, one of the finest in the Orient. The time gained enabled men and material to flow to Australia, New Caledonia, and elsewhere in the Pacific.

Winston Churchill has recorded that when he was visiting Franklin D. Roosevelt at the White House late in December, 1941, and learned of the "approaching fate" of MacArthur on Bataan and Corregidor, he "thought it right" to show to Mr. Roosevelt and Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, the dispatch which the British War Office had sent in the dark days of May, 1940, to Viscount Gort, then commander of the British Expeditionary Force that was falling back upon Dunkirk.

The War Office message told Gort that he would be ordered to return to England with a few officers and turn over command to a corps commander. The message said that on political grounds it would be bad for the Germans to capture Gort and it would be "a needless triumph" for the enemy.

Churchill concedes it is possible that the tenor of this message influenced other great events and the fortunes of "another valiant commander," namely MacArthur. Churchill says Roosevelt and Stimson read the message with deep attention; Stimson asked for a copy of it. Churchill says it may have been "that this influenced them in the right decision." "I should like to think this was true," Churchill has written.

Early in February of 1942 Quezon wirelessed a bombshell to the White House. He suggested to Roosevelt that the United States should declare the Philippines independent and that this country and Japan should then proceed to neutralize the islands. All troops would be withdrawn and the Philippine army mustered out.

Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of the late President Woodrow Wilson and then high commissioner in the Philippines, subscribed to Quezon's scheme.

It was MacArthur's lot to forward the Quezon and Sayre messages.

MacArthur made it clear that he had no illusions about the future but he wanted to know what to do.

"So far as the military angle is concerned," he added, "the problem presents itself as to whether the plan of President Quezon might offer the best possible solution of what is about to be a disastrous debacle. It would not affect the ultimate solution in the Philippines for that would be determined by the results in other theaters."

Stimson Answers

One can imagine the reaction in the Pentagon and at the White House. Quezon seemed to be selling out despite his public pronouncements. Sayre, and worst of all MacArthur, appeared to be backing Quezon's scheme. Stimson and the Chief of Staff, General of the Army George C. Marshall, rushed to see Roosevelt. The President asked Marshall what he proposed to do. Marshall let Stimson answer. Stimson felt that the Quezon idea played into the Japanese hands, that it would ruin the friendship between the Philippines and the United States, that Japan could not be trusted to keep any agreement about neutralizing the islands, and that the United States and Japan would be held equally guilty of destroying the Philippines.

Marshall spent the afternoon working up a reply to MacArthur; Stimson drafted one for Quezon. The upshot was this message from Roosevelt to MacArthur, dated February 9, 1942:

"In the second section of this message I am making, through you, an immediate reply to President Quezon's proposals of February 8. My reply must emphatically deny the possibility of this government's agreement to the political aspects of President Quezon's proposal. I authorize you to arrange for the capitulation of the Filipino elements of the defending forces, when and if in your opinion that course appears necessary and always having in mind that the Filipino troops are in the service of the United States. Details of all necessary arrangements will be left in your hands, including plans for segregation of forces and the withdrawal, if your judgment so dictates, of American elements to Fort Mills (Corregidor). The timing also will be left to you.

"American forces will continue to keep our flag flying in the Philippines so long as there remains any possibility of resistance. I have made these decisions in complete understanding of your military estimate that accompanied President Quezon's message to me. The duty and the necessity of resisting Japanese aggression to the last transcends in importance any other obligation now facing us in the Philippines."

Roosevelt asked MacArthur to radio the gist of his plans in accordance with the above instructions. He also asked the General to pass along to Quezon the second section of the message. This part, in effect, told Quezon that the United States was pledged to give the Philippines their independence in 1946, that Japanese offers of promises could never be relied upon, that whatever happened to MacArthur's garrison, the American forces would return "and drive the last remnant of the invaders from your soil."

Quezon, with his shot in the arm, promised to abide by Roosevelt's message. MacArthur characteristically said he would fight on to the end, and that in no circumstances would he surrender the Filipino troops under him.

Whatever Quezon felt, MacArthur appreciated everything only too well; it must have been easy in the air-conditioned purlieus of Washington in 1942 to have flashed hortatory messages to Bataan, where the temperature under an implacable sun and before a tenacious, skillful foe was in the hundreds and Americans were dying like flies. In those days — even as today — Washington and the rest of the United States were only partially mobilized; there was a groping fumbling understanding of what war meant (the men on Bataan knew); even as today there was the desire to carry on "business as usual" and not to do anything too drastic on the home front that might boomerang politically.

"Rally to me. Let the indomitable spirit of Bataan and Corregidor lead on . . . For the land of your sacred birth, strike!

"Let no heart be faint. Let every arm be steeled. The guidance of Divine God points to the way. Follow in His name to the Holy Grail of righteous victory."

These were the words of Douglas MacArthur as he stepped ashore on Leyte on Oct. 20, 1944.

Kept His Promise

It was his destiny to liberate the Philippines. He had promised to come back, and he did.

The Navy was busy with carrier strikes softening up Japanese defenses, taking pictures, feeling out the enemy. In the early fall of 1944 a naval aviator was shot down over Leyte; he got ashore unhurt and was concealed by friendly Filipinos. He was picked up not long after and made a startling intelligence report which led to alteration of the plan for conquering the Philippines. He reported that Leyte rather than Mindanao, would be a comparative pushover. Further, it had good beaches.

The report was confirmed by photographs. MacArthur and the chiefs of staff in Washington hastily revised their plans. Only a few months before MacArthur had gone to Hawaii to meet President Roosevelt and to win with his persuasiveness a powerful argument against the Navy. The Navy wanted to skip the Philippines, hit Formosa, and prepare for a landing on the China coast. MacArthur said no; he pointed out our moral obligation to retake the Philippines, convinced Roosevelt it could be done without the blood baths that the Navy and the Marines had suffered in their Central Pacific operations against such Jap strongholds as Tarawa, Eniwetok and Saipan.

The report on Jap weakness at Leyte speeded up the reconquest of the islands by three months. Our troops sailed in gigantic convoys. It was the mightiest armada yet seen in the Pacific.

The Leyte campaign was tough to the end. It broke the back of Japanese resistance in the islands and gave us air bases from which to hammer enemy air strength on Luzon. MacArthur's forces went into Luzon—as the Japanese had in 1941 — by way of Lingayen gulf. They were in Manila in February, 1945.

On March 2 Douglas MacArthur set foot once again on battle-scarred Corregidor. He saw the Stars and Stripes hoisted on the battered white flagpole from which the enemy had ripped it three years before. He said: "I see the old flagstaff still stands. Haul the colors to its peak and let no enemy ever haul them down."

British Official Defends Policy Of China Trade

LONDON, May 8 (AP)—Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of Britain's Board of Trade, said yesterday it was "nonsense" to say that British goods shipped to Red China greatly helped the Communists in their Korean fighting.

Sir Hartley's statement to the House of Commons was seen as a direct rebuttal to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's declaration before a joint Senate committee in Washington last Thursday that materials reaching Red China through the crown colony of Hong Kong had been of "substantial assistance" to the Communists in Korea.

Shawcross defended the Labor government's policy of trade with the Chinese Communists.

"These exports," he declared, "have made no significant contribution to the Chinese war potential against our forces in Korea."

But he indicated that should the United Nations order an embargo of strategic materials to China, Britain would cut off her shipments. In order to carry out such sanctions, Britain would have to break off the diplomatic recognition she offered Peiping Jan. 6 1950.

An American resolution calling for such an embargo was to be put before the U. N. 12-nations sanctions committee today.

Baltimorean Is Held In Shooting Of Youth

WESTMINSTER, Md., May 8 (AP)—Francis Vincent Welsh, 29, Baltimore, was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of manslaughter in the shooting of Robert Stanley Hood, 12, Pickett's Corner.

Welsh was in the Carroll County jail in default of $1,000 bond.

State Police Corporal James S. Poteet, who signed the warrant, said his investigation disclosed no motive for the shooting, which apparently was the result "of careless handling of firearms."

Welsh told officers he was firing a .38 caliber pistol at bottles, which the Hood boy was placing in position for future shots.

Trouble developed in the gun, Welsh added, and it discharged accidentally as he tried to clear it. The bullet struck Hood.

U. S., Russia Break Off Lend-Lease Parley

WASHINGTON, May 8 (AP)—The United States and Russia yesterday broke off direct talks aimed at settlement of Moscow's $10,800,000,000 lend-lease account.

Both sides agreed to call off their regular meetings after a brief 30-minute session produced the usual deadlock.

Russian Ambassador Panyushkin made no move to budge from his firm opposition to returning American lend-lease ships or boosting Moscow's financial settlement offer.

The United States has reduced its bill to $800,000,000. Moscow has countered with a $240,000,000 offer.

He's grown–fast!

Pearl Harbor—1941. Korea—1951. Only ten years. But in that time the Bell System's capacity to serve the nation has literally doubled!

And the Long Distance telephone network which ties America together has grown even more. In 1941, there was very little coaxial cable in use. Radio relay was still in an experimental stage. Yet today there are 8,000 miles of coaxial cable in service—plus thousands of miles of radio relay. And Long Distance telephone circuits have increased in ten years from about 4,800,000 miles to 20,800,000.

In times like these, telephone lines are defense lines. For they are helping America rush its big production program. It's fortunate this nationwide network has grown so big, so fast.

To help speed your Long Distance call, please give the operator the out-of-town telephone number.

This is YOUR tax money!

Let's all blow the whistle on this character! He's trying to grab YOUR tax money for unnecessary schemes like Socialized Medicine and Political Electricity . . . and he's doing it in the name of defense!

Real Americans don't want Socialism at any time, and any socialistic scheme now is doubly dangerous, because we just can't pay for both our war effort and wasteful political ideas!

Let's INSIST that YOUR TAX DOLLARS be spent only for REAL defense efforts.

NEW YORK (INS)—

SIDEGLANCES at celebrities:

Met a man the other night who, with his partner, has turned down a Hollywood offer of $5,000,000.

Dick Rodgers, one of the greatest composers of fine popular music in the history of this country. The Hollywood-coveted property is "Oklahoma!" first of a great series of smash hits by Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein.

It ran on Broadway for years and has been running on the road since it closed in New York, a long time ago. It is the biggest money-maker in the history of the British theater. Nobody ever seems to tire of it, a state of mind which may cause the fabulous pair to bring it back to Broadway this summer—under the auspices of the Theater Guild.

"It's like an annuity," Rodgers explained. "If we sell it to Hollywood, we kill our golden goose. Besides, we'd have to split with the Theater Guild, then cut the rest in two, then pay the taxes, and there wouldn't be much left out of five million."

For much the same reason, Rodgers and Hammerstein will not sell their "South Pacific" or their new and incredibly beautiful one, "The King And I." which springs from an idea submitted to them by Star Gertrude Lawrence and her court.

They'd be happy to let their "Carousel," go to Hollywood, if someone comes along with a slab of important money.

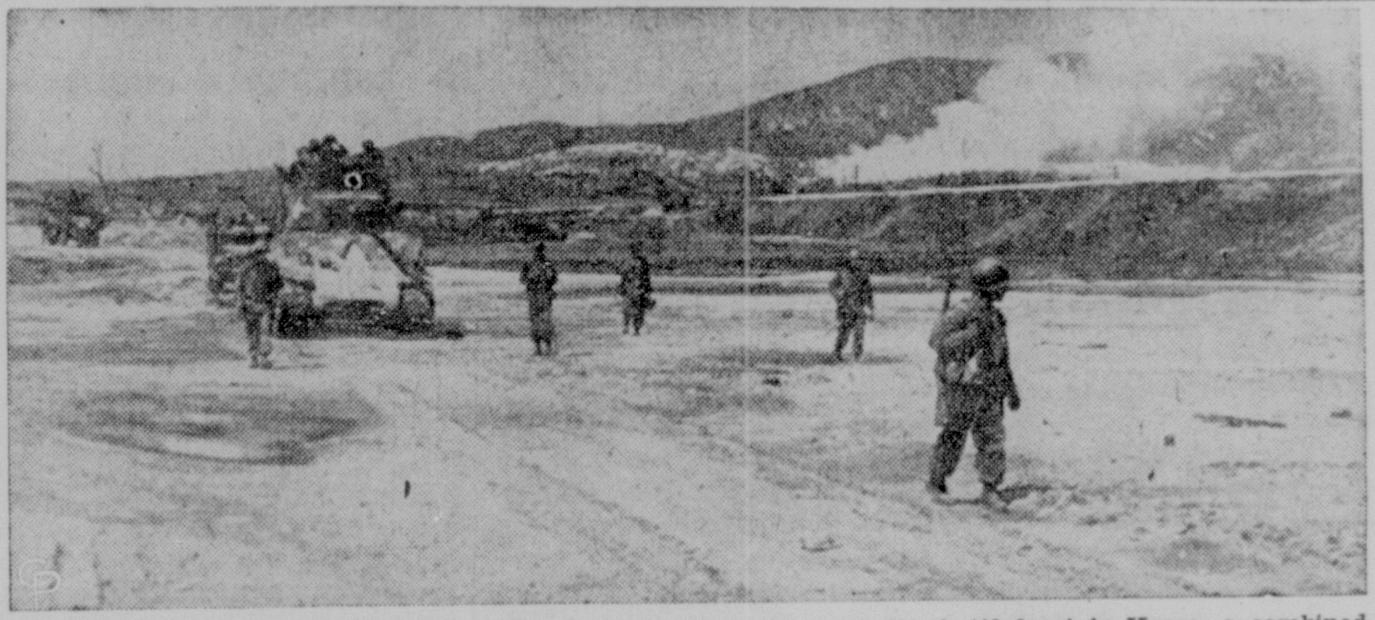
Here's an astounding thing: Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the atomic spy, became a suspect as far back as 1946, when his name was mentioned in connection with the seizure of Dr. Allan Nunn May, the Canadian scientist-spy who was turned in by the Russian code clerk he had been using as a courier.



WORKING THEIR WAY toward Chinese Communist-held territory on the battlefront in Korea, a combined United Nations tank and infantry patrol moves ahead cautiously. Behind the railroad line (right) is a village left burning by the patrol to smoke out any enemies in the vicinity. (International Soundphoto)

In 1947 we decided that a certain amount of atomic secrets had to be taken out of the "top secret" file and declassified, to speed up the industrial and medical uses of uranium and plutonium.

We asked the British to send over a team of physicists to participate in the declassification meeting, just as they had sent a team to engage in the creation of the a-bomb. The list the British submitted did not include the name of Fuchs.

But certain American scientists insisted that he be added to the British team, and he was.

So the man who while at Los Alamos in 1945 had given to Courier Harry Gold information which changed the course of history was permitted to come back here and nose into what we had learned since his departure.

Who was his sponsors?

• — • — •

Jack Frye, now head of General Aniline and Film Corp., was one of the young pioneers of American commercial aviation. The far-sighted executive became one of the fathers of the country's trans-ocean routes, helped lay out fabulously far-flung routes for his company, T W A. . .routes that extend as far as Bombay.

Last week I went to a party for Frye and learned it was a farewell fete. He was leaving the next day for Europe.

That seemed like an old story for Frye, but the host shook his head.

"It's Jack's first trip abroad."

• — • — •

At the Quebec conference during World War II, F. D. R. and his advisors promised the British that we would never drop an a-bomb without first gaining the consent of Britain.

It was put in writing, in the still-shrouded document that was born at Quebec. Only the vehement protests of Sen. Hickenlooper and New York Congressman W. Sterling Cole—made to the State Department—caused a rewrite of the agreement. Each threatened to denounce the clause in Congress.

A horse attached to a heavily loaded lumber wagon belonging to Mr. Louis Weber, balked on the streetcar tracks on Virginia avenue, yesterday morning. Every effort to start the horse was made. A driver of a coal cart backed his team against the vehicle but his efforts were in vain. He then unhitched his horse and tried to drag the obstinate animal of the lumber team off the track but did not succeed. The motorman of street car 16 finally pushed the horse and wagon off the track with his car. Street car traffic was delayed almost an hour. Half the lumber on the wagon was unloaded before the horse could be moved after getting off the track.

Bus Service Talks Continue

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 8 (AP)—A plan to discontinue bus service between Franklin, W. Va. and Cumberland, Md. was sidetracked indefinitely today by the Public Service Commission.

The Commission agreed to a request of the Reynolds Transportation Company to continue a hearing pending a new study of means of continuing the bus service.

The company had sought authority to discontinue the route contending it has been losing money for some time. The loss, the firm said, amounted to 3.5 cents per bus mile in the June 12-July 12 period of 1950.

Many residents of the area had protested the discontinuance. It is the only public transportation service now furnished over the route.

Students At Work On Botanical Garden And Park At Kitzmiller

At Kitzmiller, in Garrett County, high school students and even some of the younger pupils have been busily engaged for the past several weeks in the construction of an outdoor classroom, in the form of a botanical garden and park. The planting, construction and development has been undertaken on the school grounds and an adjoining three-acre tract given them by the Kitzmiller Lions Club. The project is under the guidance of Melvin Brown, the school's science teacher, and over 300 species of trees, flowers and shrubs have been planted, representing every state in the union. In the top right hand picture, Ralph Calandrella and Bobby Davis are seen putting the finishing touches on a windmill. The windmill is gaily colored, and is an exact replica of those used in Holland. This one was built of orange crates and other salvaged material and will pump water from a nearby spring to help irrigate the park. Upper center shows some of the older boys laying stone in mortar for one of several native stone fireplaces in the garden. The boys include Neil Smith, Gary Brady, John Bruckey and Danny Tasker. Upper left is a waterfall or stream of water which cascades down into the Mill Race which flows through the park. This stream of water spreads for about a hundred feet along the hillside as it seeped from a coal mine at the top of the hill. However, the boys cut off the stream at the top, controlled all the little channels it had created, and diverted it into one cascade. This provided control of the water and added to the picturesque beauty of the project. Lower left shows some of the girls who have been doing their share. Much of the planting has been done by the feminine members of the school, while the boys have willingly undertaken the heavier work of constructing shelters, benches, tables, fireplaces, gravel paths, etc. The four girls, left to right are Margaret Holland, Clarice Barrick, Shirley Rhorbaugh, and Patsy Burrell. The flower bed contains hyacinths and parrot tulips. In the center photo Thomas Fike, Sonny Shank and John Rinker are the three busy carpenters working on the park bench. Below that picture a group of boys are shown constructing a bridge across the Mill Race. While all of the boys who majored on bridge building are not in the picture the group included James Calhoun, James Henline, Ralph Shaffer, William Anderson, Vernon Sullivan, Cecil Pyle and William Stewart. Lower right shows Norman Parks and Harold Phillips setting out spruce trees from the State of Washington. A dedication program is planned for Thursday, Ma y 10, at 1:30 p. m. at the school, followed by formal opening of the garden. The scheduled program includes the coronation of a queen and king.

Botanical Garden Project Pride Of Kitzmiller Class

Over 300 Species Planted In Park

One of the most ambitious projects ever undertaken b ya public school in Maryland will reach a climax tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, when students, townspeople and visitors formally open the Kitzmiller School Botanical Garden and Park adjacent to the high school building.

Some time ago, under the direction of Melvin Brown, science teacher and other faculty members, the school's 135 students began the study of all types of native plant life. They prepared a mimographed book, containing more than 300 species of trees, flowers, plants and shrubs, and then decided they would like to attempt to grow them.

Lions Club Helps

Through the help of the Kitzmiller Lions Club, a three-acre tract of land was acquired adjacent to the school. The students, teachers and a few volunteers began clearing the land and preparing it as a park.

Copies of their books on the project were sent to the Forestry and Agriculture departments of each state and they requested specimens of trees, shrubs and flowers, native to those states. Many responded and the result has been the planting of several hundred.

In the meantime, the students, boys and girls, got busy with shovels rakes, wheelbarrows, hammers and axes, and have converted the old barren and brush grown plot into a beautiful park. Gravel paths wind about the area. A waterfall cascades gracefully down a hillside, where there was only a bog before; a number of large stone fireplaces have been built, benches, shelters and a bridge have been constructed with native stones and timbers to add to the natural beauty.

Permanent Undertaking

The project is a permanent undertaking and each class in the school has a section with flowers, trees and shrubs planted by them. Each specimen is properly marked with a neatly lettered plaque and credited to the class responsible.

The project has gained the encouragement of the townspeople, and organizations within the town, and the students are enthusiastic about it. Moreover, it has given them something constructive to do and has kept practically every youngster in the town fully occupied long hours every day.

The botanical garden, which is in itself a park, picnic grounds and community center, is a permanent contribution and one which will live and grow, long after those who started it are gone. It has proven to be a great outdoor classroom, a recreational project, a youth program, and an addition to the outdoor attractions of Western Maryland's natural beauty.

This type of project, which cost mostly hard work, initiative and imagination, could easily be duplicated in many communities in the area, and we predict it will attract wide attention in a very short time.

Plan Ball Game

Following the program in the school, the garden will be formally opened and dedicated and visited by the students and their guests. At 3:30 p. m. there will be a ball game, and beginning at 7:30 p. m. a social featuring orchestra music and other entertainment will conclude the day's activities.

Included in the Court of Honor for the Queen's processional are Sharon Davis, Clark Allan Sharpless, James Barrick, Darlene Phillips, Rita Martin and Joyce Sharpless, attendants.

Thomas Victor Baucon is principal of the school and has given his hearty support and endorsement to the garden project, which has been supervised by Melvin Brown, science teacher.

Tri-Towns Brief

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD
By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May (INS)—Elizabeth Taylor will have to tear herself away from Stanley Donen come summer.

Elizabeth Taylor

She is Dore Schary's choice to take the Deborah Kerr role in "Ivanhoe." Wasn't Elizabeth originally named for that part? Seems to me she was. Anyway, now that Deborah expects a baby and is out of the cast, Elizabeth is Robert Taylor's co-star.

This will be the second for Bob and Liz in England. I remember him telling me at the time they made "The Conspirators," that he was amazed at Liz' acting ability in so young a girl. He told me one minute she would be in an intense love scene and then the next minute she acted like a child. Well, a lot of water has gone under the bridge since then. Liz has been married and divorced.

Whatever else you may say about her, she's never been difficult with her studio, and now she's told to go to London you can bet all the tea in China she'll go.

Nice compliment for Glenn Ford: He's the only American actor (so far) to be invited to appear in "The Magic Box," a movie for the Festival of Britain, with such beloved favorites as Laurence Oliver, Robert Donat, John Mills and others. It's about the history of motion pictures—the title referring to the camera, of course.

Glenn, as you know, is in Europe making "The White Road" and while most of it is being filmed in Italy, he will arrange time off to accept the British honor.

Glenn cables that star "status" has nothing to do with appearances in the movie. Laurence Olivier is playing what amounts to a "bit" part—a London policeman.

Our own Betty Hutton proved herself a heroine at the May Day party given at the Brentwood Town and Country School.

Betty was there to watch her two little girls, Lindsay and Candy, in a play, along with the other mothers. Suddenly Betty looked across the aisle and the dress of one of the mother' at the school play was ablaze from a cigaret someone had thrown carelessly.

Without waiting for any men in the place to do anything, Betty rushed in and with her bare hands put out the fire, stamping it as she rubbed out the flames. She was given a round of applause. That was quick thinking on the part of Miss Hutton.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Hear from New York that Ethel Merman and her husband, Bob Levitt, have parted. But they have separated before and made up, so let's hope this is just one of those family quarrels.

Herbert Marshall was ready to go home from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, after coming through the operation beautifully, when he was stricken. Now his date of leaving the hospital is indefinite, although he is reported better.

Barbara Hutton is still very sick. When she is well enough she plans to go to Europe. At that time she will arrange for her divorce from Prince Igor Troubetzkoy. Right now she is too sick to think of anything but getting well.

An unusual foursome at Ciro's to hear Sophie Tucker was Lynn Bari and her ex-husband, Walter Kane, and Cookie Gordon with her ex, Mack Gordon. They were all together at one table.

Sophie continues to bring them in. Her last night, next Sunday, May 13, is really going to be a gala with all the great entertainment. Best part is the proceeds go to the Korean war wounded—and there is no better cause.

Mother Tongue, Mervyn Leroy's racing thoroughbred, became a mother on Kentucky Derby Day, so Merv is calling the cold Derby Day, hoping the name will be significant. Had dinner with him at La Rue. Ann Rutherford was with Bill Dozier.

J. Carroll Naish is entering his 20-year-old daughter, Elaine, in dramatic school. Elaine wants to become an actress and Papa is going to see that she has the right training.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Dear Jim I'm mad Curly

Is suicide a form of murder?

Answer: Certainly. In at least one language, German, it is called "self-murder" (Selbst-mord). A person does not kill himself because he is sad and discouraged, but because his sadness and discouragement have made him murderously angry and there is no one but himself on whom his fears or moral scruples will allow him to vent his rage. Suicide is most frequent in people who have been brought up under tyrannically strict discipline line and in whom frustration in adult life re-awakens the rage which in childhood they felt at their parents, but later "displaced" onto themselves.

May benzedrine create a "craving"?

Answer: As is true of other drugs, even including the narcotics, this will depend on how fundamentally well-balanced you are. In the Detroit State Medical Journal, Dr. F. A. Freyhan says that people whose moods do not interfere with their capacity for work feel no marked phychological effects from taking benzedrine. But people who suffer from moods of sluggishness and fatigue in which they "can't seem to get going" find that benzedrine makes them cheerful, energetic and productive, and may develop an unhealthy craving for it.

Are "spastics" feeble-minded?

Answer: Not always, by any means, says a joint bulletin of the U. S. Children's Bureau and Office of education. Washington, D.C. "Some of them are very bright," and "those who look and act worst sometimes are the brightest." What is now known as "cerebral palsy" is due to brain injury before, during or soon after birth and affects the victim's power to control some functions of his mind or body—most frequently certain types of muscular movements. It is not contagious or inheritable and in many cases can show marked improvement under proper medical and parental care.

Radio And Television

By Fred Allen

(John Crosby is in Europe on vacation. In his absence his column will be written by his friends. Today's column is by Fred Allen.)

TELEVISION is here to stay—and so is General MacArthur. In the beginning, God worked six days and created the Earth. Today, 1 director, 1 scenic designer, 8 writers, 4 painters, 6 carpenters, 5 wardrobe women, 4 cameramen, 4 assistants, 2 floor managers, 8 chorus girls, 10 actors, 6 electricians, 18 stagehands and 20 musicians work six days and create a mediocre television show.

•—•—•

In Chicago, during 1950, a crime was committed every 12½ minutes.

(Criminals on TV crime shows claim they could have beaten this record if they didn't have to stop for commercials.)

•—•—•

The Western Union Telegraph Company has formed a subsidiary to install and service television receivers.

(If you come home some night and see a messenger boy on your roof—there is no reason to stop drinking.)

•—•—•

The National Credit Office, Inc., reports that 70 per cent of consumer purchases of television receivers are on an installment basis.

(The size of a TV actor's audience has nothing to do with his ability—it is determined by the finance company's collections.)

•—•—•

To cover the recent demonstration for General MacArthur the various networks had more than 500 technicians and $2,500,000 worth of TV equiument in the streets.

(Many radio actors wish the networks would leave them there.)

•—•—•

The Supreme Court will shortly rule on whether the CBS or RCA system will be used for color television.

(Meantime, both TV networks will operate in one color—red.)

•—•—•

According to a survey, conducted by a Northwestern University professor, teen-age youths are reading less because of television.

(In most American homes the 20-inch screen is replacing the 5-foot shelf.)

•—•—•

The newspaper critic's scathing review of a TV show is hate's labor lost.

(The minute a program is finished the viewer at home forms his opinion of the actors and their wares. The critic's pernicious monograph, appearing in the paper the following morning, is too late to serve a purpose. It is merely the obituary of a departed charade.)

•—•—•

Television is keeping so many baseball fans away from one minor league park that the teams are only playing with seven men.

(The other two players sit in the stands so there will be somebody to watch the games.)

•—•—•

A Boston incident. Excited by something it saw on a television program, a Doberman-Pinscher bit his six-year-old master.

(It's logical—the dog couldn't turn the set off—it did the next best thing.)

•—•—•

A special committee of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters reports it will attempt to raise necklines in television.

(Faye Emerson is sure going to look incognito in a turtle-neck evening gown.)

•—•—•

One columnist wonders why most TV directors have those short haircuts.

(TV directors wear crew cuts to keep the actors from getting in their hair.)

•—•—•

There are so many college men working in television any office door can be opened with a fraternity key.

•—•—•

A Cleveland Transit System board member blames television for trolley line's deficit.

(Television may be going places but the people who are looking at it aren't.)

•—•—•

One TV survey outfit has a new electro-mechanical system that eliminates calling viewers by phone.

(Today there are so many surveys calling set owners that the set owners are starting to call the surveys—and what they are calling them threatens to reach a new high in sulphurous invective. Some of the phrases contain so much sulphur if they are rubbed on a hard surface the words will give off a dull blue flame.)

•—•—•

In South Bend a TV antenna fell across a 27,000-volt power line with some amazing results. Balls of fire bounced up and down on the roof with thunderous explosions; the telephone burned out; a glove lying in the yard burst into flames; the plumbing began throwing off sparks and pipes melted around the kitchen sink.

(The family was not alarmed. They thought it was the Ralph Edwards' TV show starting.)

•—•—•

A Jersey family living in a two-room converted chicken coop has a $750 television set with a large screen.

(A large screen is probably no novelty in a chicken coop.)

A mortician, in Indiana, has made a casket with a built-in TV set.

(It's for pallbearers who do not want to miss their favorite programs while they are at work.)

•—•—•

All radio and television actors are by-products of advertising. The actor who formerly had to worry about his public now only has to keep his sponsor happy.

•—•—•

The TV critic, who wouldn't think of going to an automobile plant and selecting one car rolling off the assembly line to criticize, will isolate one of a comedian's shows at random, lash it to his typewriter and pelt it to death with snide nouns, verbs, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions.

•—•—•

A small-time vaudeville agent is trying to cross a man with St. Vitus Dance, a waddling penguin and a large bird that flaps its wings. He hopes to produce a comedian who will win instant acclaim in television.

•—•—•

To save the trouble of explaining prehistoric monsters to your children, turn on the TV set and let them watch any wrestling match.

•—•—•

An adult who attends wrestling matches probably reads comic books for enlightenment.

•—•—•

Television may mean the end of civilization. If the medium developes, and TV shows improve, people will spend all of their time indoors sitting before their sets. Babies will be born, families will be raised, old folks will pass on without ever leaving their houses. Nobody will get out to buy the products advertised on television. Giant corporations will collapse. Nobody will work or pay taxes. Everybody will be home collecting unemployment insurance. The government will fall. If a foreign power lands on our shores unchallenged, marches through our empty streets and proclaims that it has conquered the nation, the people of our country will never know—they will all be sprawled around indoors watching Kukla, Fran and Ollie.

Court Awards Negro Youth Estate For Which He Murdered His Father

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals has awarded a $3,500 estate to a 15-year-old negro youth who murdered his father to obtain the property he knew was being willed to him.

Two wills were factors in the case, which came to the high court on appeal from Mecklenburg County Circuit Court.

One was the will of the father, Micajah Jiggetts, which left most of his estate to his only son, William H. Jiggetts. The youth confessed he shot his sleeping father in the head with a shotgun on December 3, 1948.

At his trial, the boy—then 13 years old—said he killed his father so he could inherit his estate when the elder Jiggetts refused to give him $5. The boy was sentenced to serve 36 years in a state reformatory.

The lower court held that young Jiggetts, under Virginia law, was not entitled to benefit from the will because of his conviction for murder.

But there was an earlier will—one made jointly by the father and his late wife, Estella Jiggetts, before their only child was born.

Among other things, this will said their jointly-held property on their deaths should pass to any children they might have.

After a careful analysis of the complicated sentence structure of the earlier will, the Supreme Court ruled it made the son the heir regardless of his disqualification under the second will.

The court therefore reversed the lower court and directed it to enter a decree holding young Jiggetts became owner of the property under provisions of the will in which his mother had a voice.

Approximately $3,500 realized by sale of the property involved now is deposited in a bank in Clarksville to be claimed by young Jiggetts when he becomes eligible for parole after serving one-fourth of his sentence.

WINNER of first place in a baby contest during homecoming week at the Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago, 13-month-old Danny Storzbach poses in his daddy's cap. His father is a CPO in the naval ROTC at Illinois Tech Institute. (International)

Sauer's Homer Enables Schultz To Beat Dodgers

Hank Sews Up Game In 1st Frame, 2-1

BROOKLYN, May 8 (AP) — One swipe by the home run bat of big Hank Sauer gave the Chicago Cubs enough runs for Bob Schultz today as the rookie lefty scattered nine Brooklyn hits for a 2-1 victory.

Hank Sauer

Sauer slammed a Carl Erskine pitch into the lower left field seats, a poke of some 360 feet, with Ramson Jackson on first base in the first inning. That was the ball game. It also was Sauer's fifth homer.

Schultz, a 27-year-old husky who knocked around the Chicago White Sox chain until last year, yielded the lone Brooklyn run in the sixth. Cal Abrams singled. After Pee Wee Reese flied out, Duke Snider forced Abrams. Jackie Robinson walked and Gil Hodges singled to left, scoring Snider.

Then came a sparkling catch by right fielder Frankie Baumholtz. Judging perfectly the flight of Carl Furillo's long high drive, he backed near the wall and jumped just at the right second. He came down clutching the ball in his glove hand. Box:

Wertz's Fluke Single In 11th Beats Yankees

Ducks Pitch, Ball Hits Bat, Wins Game, 6-5

DETROIT, May 8 (AP)—Vic Wertz tried to duck a pitched ball in the 11th inning but it struck his bat and bounced into left field for a game-winning single as the Detroit Tigers licked the league-leading New York Yankees, 6-5.

The fluke single handed rookie pitcher Ray Herbert his fourth straight victory as a relief pitcher without a defeat. Allie Reynolds, who went the distance, took his second loss against one victory.

New York's Hank Bauer, making his first start, belted two homers. Teammate Jackie Jensen smacked his fifth of the season.

Wertz whacked a two-run homer and drove in three runs to spark Detroit's 12-hit attack. Catcher Joe Ginsberg poled his third homer for the Tigers.

With one out in the eleventh Jerry Priddy singled to left. After Dick Kryhosky flied out, Priddy scooted to third on George Kell's single to right. Then Wertz followed with his fluke single, sending Priddy across the plate with the winning run. Box:

Feller Is Scalded, Inactive For Week

CLEVELAND, May 8 (AP)—A hose flew out of pitcher Bob Feller's hands today and threw scalding water on the lower half of his body.

Dr. Don A. Kelly, team physician, said the Cleveland Indians star suffered first and second degree burns on his torso and legs. The burns won't keep him sidelined more than a week, he said.

Feller had been working out at Municipal Stadium. The hose got away from him as he attempted to fill a whirlpool bath in the clubhouse.

Feller had been attempting to work out a muscular spasm in the small of his back. The spasm is "extremely painful," the cmb said and if anything will keep him out longer than the burns.

Business Men Go To Bat For B & O Plan

Will Urge Action On Thomas St. Project At Council Today

Because of its long range possibilities as well as immediate assistance toward the improvement of economic conditions in the area, a group of citizens will appear before the Mayor and City Council at 10:30 a. m. today to urge immediate action on a proposal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for expansion of its facility here.

Representatives of the South Cumberland Business Men's Association disclosed their displeasure last night with what they termed the delay and "stalling" action of the Mayor and City Council on this project.

Spokesmen for the organization said a delegation from their group, along with several other delegations, will urge the Council to proceed with the plan immediately.

Forerunner Of Expansion

A little more than a week ago, representatives of the railroad company appeared before an open meeting of the Council with a plan to relocate parts of Thomas Street, eliminate two dangerous curves and exchange land with the city, to provide more space for tracks.

The use of Diesels and other advancements which make longer trains possible has created a shortage of tracks in the yards here, it is explained, and the company has planned this project as the forerunner of other local expansions.

At that first Council meeting, action was deferred because one commissioner, George Tederick, was out of the city. However, at Monday night's meeting, with all members of the Council present, no final action on the proposal was taken.

Commissioner of Finance William H. Buchholtz made a motion that the plan be approved, but the motion was lost for want of a second.

The proposal of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to expand its tracks and possibly other local installations here has been an open secret for several months.

Numerous conferences were held with city and railroad officials, and the Mayor and City Council had full knowledge of the proposal months before it was discussed at open meeting.

Included City Requests

Spokesmen for the South End Business Men maintain that they have learned the Council objected to some proposals in the first agreement presented by the railroad company, but that the company prepared a second agreement, incorporating as far as feasible, all the requests of the city officials.

This agreement is the one on which action has been delayed.

It was also learned yesterday that the railroad company has purchased practically all the property along Thomas Street and vicinity needed for the improvement. One or two houses and properties remain to be negotiated for.

One of these particularly, assessed for less than $4,000, is an obstacle, the business men said. The railroad company has offered owners $10,000 for the property, plus the house and moving it to another location. However, it was learned that one city official showed considerable interest in this property, going so far as to send a personal appraiser to the porperty for a valuation.

May Speed Traffic

Under terms of the agreement as offered by the railroad, the City of Cumberland will get a modern improvement along Thomas Street without cost to the city, and will receive land which can be developed as a playground or small park. It will also enable the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to take the first step in a long-range program of expansion.

Some officials feel that the additional tracks in the Thomas Street area may help alleviate the traffic tie-ups resulting from blocked crossings uptown and, more especially at this particular time, will create some employment, as well as encourage other firms and industries to proceed with an expansion program.

The South End Business Men and other interested citizens said they will ask the Council today for specific reasons why the expansion is not desirable, and will ask for public statements as to why the agreement has not been signed and the project encouraged.

The local manager entered the insurance service as an agent in 1939 at Bellaire, Ohio, and was promoted to manager and transferred to Cumberland April 16, 1945. A veteran of World War II, McFarland served with the 29th Infantry Division in Germany and was wounded in action. Chemical Treatment Unit To Improve City Water Supply

Construction of a new chemical treatment unit at Lake Gordon to provide rigid quality control over Cumberland's water supply is nearing completion.

Cost of the project involving renovation of the old shop office building is estimated at about $12,000.

All work is being done by personnel of the Evitts Creek Water Company, according to George M. Hitchcock, superintendent.

The building will house four one-ton chlorine and two half-ton ammonia containers, equipment for dispensing alum by the weight system and soda ash, lime and black alum by the batch system.

The modern installation, Hitchcock said, will allow better control of the addition of chemicals by housing all equipment in one building.

Pre-chlorination of water, part of the new installation, will improve the taste of water by killing much of the algae before raw water reaches the filter beds.

Hitchcock said two large motorized rafts have been built to house equipment for broadcasting copper sulphate on the beaches of Lake Koon and Lake Gordon.

The chemical, he added, will materially reduce the growth of algae along the shore line.

In addition to the pre-chlorination treatment, sufficient chlorine will be added between the filters and the clear well to maintain the five parts of chlorine to a million parts of water required by the Boards of Health of Maryland and Pennsylvania, he explained.

Officials said about seven tests must be taken each day to maintain chemical controls of the water system.

Plane Wreckage Found; Pilot Is Dead, One Hurt

SOMERSET, Pa., May 8 (AP) — Surveyors found the wreckage of a small cabin plane atop the Allegheny Mountain near the Pennsylvania Turnpike today with the pilot dead and an occupant in critical condition.

The survivor identified himself as Richard G. Adair, 23, of Danville, Ill. Suffering from exposure and two broken legs, he told rescuers the plane crashed into the mountain side last Saturday.

Adair identified the dead pilot as George Seymour, also of Danville, Ill. He said they were en route from Columbus, Ohio, to Baltimore. Adair is also known as Ike Thornsborough, a son of M. Rose Thornsborough, Danville.

State police said they apparently became lost in a fog while following the turnpike eastward.

Surveyors located the dead pilot and the injured man during a timber survey. Adair heard the surveyors calling to each other and yelled for help.

"It all happened so fast. We crashed into the trees and then into the mountain side."

He said he crawled about 150 yards from the wreckage.

"I kept hearing the roar of trucks and autos from all sides of the mountain," said Adair, "but couldn't reach any vantage point to yell for help."

Scout Executive To Visit Local Units Next Week

James H. Gelwicks, deputy regional executive for Region Three, Boy Scouts of America, Philadelphia, will spend the week of May 14 in Potomac Council district on organizational work, Dr. E. E. Church, Keyser, council president, announced.

The schedule for the week includes evening meetings in Mountain District, Frostburg, Monday, May 14; Cumberland, Tuesday, May 15; Tri-Towns, Westernport, Wednesday, May 16; New Creek District, Keyser, Thursday, May 17; and South Branch District, Moorefield, Friday, May 18.

Gelwicks will be guest speaker at a number of service club meetings throughout the council during the week, President Church said. He also will conduct training courses for Den Mothers in the afternoons.

The scout executive has had long and varied experience in Scouting, serving as scout and scoutmaster for 20 years. He became assistant scout executive at Sandusky, Ohio and served as scout executive at Richmond, Ind., and Madison, Wisc., before becoming regional deputy of Region Eight at Kansas City. Prior to joining Region Three staff he was director of training for the St. Louis, Mo., scout council.

The regular executive meeting of the local council normally scheduled for last night has been postponed until next Tuesday to combine with Gelwicks' visit, Church said.

Body Of Premature Child Found Along River Bank

An investigation by Donald C. Hott, Mineral County State's Attorney, is being conducted in the finding of a five-month-old female fetus yesterday evening along the Potomac River bank in Piedmont, W. Va.

The premature child was found about 6:55 p. m. along the bank near the American Steam Laundry between Ashfield Street and the old C&P Railroad tracks.

Delmar Kimble and his brother Donny, of Piedmont, were playing near the river's edge and stumbled over a paper sack containing the body. They told other playmates who notified Officer E. R. Saville, Piedmont Police Department, who in turn called the state's attorney, at Keyser.

The body was taken to Fredlock Funeral Home and a physician summoned to examine it. The physician said it was between five and six months old and had been dead from 24 to 48 hours.

Surveys Made To Provide Data For Future City Improvements

Local Magistrates Handle 21 Motor Vehicle Cases

Cumberland's two new Trial Magistrates, J. Milton Dick and William J. Gunter, who took office for the first time this week, tried 21 motor vehicle cases the first day on the bench, court attaches said yesterday.

Dick, who assumed his duties one day prior to Gunter, handled 19 of the cases Monday, including one drunken driving charge and two overloading violations. Gunter handled two of the cases including a drunken driving violation.

Coincidently the two drunken driving charges were the first on the docket of each Trial Magistrate, court officials noted.

City Engineers Set Up Plans In April

Groundwork for future improvements in the city were provided by surveys made during April by the City Engineering Department.

The work included surveys for proposed improvements on New Hampshire Avenue, Maple Street, Massachusetts Avenue and Grant Street.

A line and grade was worked out for curbs and sidewalks at the C. and P. Telephone warehouse on Elder Street.

A line and grade was established for curbs and sidewalks on Oldtown Road and for the extension of First Street from South Street, eastward.

Surveys included the proposed widening of Pershing Street at the post office building and for a proposed sewer in the vicinity of Frederick Street extended.

The Street Cleaning Department had a busy month, reporting the cleaning of 844 paved streets and 85 paved alleys.

Other crews cleaned 364 of the city's catch basins and five manholes.

SRC To Request Conference Here On Bridge Job

Several Agencies To Attend Meeting

The State Roads Commission of Maryland will arrange a meeting here in the near future to discuss plans for the proposed relocation of Blue Bridge.

In a letter to Mayor Thomas S. Post, Russell H. McCain, SRC chairman, said the proposal has been referred to the department's engineering department with the request that a meeting be arranged in Cumberland, to be attended by representatives of various participating agencies.

McCain added that the SRC will try to arrange the conference as soon as possible.

Considerable discussions have been held with the Maryland State Roads Commission, the West Virginia State Roads Commission and the Corps of Engineers on the plan.

At present, an Army Engineers survey crew is working in Cumberland, securing data which would be needed in the relocation of the dam across the Potomac here and the subsequent changes in the Blue Bridge. The crew will also compile data for channel work.

This work was slated for the fourth phase of the Cumberland-Ridgeley Flood Control Project.

The relocation of the dam would require raising the present bridge several feet and the plan under consideration calls for the use of the dam as the substructure of a new modern bridge across the Potomac here.

The final phases of the flood control project would include the removal of the present dam, construction of a new dam and channel and levee work.

Resident Being Held On Entering Attempt

Ralph Leo Whorton Jr., 941 Gay Street, is being held in city jail pending a hearing at the State's Attorney's Office on a charge of an attempt to break into the Cumberland Motor Express Company Monday night to steal whisky. Another suspect is being sought by the police.

Patrolman Joseph H. Stitcher said the entry attempt was reported to him at 11:45 p. m. He and Patrolman C. W. Thompson split up to canvass the area and later Stitcher saw Whorton running across Third Street.

After Whorton climbed a fence and continued to flee, Officer Stitcher called out a halt warning before he fired a shot. Shortly afterwards the patrolman saw the youth near Springdale and Third Streets and told him to stop. Whorton obeyed the order.

Meanwhile, Officer Thompson was occupied pursuing the other suspect. He also fired a shot which ricocheted through a window. No one was hurt.

Tulsa Concert Is Last Program For This Season

Tonight's Event At Fort Hill High

Tonight's concert by the University of Tulsa Radio-Concert Chorus, Tulsa, Okla., in the Fort Hill High School auditorium at 8:30 o'clock will be the ninth and last program sponsored by the Cumberland Choral Society for the current season.

Jack Platt, who directs the Cumberland Choral Society, yesterday recalled the previous eight programs that have been presented since last fall.

In the fall, the society's members sang Elijah and the Messiah. Then, in January, Virgil Fox, nationally-famed organist, presented a concert in the Centre Street Methodist Church.

Cornelia Stabler, monologist, was here in February and Claudia Pinza sang a program in March. The society also presented an all-Gershwin program, a Palm Sunday concert and another concert in Westernport.

The chorus which will appear here tonight is considered one of the outstanding musical units of its kind in the country. Only Sunday, the singers presented a broadcast from New York City.

Director of the chorus is Arthur D. Hestwood, a former member of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. Hestwood is director of choral music in the College of Fine Arts at the University of Tulsa. His chorus sings much in the pattern of Waring's aggregation.

The chorus, which numbers 20 girls and 21 boys, sings a repertoire that includes classical, sacred, popular and novelty selections.

Today is the second of three days that the UT group is appearing in the Tri-State area. Last night, Hestwood's singers were at the Bedford (Pa.) High School. Tomorrow they will entertain student bodies at Allegany High School, Beall High School and Frostburg State Teachers College.

No admission will be charged at tonight's concert but an offering will be collected.

$25,000 Suit Is Settled

A $25,000 damage suit by a Cumberland man for the loss of the sight of his left eye has been settled out of Garrett County Circuit Court, where it had been docketed for trial yesterday.

Edward J. Ryan, attorney for Sensabaugh, said that the settlement was "very substantial," but declined to mention a specific figure. The settlement was reached Monday afternoon.

Defendant in the suit was the Union Fire Brick Company which is located at Jennings in Garrett County.

Sensabaugh, while working as a driver for the G. C. Sensabaugh, Inc., firm here, delivered machinery by truck to the Union Fire Brick Company. While an employe of the Union Fire Brick Company was unloading the machinery he struck Sensabaugh in the left eye, causing the loss of sight, Ryan said. This occurred March 22, 1949.

The suit was filed in Garrett County Circuit Court by Sensabaugh and the National Surety Company, which had paid compensation to the injured.

The Union Fire Brick Company was represented by Attorney W. Earle Cobey.

The suits were consolidated for a single trial Monday. The brothers were represented by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and Walter W. Dawson. Plummer, who now operates a movie projector in a Frostburg theater, was represented by Attorneys W. Earle Cobey and E. Ray Jones.

Bowley Child Is Drowned Near Franklin

Three-Year-Old Boy Falls Into Georges Creek Near His Home

William Michael Bowley, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bowley, Brophytown, Franklin, Md. drowned yesterday afternoon in George's Creek about one-half mile from his home. The body was recovered by James Ray and "Bobby" Jones, Franklin, at 4:15 p. m.

Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, said last night that death was caused by accidental drowning.

The child, who would have been three on July 10, was last seen with playmates around noon. He had gone from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Wilson T. Keller, with whom he resided for the past month, to play with his cousins.

The child was fascinated by buses, according to neighbors, and since children daily cross the bridge to catch their school bus, it is believed the child wandered across the bridge to the bus stop. Neighbors presume the child fell into the water while crossing to the other side.

Since the child had a liking for buses it is presumed he wandered near the creek and fell from a swinging bridge into the water.

The child's grandmother became alarmed when he did not return home and notified Westernport firemen and police at 3:30 p. m. An extensive search by Rev. G. Stanley Schwind, district committeeman of Boy Scouts, Harold Raines, scoutmaster at Franklin and a party of 25 scouts was organized.

At 4:15 p. m. the child's body was found in about a foot of water lying on its back, lodged against a crate, with several bruise marks about the face. The creek at the point is about 40 feet wide.

The resuscitator of the Luke plant of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company was sent for, but it was of no avail. Dr. James H. Wolverton, Jr., pronounced the child dead. Trooper Timothy M. Gilmore, Maryland State Police, Deputy Sheriff Edgar M. Lewis, and Westernport Police investigated.

Besides its parents, the child is survived by one brother, Edward Paul Bowley, ten-months old. The mother is the former Betty Keller. The father is a World War II veteran and served in the U. S. Navy. He is now employed as a civilian worker at the Naval Ordnance, Washington, D. C. His wife and two children had been residing at the home of the grandmother for the past month.

The body is at Boal's Funeral Home, Westernport.
